Prison pleasures for swindlers

Rose Bowl among 'liberties' at Terminal Island prison

By Mary Neiswender
Staff Writer

At least four of the nation's top big-time swindlers — including the mastermind behind the giant Equity Funding fraud — have been allowed to travel unescorted out of the Terminal Island Federal Prison in apparent violation of federal policy, the Independent Press-Telegram has learned.

Two of them currently are out of prison — on business or pleasure.

Two were taken to the Rose Parade in Pasadena and had 50-yard-line seats at the Rose Bowl game on New Year's Day.

Prison officials deny there is any violation of policy.

However, sources in the prison said that both Stanley Goldblum, co-founder and president of Equity Funding Corp., and Samuel B. Lowell, former executive vice president of the now bankrupt conglomerate, have been allowed out on furloughs in direct violation of stated federal policy.

According to the prison's latest policy statement regarding inmate furloughs, they are allowed only to:

—Inmates who are within six months of release, or have served at least half of their time to a firm or possible release date.

—Those not identified with large-scale criminal activity.

—Those whose presence in the community would not attract undue public attention.

—Inmates who do not have outstanding detainees or pending charges.

And the former Equity officials don't qualify.

—Goldblum has served less than two years of an eight-year sentence; Lowell has served less than two years of a five-year sentence.

—Their large-scale criminal activity, in monetary terms, amounted to $2 billion — the largest corporate fraud in U.S. business history.

—Their presence in the community would probably alienate thousands of Equity investors who lost the money.

—Goldblum is wanted in New Jersey when he finishes his sentence in California.

The 51-year-old Goldblum — who walked out of prison Friday morning on his latest "leave" — began his eight-year prison sentence in May 1975 at McNeil Island, Wash., and was transferred from the maximum security prison last year. He has been allowed furloughs since shortly after his arrival, sources indicated.

Goldblum masterminded what is believed to be the biggest corporate fraud in history. However, he managed to escape the fate of thousands of his investors and ended up with $4.7 million by selling his stock in the company while directing other officers to doctor the firm's financial statements.

Initially charged with 43 counts of fraud and conspiracy, he was earning $125,000 a year and had a $36,000-a-year expense account at the time the Century City conglomerate went bankrupt in April of 1973. It was one of the largest securities and life insurance firms in the United States at the time.

In addition to his prison term in California, he pleaded guilty to forgery in Illinois and was sentenced to from three to 10 years in that state's prison. He was prosecuted in Illinois, the attorney general of the state told newsmen at the time, because authorities were "unhappy" with the light prison sentences handed down in Los Angeles.

Meanwhile, New Jersey authorities, at the time of his sentence in California, said they would imprison him in New Jersey when and if he is paroled from federal prison.

Lowell was sentenced to five years in prison despite his plea that his role in the fraud had "destroyed my mental health."

In addition to the furloughs granted, prison sources claim Goldblum was also allowed to withdraw $800 from his special prison account for use on one of the furloughs. To other prisoners, the source said, $25 is the maximum.

Another financier-turned-swindler, John Halverson, former president of the U.S. Financial, Inc., also has been allowed out of the prison — both on trips and furloughs. He currently is out of prison on an unescorted trip to San Diego.

Halverson was sentenced to seven years in prison for conspiracy and securities fraud in connection with the collapse of the San Diego-based real estate firm. He was also sentenced to another seven years in jail — to be served concurrently — for mail fraud and lying to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

In all, Halverson was charged with almost 100 counts from fraud to perjury. However, a second federal judge reduced his sentence to four years. He is appealing.

Meanwhile, the 40-year-old former executive began serving his reduced sentence less than a year ago and was allowed a two-week furlough from the prison to attend a Bible study seminar in Washington conducted by former Watergate conspirator-turned-Christian Charles Colson.

Halverson, joined by his wife, was in Washington with another Calif. drought? Not in flooded Salton Sea area

By John Sheehan
Staff Writer

NILAND — While California continues to suffer the worst drought in state history, this popular recreation spot in Imperial County is drowning in a sea of water.

Farmers here have more water than they know how to use, and it keeps on coming, devastating homes, businesses and entire communities.

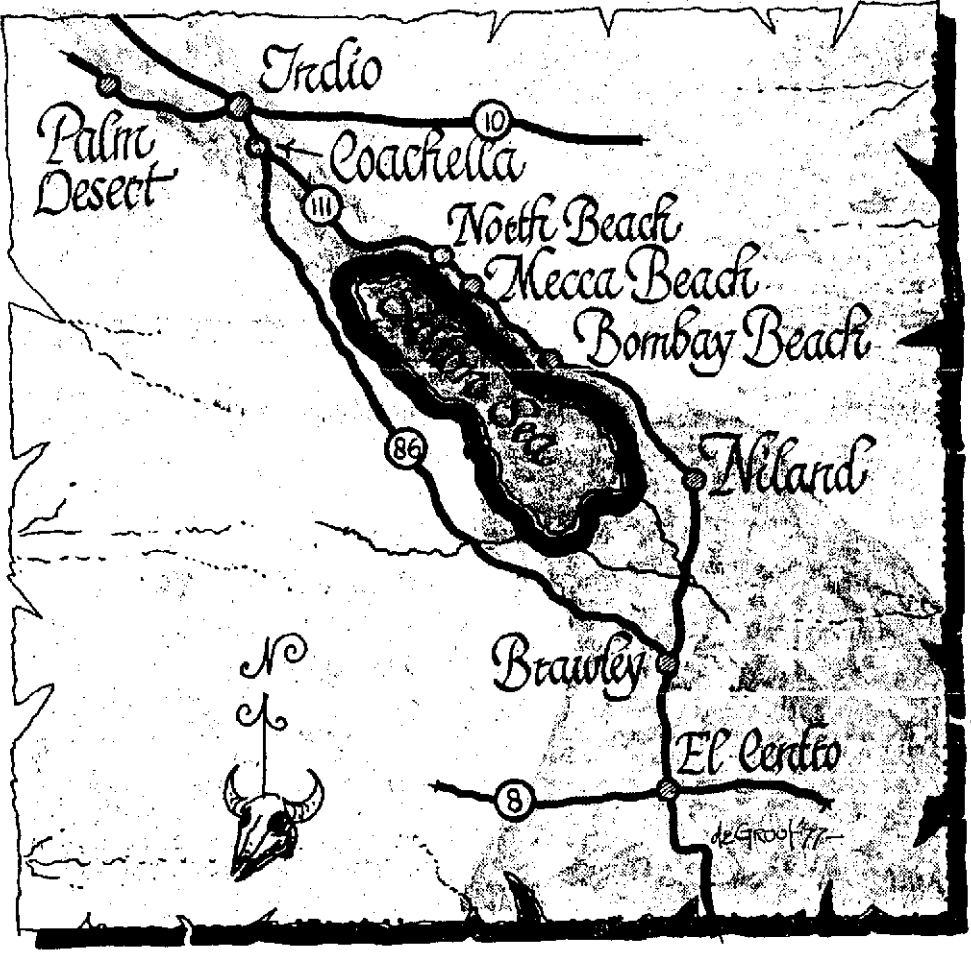

The Salton Sea is rising to dangerous levels; yet the same farmers who have caused the dilemma flaunt a cavalier attitude about its impact.

There's no drought for them, they'll tell you.

The level of the Salton Sea, located about 150 miles southeast of Long Beach, is the highest since 1914. In the last three years it has caused hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of damage to once-popular recreation and residential sites.

Flood damage has destroyed the only boat launching ramp and half the campsites at the State Parks and Recreation Department's facility on the north end of the Salton Sea and many more state-owned campsites a mile south.

Rights violators revealed Hundreds stranded

All 82 nations get U.S. aid

By Bernard Gwertzman
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The State Department, in a report made public Saturday, has informed Congress that with the exception of Western Europe and a few other countries, human rights are violated in varying degrees by the 82 countries that receive American security assistance.

The 82 individual reports were filed by the department with the Senate and House two weeks ago and were made public Saturday by the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on foreign assistance.

The delay in release has been sought by the State Department to give it time to provide each foreign government with its own country's report.

The reports on human rights in countries receiving security assistance are mandated under a new law passed last year over opposition of former President Ford's administration.

The Ford administration, and in particular former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, feared that the reports would be seen as interference in each country's internal affairs and lead to unneeded foreign policy problems.

The first major repercussion has been the reaction of Brazil's government, which, after receiving its confidential copy of the human rights report, formally declined any further military aid from the United States and Friday announced abrogation of the 25-year-old military assistance pact with the United States.

Even though the report caused the Brazilian government to react strongly, the actual study, as made public Saturday, avoided harsh language on the Brazilian situation. It noted, for example, that "some infringements by the government upon the right to life, liberty and security of the person continue to be reported."

Overall there were few surprises among the 82 reports, since such private groups as Amnesty International have regularly issued detailed studies on human rights violations abroad that include considerably more detail and are much sharper in their comments than the State Department reports.

In ordering the studies, Congress said it is against the policy of the United States to provide security assistance to governments that engage in "a consistent pattern of gross violations of internationally recognized human rights," except in extraordinary circumstances.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance has already told Congress that of the 82 recipients, only three were having their aid reduced because of human rights violations: Argentina, Uruguay and Ethiopia. Since that statement, Argentina and Uruguay have informed the United States they want no aid at all.

The reports list alleged human rights violations in South Korea and the Philippines, countries that Vance has said will continue to receive aid because of their security importance.

The South Korean report, as do many others, treats the situation in the calmest possible terms.

It said, talking of the current emergency laws, that "the Korean government has employed restrictive legal measures which limit some of the rights listed in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights."

The report was relatively harsh on Yugoslavia, the only Communist state included as an aid recipient. It said that "compared with that of the Western democracies, the Yugoslav record on human rights is weak." It declared:

"The Yugoslav government consistently violates certain rights, particularly those pertaining to critical political expression. It is not a significant offender with respect to forcible violations of the person, and it has a good record on freedom of travel and emigration."

The comments on Israel were also critical to a degree that will

Hundreds stranded in Midwest blizzard

Associated Press

Hundreds of weekend travelers were stranded in the Midwest and the western Plains as winds gusting up to 100 miles an hour pushed snow into drifts up to 30 feet high and reduced visibility to near zero on roadways that remained open.

At least five weather-related deaths were reported in Colorado, one in Kansas and one in Nebraska.

Five telephone company employees and two farmers, earlier listed as missing in Kansas, were reported safe at their homes by Saturday evening.

Three persons died when their car overturned on a snow-covered highway in Colorado, and the bodies of two men were found in a wrecker stranded near Colorado Springs.

The Kansas Highway Patrol said 40 people were taken by snowmobile into Goodland from snowbound Edson, about six miles away, and one person was dead. No further details were available.

The body of a man was found in a stranded pickup truck near Ogallala, Neb., Saturday. The Keith County Sheriff's Office said the man apparently died of asphyxiation or exposure. The ignition of the pickup truck was turned on, but the gas tank was empty.

About 20 other persons were rescued in the Ogallala area after being trapped in their vehicles for as long as 28 hours. One person was hospitalized for exposure and carbon monoxide poisoning, and four others were hospitalized for other storm-related injuries. All were listed in good condition.

National Weather Service employees at the Goodland, Kan., airport office said they had been trapped in their office since Friday, and Kansas Gov. Robert F. Bennett was stranded in Hays during a fact-finding

A schoolgirl was cut by flying glass when high winds shattered three 4-by-9-foot windows at a Fort Morgan, Colo., high school.

Near McCook, Neb., Amtrak's westbound San Francisco Zephyr from Chicago was stalled for more than 24 hours, forcing 139 passengers to trudge through 10 inches of snow to reach local cafes to wait out the blizzard.

"I don't think people realize how bad this storm is," said farmer Randy Bruns of Chappell, Neb. He said the winds were beginning to subside late Saturday, but most farms had been without power and heat since the storm first hit on Thursday night.

Rights violators revealed

People in the news Director Polanski charged with rape

Combined News Services
Film director Roman Polanski, whose wife was murdered seven years ago by the Charles Manson family, was free on $2,500 bond Saturday after being accused of forcibly raping a 13-year-old girl.
The 43-year-old Polanski, who directed "Chinatown," "Rosemary's Baby" and "Repulsion," could face up to 50 years in prison if convicted.
He was arrested Friday at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel after the girl's mother filed a complaint, police said.

In the complaint, Polanski was accused of picking up the girl at her home Thursday afternoon for a photographic session at the West Los Angeles home of actor Jack Nicholson.
Cmdr. Pete Hagan, a police spokesman, said Saturday that the filmmaker allegedly took the teenager "out to the (Nicholson) house where there was a group of adults and he said, 'Let's leave here,' and then they drove about a half-mile away to another house where he raped her and abused her in other ways. Then he took her home."
According to the complaint, Polanski gave the girl the prescription drug Quaalude.
The owner of the home where the illegal acts allegedly took place, about a half mile from Nicholson's house, was not immediately known, Hagan said.
The police spokesman said the photo sessions were arranged after a mutual friend told Polanski the teen-ager wished to pose for pictures in a French juvenile magazine.

Polanski visited the girl's house on Feb. 13 and arranged for a photo session a week later, the commander said. On Feb. 20, photographs were taken and he "enticed her to take off her blouse on that occasion," Hagan said.
The girl's mother had given permission for the photographic sessions, said Hagan, but with the understanding that her daughter would pose "fully clothed."
When Polanski returned the girl to her home Thursday, Hagan said, he showed the mother a picture he had taken during the Feb. 20 session. Later that day, said Hagan, an older sister of the victim overheard the teen-ager describing the incident at the house to a friend over the telephone. The older sister told the mother who confronted the daughter and later filed a police complaint, the commander said.
Police officers went to the Nicholson home Friday with a search warrant to gather additional evidence. While there, they arrested Angelica Huston, 26, daughter of movie director John Huston, on a charge of possessing cocaine. Miss Huston, Nicholson's longtime companion, was freed on $1,500 bond.

Hagan stressed that Nicholson apparently had no involvement in the alleged rape, noting that the actor, who starred in Polanski's "Chinatown," was out of town Thursday. He said there was nothing to lead them to believe that Miss Huston was involved either.
Polanski's arraignment was scheduled for Friday in West Los Angeles Municipal Court. Hagan said the director would face charges of "forcible rape, oral copulation, sodomy and feeding narcotics to a juvenile," although he was booked Friday only on the rape charge.
In 1969, Polanski's wife, actress Sharon Tate, was one of five persons murdered in Polanski's Hollywood home by Manson and his followers while Polanski was in London. Miss Tate was pregnant.
Born in Paris, Polanski grew up in Poland, where he made his first films, the award-winning "Two Men and a Cradle" and "Knife in the Water."

'Unplugging' kills

A 37-year-old man died Saturday in Jacksonville, Fla., when his life-support system was disconnected.
James P. McSheffrey stopped breathing Feb. 18 during an operation on his gums. He lapsed into a deep coma, and by Feb. 22, there was no recordable brain activity. His wife, Kathleen, sought a court ruling on whether her husband was legally dead.
Circuit Judge Clifford Shepard ruled Friday that McSheffrey was legally dead. He ordered doctors "to issue a death certificate and to carry out such other actions as are necessary and proper, including discontinuation of the extraordinary medical support systems."
The judge's ruling was carried out Saturday.

Radio's Sade dies

Bernardine Doherty, whose role as Sade in the "Vic and Sade" series endeared her to early radio listeners, has died at a hospital in Olney, Ill.
Mrs. Doherty, widow of Dr. Chester C. Doherty, associate professor of medicine at Northwestern University Medical School, died Thursday of an internal ailment. Her age was not announced.
A native of Madison, Wis., Mrs. Doherty studied drama at the University of Wisconsin and later appeared in several Broadway hits.
She worked for the National Broadcasting Co. in Chicago.
"Vic and Sade" ran from 1932 to 1945 on the national network and won fame for its humorous depiction of a small-town Midwestern family.

Mrs. Trudeau

Did she, or didn't she, go to dinner?

Margaret Trudeau, Canada's 28-year-old first lady, returned home Saturday from a controversial visit to New York where she said she was unhappy with her role as a political wife.
But a government spokesman refused to say whether she attended a private dinner for British Prime Minister James Callaghan and his wife Saturday night.
Mrs. Trudeau, who has a known dislike for formal functions, was quoted by the Toronto Star as saying she was not planning to attend the dinner at Trudeau's country cottage.
A smiling Mrs. Trudeau arrived with an unidentified blonde woman companion at Ottawa airport. They were given a police escort and traveled in a limousine sent by her husband to the prime minister's official residence.
While in New York, Mrs. Trudeau stayed with a friend, Princess Yasmin Khan, in Manhattan. Before leaving, she heatedly denied any romantic links with Mick Jagger or other members of the Rolling Stones rock group.

Spiro T. Agnew

A lawyer has filed suit in federal appeals court in Baltimore seeking to delay a hearing scheduled Monday concerning revocation of former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's probation.
The hearing was scheduled by U.S. District Judge Roszel C. Thomsen after a Justice Department report said Agnew appeared to have violated a federal law.
Agnew was placed on three years probation and fined $10,000 after he resigned as vice president and pleaded no contest to one count of tax evasion in 1973.
Thomsen requested the report after Miami lawyer Sam Polur filed a $1-million civil suit against Agnew saying he failed until April 1974 to surrender gifts given by officials of foreign governments.

The mayor loses

Auburn, N.Y. Mayor Paul Lattimore decided to play policeman and ended up in a hair-raising chase. But he didn't get his man.
Lattimore was at a red light Friday night in downtown Auburn when another car pulled up and then screeched away. The mayor took off in pursuit. "I was concerned that the driver may have stolen the car or committed some other crime," Lattimore explained.
He said the chase covered about 13 miles at speeds of up to 105 miles per hour.
Far from getting a pat on the back, Lattimore was criticized by the police. "The mayor's just a private citizen like you," said one officer. "He's got no right to chase someone like that. He should let us do the chasing."

New China premier

HONG KONG — A Hong Kong newspaper reported Saturday that wall posters have appeared in Canton announcing the appointment of Teng Hsiao-ping, the former deputy premier, as a deputy chairman of the Chinese Communist Party and premier.
Teng 73, was dismissed from the post of deputy premier as a so-called rightist on April 7, 1976, after 100,000 people held a day-long demonstration in Peking to honor the late Premier Chou En-lai. Since then, four senior "radical" members of the Communist Party Politburo, including Chiang Ching, Chairman Mao Tse-tung's widow, have been blamed for precipitating that incident. The first anniversary of the incident next month is expected to be marked by some form of major recognition.

Swiss migrant ballot

GENEVA — For the third time since 1970, the Swiss are being called to the ballot box to decide whether they should let some of the foreigners who live and work here to get out. The voting today is on a proposal supported by small right-wing groups and opposed by the nation's establishment.
Voters also are being asked to decide if they want to limit the number of foreigners granted Swiss citizenship and on a proposed law giving voters the right to revoke treaties entered into by their government.

Zaire claims victory

KINSHASA, Zaire — Zaire radio said Saturday government troops were "crushing the invading forces" that crossed from Angola last week and occupied three towns in copper-rich Shaba Province. A U.S. Embassy spokesman in Kinshasa said the government had issued reports of scattered fighting but nothing very firm.
There were no reports that the invaders, apparently guerrillas returning to their home province from exile, had been forced out of the three towns they held: Kapanga, Dilolo and Kisengi, all within 100 to 150 miles of the southern border with Angola.
No casualties were reported by any sources, government or private, and some 25 Americans in the invasion area were all said by the U.S. Embassy to be safe.

Purge in Ethiopia

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — The military government announced Saturday the People's militia had killed 268 "counter-revolutionaries" and wounded 132 others in a week-long battle with rightists in northwestern Ethiopia.
The announcement confirmed reports of widespread disorders in Ethiopia, ruled by radical military officers who ousted the late Emperor Haile Selassie in 1974.

No rail fraud case

PHILADELPHIA — A federal judge has dismissed for lack of evidence all charges against two former top Penn Central Transportation Co. officials accused of siphoning $4 million from the now-defunct railroad. David C. Bevan, 70, and William R. Gerstenecker, 64, had been charged with moving the funds in 1969 to a corporation in Europe controlled by the late German financier Fidel Gutz.

Advice for GOP

WASHINGTON — William Brock, chairman of the Republican National Committee for two months, posed a troubling question to two dozen leaders of his party Saturday:
"What do you do with a party that has been sorely wounded?"
The answer, Brock said, is to run an austere but well-targeted campaign against vulnerable Democrats holding both state and national office.
For all the generally expressed skepticism about survival of the GOP, Republican Executive Committee members meeting Saturday appeared optimistic about their chances of winning elections at the local, state and congressional level over the next few years.
But before the minority party can make a comeback in the White House or elsewhere, House Republican leader Rep. John Rhodes of Arizona said, it must come up with specific policy alternatives to the administration of Jimmy Carter.

Massacre rumored

WASHINGTON — A report circulating on Capitol Hill says that Indonesia may have committed "the most serious case of contravention of human rights facing the world at this time" in the alleged killing of thousands of civilians in East Timor over the past year.
As a result of that report and other information, Rep. Donald M. Fraser, D-Minn., announced Saturday night that his House International Relations subcommittee would hold hearings beginning on March 23.
The western half of Timor, an island north of Australia, has been part of Indonesia since 1949. When Portugal withdrew from East Timor in 1975, a civil war broke out between leftists seeking independence; pro-Indonesia troops intervened and are believed to have effectively crushed the so-called Fretilin movement. Last July East Timor was incorporated into Indonesia. There have been reports in the Australian parliament that as many as 100,000 of East Timor's total population of 600,000 may have been killed by the Indonesians.

Man junta which has ruled Chile since 1973

The ban came the day after the junta broadened and extended for another six months the "state of siege" which empowers it to hold prisoners without charge or court order.
The new ban prohibits "the existence, organization, activities and propaganda" of the various non-Marxist parties and says anyone who violates the ban can be fined, imprisoned or exiled.

People in the news Director Polanski charged with rape

Combined News Services

Film director Roman Polanski, whose wife was murdered seven years ago by the Charles Manson family, was free on $2,500 bond Saturday after being accused of forcibly raping a 13-year-old girl.

The 43-year-old Polanski, who directed "Chinatown," "Rosemary's Baby" and "Repulsion," could face up to 50 years in prison if convicted.

He was arrested Friday at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel after the girl's mother filed a complaint, police said.

In the complaint, Polanski was accused of picking up the girl at her home Thursday afternoon for a photographic session at the West Los Angeles home of actor Jack Nicholson.

Cmdr. Pete Hagan, a police spokesman, said Saturday that the filmmaker allegedly took the teen-ager "out to the (Nicholson) house where there was a group of adults and he said, 'Let's leave here,' and then they drove about a half-mile away to another house where he raped her and abused her in other ways. Then he took her home."

According to the complaint, Polanski gave the girl the prescription drug Quaalude.

The owner of the home where the illegal acts allegedly took place, about a half mile from Nicholson's house, was not immediately known, Hagan said.

The police spokesman said the photo sessions were arranged after a mutual friend told Polanski the teen-ager wished to pose for pictures in a French juvenile magazine.

Polanski visited the girl's house on Feb. 13 and arranged for a photo session a week later, the commander said. On Feb. 20, photographs were taken and he "enticed her to take off her blouse on that occasion," Hagan said.

The girl's mother had given permission for the photographic sessions, said Hagan, but with the understanding that her daughter would pose "fully clothed."

When Polanski returned the girl to her home Thursday, Hagan said, he showed the mother a picture he had taken during the Feb. 20 session. Later that day, said Hagan, an older sister of the victim overheard the teen-ager describing the incident at the house to a friend over the telephone. The older sister told the mother who confronted the daughter and later filed a police complaint, the commander said.

Police officers went to the Nicholson home Friday with a search warrant to gather additional evidence. While there, they arrested Angelica Huston, 26, daughter of movie director John Huston, on a charge of possessing cocaine. Miss Huston, Nicholson's longtime companion, was freed on $1,500 bond.

Hagan stressed that Nicholson apparently had no involvement in the alleged rape, noting that the actor, who starred in Polanski's "Chinatown," was out of town Thursday. He said there was nothing to lead them to believe that Miss Huston was involved either.

Polanski's arraignment was scheduled for Friday in West Los Angeles Municipal Court. Hagan said the director would face charges of "forcible rape, oral copulation, sodomy and feeding narcotics to a juvenile," although he was booked Friday only on the rape charge.

In 1969, Polanski's wife, actress Sharon Tate, was one of five persons murdered in Polanski's Hollywood home by Manson and his followers while Polanski was in London. Miss Tate was pregnant.

Born in Paris, Polanski grew up in Poland, where he made his first films, the award-winning "Two Men and a Cradle" and "Knife in the Water."

ROMAN POLANSKI, shown here in a 1970 photograph, has been charged with forcible rape and other offenses involving a 13-year-old girl.

'Unplugging' kills

A 37-year-old man died Saturday in Jacksonville, Fla., when his life-support system was disconnected.

James P. McSheffrey stopped breathing Feb. 18 during an operation on his gums. He lapsed into a deep coma, and by Feb. 22, there was no recordable brain activity. His wife, Kathleen, sought a court ruling on whether her husband was legally dead.

Circuit Judge Clifford Shepard ruled Friday that McSheffrey was legally dead. He ordered doctors to issue a death certificate and to carry out such other actions as are necessary and proper, including discontinuation of the extraordinary medical support systems.

The judge's ruling was carried Saturday.

Radio's Sade dies

Bernardine Doherty, whose role as Sade in the "Vic and Sade" series endeared her to early radio listeners, has died at a hospital in Olney, Ill.

Mrs. Doherty, widow of Dr. Chester C. Doherty, associate professor of medicine at Northwestern University Medical School, died Thursday of an internal ailment. Her age was not announced.

A native of Madison, Wis., Mrs. Doherty studied drama at the University of Wisconsin and later appeared in several Broadway hits. She worked for the National Broadcasting Co. in Chicago.

"Vic and Sade" ran from 1932 to 1945 on the national network and won fame for its humorous depiction of a small-town Midwestern family.

Mrs. Trudeau

Did she, or didn't she, go to dinner?

Margaret Trudeau, Canada's 28-year-old first lady, returned home Saturday from a controversial visit to New York where she said she was unhappy with her role as a political wife.

But a government spokesman refused to say whether she attended a private dinner for British Prime Minister James Callaghan and his wife Saturday night.

Mrs. Trudeau, who has a known dislike for formal functions, was quoted by the Toronto Star as saying she was not planning to attend the dinner at Trudeau's country cottage.

A smiling Mrs. Trudeau arrived with an unidentified blonde woman companion at Ottawa airport. They were given a police escort and traveled in a limousine sent by her husband to the prime minister's official residence.

While in New York, Mrs. Trudeau stayed with a friend, Princess Yasmin Khan, in Manhattan. Before leaving, she heatedly denied any romantic links with Mick Jagger or other members of the Rolling Stones rock group.

Tow zone

I recently went to do some shopping at Ralph's market, 5760 E. Seventh St., at 8:30 a.m. When I got there I discovered the store didn't open until 9, so went across the street to Long Beach State University to fill out some class forms. When I returned 30 minutes later I found my car had been towed away. I called the Bixby Ranch Co. and got the towing company. I found it would cost me $50 to get my car, which had been taken to 1440 W. 17th St., which is practically in San Pedro. Why did they have to tow it so far? Is there anything Action Line can do to get my $50 refunded? G.G., Seal Beach.

No. Your complaint was not sympathetically received by Dan Weber, real estate operations manager for the Bixby Ranch Co., who feels it is a "game" with students to park in the Plaza Center parking lot and go to class. He said the student parking problem is particularly severe at the beginning of each semester. A patrolman in the lot warns students on their way to class that the next time they park in the lot their cars will be towed away and, he said, you apparently fell into that group; they had previously recorded your license number. Weber said he was not aware of how far the cars were towed. "We just use the same towing company as the Long Beach Police Department. I'm really not concerned with how much they have to pay. I have a fortune in 'patrons only' parking signs up all over the lot. We have advertised at the school, and the school newspaper has done stories on the problem with photos of cars being towed away. It cost him $50 for being such a dummy. We feel innocent."

Radar tickets

Can Action Line tell me if radar is a legal means of catching speeders in California? M.B., Long Beach.

The California Vehicle Code authorizes police use of radar to catch speeders. But it can be used only in areas that have been checked within the past five years by traffic engineers to determine if the posted speed limits are reasonable for traffic conditions there. Many speeders have attempted court challenges of their radar-detected speeding citations, but few have succeeded. Ken Milton, public affairs officer for the California Highway Patrol in Sacramento, told Action Line a 1968 decision by the Sonoma County Court of Appeal established that the radar devices are accurate. Only the competence of the officers using the equipment can be challenged, the court said. Last year, a Huntington Beach motorist spent $750 to beat a $35 speeding ticket on the grounds that the posted speed limit had not been justified by an engineering traffic study. He also claimed that the deputy could not prove that the radar set was calibrated, tuned or properly maintained. A spokesman for Decatur Electronics in Decatur, Ill., said the company has been manufacturing radar speed monitoring equipment since 1955, "and we haven't been beaten in court yet."

Old Gould band

Whatever happened to the fine Frankie Gould Band that played around Long Beach for more than 40 years? K.R., Long Beach.

Frankie Gould retired the Gould family's 10-piece band in 1965 but continued to run the family's Lido Ballroom on the Pike until he retired in 1971. Since then, according to his son Douglas, "He and my mother are traveling and relaxing." Douglas said his grandfather, William C. Gould, known for years as the "Dance King of Long Beach," encouraged his four sons to form a band. Their first professional job here was at the opening of the old Moose Lodge in 1924. During the 1920s, the family band, with Frankie the leader and violinist and his younger brothers William on piano, Tommy on saxophone and Royal George on guitar, played at ballrooms throughout the area. In the '30s, they played in Long Beach's Crystal Roof Ballroom, which was downtown on Ocean Boulevard, in Avalon's Casino Ballroom and they ran chartered dance cruises aboard the recently sold SS Catalina. Their sister, Florence, was their vocalist in those years. During the '40s, minus Royal George and Florence, the band played for dances across the Southland and in 1951 they opened the Majestic Ballroom, which was later renamed the Lido Ballroom. Frankie still makes his home in Long Beach. Florence lives in Garden Grove with her husband, E.J. Olsen. Their father and three brothers are dead now. Douglas' band plays locally for wedding receptions and banquets.

Anderson will also be available to talk with readers from noon to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday. Call him at 435-1161, extension 487.

The word "ombudsman" derives from the Swedish. It means an individual appointed to receive and investigate complaints of abuses lodged by individuals against governments and institutions charged with a public trust.

In application of the principle to newspaper practice, such elements as misleading headlines, misspellings and incorrect addresses could be subject to ombudsman examination for explanation in his column.

Hypothetical example: There is a story about Long Beach City College and the headline, instead of referring to LBCC, says LBSU, the initials for Long Beach State University.

Hypothetical example: A wedding notice in Life/style identifies the groom's parents as residents of Santa Barbara when, in fact, they have lived in Long Beach for the past 30 years. The wedding was in Santa Barbara.

Hypothetical example: A reader wonders why we use Miss, Mrs. and Ms. The ombudsman explains that Ms. is used when a woman expresses a preference for that title.

Anderson, 53, has been a staff member since 1968. He started as a reporter, then moved to assistant city editor, city editor and associate editor. He began his "People Talk" column on Oct. 1, 1974.

Before his employment here, he worked for the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner, the Santa Monica Evening Outlook, the San Diego Union, the Indianapolis Star and the Indianapolis Times. His journalistic experience of 30 years ranges from sports columnist to chief editorial writer.

Educated at Notre Dame, Indiana University and Wabash College, he is a combat veteran of World War II.

He and his wife Irene have two sons, Mark, 20, of Long Beach, and Terry, 29, a deputy probation officer for Alameda County.

A brother, William E. Anderson, was a member of a team that won a Pulitzer Prize two years ago for the Indianapolis Star. Another brother, Robert L. Whearley, is in charge of special projects for the Des Moines Register.

Among other newspapers having an ombudsman program are the Louisville Courier-Journal, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, the Milwaukee Journal, the Boston Globe, the Washington Post, the Washington Star and the Sacramento Bee.

Hypothetical example: A wedding notice in Life/Style identifies the groom's parents as residents of Santa Barbara when, in fact, they have lived in Long Beach for the past 30 years. The wedding was in Santa Barbara.

Hypothetical example: A reader wonders why we use Miss, Mrs. and Ms. The ombudsman explains that Ms. is used when a woman expresses a preference for that title.

Radio gear stolen

Radio equipment valued at $1,650 was taken from the garage of John Brunk, 1811 Harding St., by burglars who entered through a window, Long Beach police said Saturday.

Tow zone

I recently went to do some shopping at Ralph's market, 5760 E. Seventh St., at 8:30 a.m. When I got there I discovered the store didn't open until 9, so went across the street to Long Beach State University to fill out some class forms. When I returned 30 minutes later I found my car had been towed away. I called the Bixby Ranch Co. and got the towing company. I found it would cost me $50 to get my car, which had been taken to 1440 W. 17th St., which is practically in San Pedro. Why did they have to tow it so far? Is there anything Action Line can do to get my $50 refunded? G.G., Seal Beach.

No. Your complaint was not sympathetically received by Dan Weber, real estate operations manager for the Bixby Ranch Co., who feels it is a "game" with students to park in the Plaza Center parking lot and go to class. He said the student parking problem is particularly severe at the beginning of each semester. A patrolman in the lot warns students on their way to class that the next time they park in the lot their cars will be towed away and, he said, you apparently fell into that group; they had previously recorded your license number. Weber said he was not aware of how far the cars were towed. "We just use the same towing company as the Long Beach Police Department. I'm really not concerned with how much they have to pay. I have a fortune in 'patrons only' parking signs up all over the lot. We have advertised at the school, and the school newspaper has done stories on the problem with photos of cars being towed away. It cost him $50 for being such a dummy. We feel innocent."

Radar tickets

Can Action Line tell me if radar is a legal means of catching speeders in California? M.B., Long Beach.

The California Vehicle Code authorizes police use of radar to catch speeders. But it can be used only in areas that have been checked within the past five years by traffic engineers to determine if the posted speed limits are reasonable for traffic conditions there. Many speeders have attempted court challenges of their radar-detected speeding citations, but few have succeeded. Ken Milton, public affairs officer for the California Highway Patrol in Sacramento, told Action Line a 1968 decision by the Sonoma County Court of Appeal established that the radar devices are accurate. Only the competence of the officers using the equipment can be challenged, the court said. Last year, a Huntington Beach motorist spent $750 to beat a $35 speeding ticket on the grounds that the posted speed limit had not been justified by an engineering traffic study. He also claimed that the deputy could not prove that the radar set was calibrated, tuned or properly maintained. A spokesman for Decatur Electronics in Decatur, Ill., said the company has been manufacturing radar speed monitoring equipment since 1955, "and we haven't been beaten in court yet."

Whatever happened to the fine Frankie Gould Band that played around Long Beach for more than 40 years? K.R., Long Beach.

Frankie Gould retired the Gould family's 10-piece band in 1965 but continued to run the family's Lido Ballroom on the Pike until he retired in 1971. Since then, according to his son Douglas, "He and my mother are traveling and relaxing." Douglas said his grandfather, William C. Gould, known for years as the "Dance King of Long Beach," encouraged his four sons to form a band. Their first professional job here was at the opening of the old Moose Lodge in 1924. During the 1920s, the family band, with Frankie the leader and violinist and his younger brothers William on piano, Tommy on saxophone and Royal George on guitar, played at ballrooms throughout the area. In the '30s, they played in Long Beach's Crystal Roof Ballroom, which was downtown on Ocean Boulevard, in Avalon's Casino Ballroom and they ran chartered dance cruises aboard the recently sold SS Catalina. Their sister, Florence, was their vocalist in those years. During the '40s, minus Royal George and Florence, the band played for dances across the Southland and in 1951 they opened the Majestic Ballroom, which was later renamed the Lido Ballroom. Frankie still makes his home in Long Beach. Florence lives in Garden Grove with her husband, E.J. Olsen. Their father and three brothers are dead now. Douglas' band plays locally for wedding receptions and banquets.

Anderson will also be available to talk with readers from noon to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday. Call him at 435-1161, extension 487.

Man's body found in water at marina

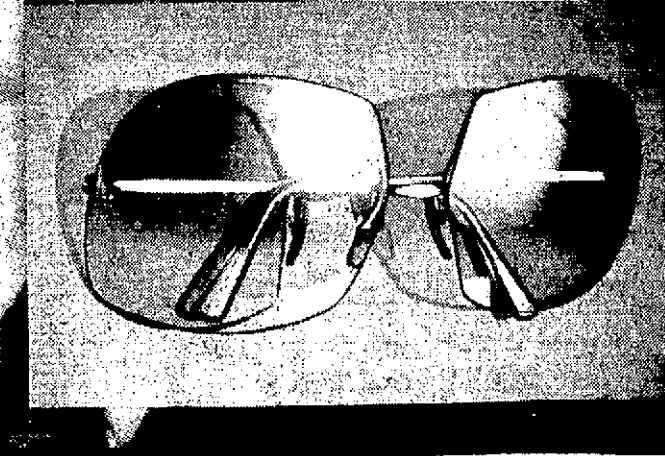

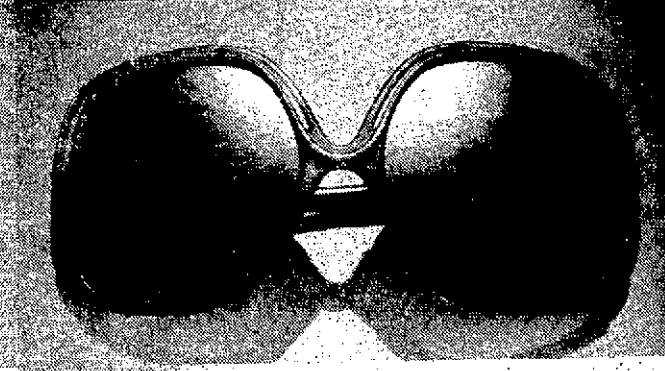

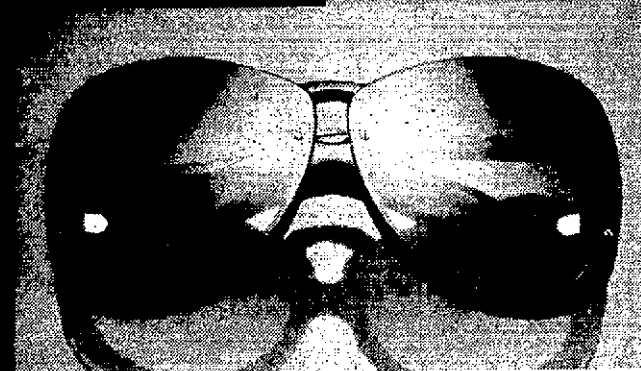

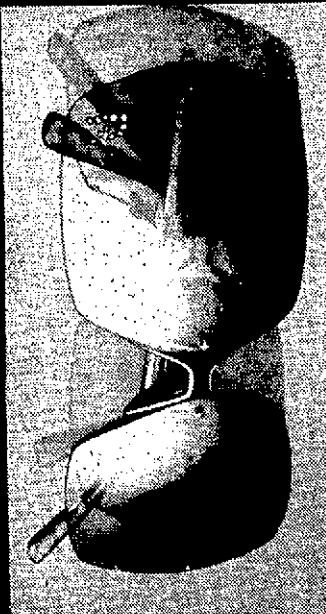

The body of a 57-year-old man who apparently drowned several days ago was found Saturday floating at a marina in Long Beach.

Coroner's deputies said the body was discovered at noon near the Cerritos Bahia Marina, 6289 E. Pacific Coast Highway. They said drowning appeared to be the cause of death. The victim's name was not released because relatives had not been notified.

IMPACT OF BILLIONS of gallons of upland Imperial County irrigation water on the Salton Sea is a fact of life at Bombay Beach where a weekend couple drives past swamped homes to higher ground. Ineffective dike built to hold back the shoreline is seen in background.

On the Sea's western shore, once a thriving attraction for campers and fishermen, most developments are neck deep in seawater. Unable to cope with the rising flood, businessmen and homeowners have surrendered most of the western shoreline.

Flood damage has prompted a raft of lawsuits totaling more than $7 million, but until property owners can get their day in court they are having to barricade what is left of their homes and businesses to keep out the creeping salt water.

RESIDENTS blame Imperial Valley farmers who, they say, wasted enough Colorado River water last year to increase the level of the Salton Sea one foot.

While the State Water Resources Control Board has ordered a stop to filling minuscule Lake Mission Viejo in south Orange County with water from the same Colorado River which feeds the Salton Sea — because the board says the 125-acre recreation lake constitutes an unreasonable waste of water — the same board refuses to move against Imperial Valley farmers who, critics say, last year wasted enough water to fill Lake Mission Viejo 50 times.

The board says there is a separate definition of water use and conservation for farmers.

As a further irony, the billions of gallons of fresh "tailwater" roaring through Imperial Valley outfalls become useless — once they reach the Salton Sea — to the rest of water-starved California.

The fresh water, immediately contaminated by submerged alkaline flats, becomes unpotable and would kill crops. It can only expand an already swollen Salton Sea.

YET THE water that has forced property owners to construct miles of dikes and earth barricades has, at the same time, proved a boon to sportsmen and several business enterprises.

The fishermen and campers who provide threatened Salton Sea residents with their livelihood aren't complaining. Attendance at state and privately owned parks has doubled in less than a year.

But, then, the Salton Sea was always a paradox, a region where elevation is measured with a "minus" sign and sportsmen find unforgettable salt water fishing in the middle of the Mojave Desert.

Ten miles west of here, on the sides of the Santa Rosa Mountains, hikers can see proof that as recently as 1,000 years ago a great lake fed by an unharnessed Colorado River covered most of what is now the Coachella and Imperial valleys.

The Colorado changed course repeatedly, refilling the dry, landlocked valley with water. After each refilling of what the Indians knew as Lake Cahulla, the Colorado would return to its normal course and the lake would dry up.

ABOUT a thousand years ago, searing desert heat succeeded in dehydrating the lake, transforming the sub-sea-level valleys into a vast expanse of gleaming white salt flats. White men who explored this region 250 feet below sea level called it the Salton Sink.

Then in 1905 the mercurial Colorado River flooded and broke through an irrigation diversion dam near Yuma. Out of control, the entire river freely cascaded through the breach and for two years poured into the Salton Sink.

Army and railroad engineers finally won their battle against the torrent when they filled several strategic canyons with boulders, freight cars and anything else at hand. The Colorado returned to her normal course but in her wake created the Salton Sea, then a fresh water lake 45 miles long and 20 miles wide.

Further evaporation reduced it to its present size, a 360-square-mile inland sea only 10 feet deep. Because it is so shallow, high desert winds will again this month turn the Sea into a cauldron of 6 to 10-foot high waves.

THE Salton Sea was a fresh water lake until the 1920s, when the water began dissolving the salt flats left by its predecessors. Today, the Salton Sea is slightly saltier than the Pacific Ocean and has proved a haven for several varieties of ocean fish planted in the 1950s by the State Fish and Game Department.

Orangemouth corvina and sargo have done well, but the most prolific fish is the gulf croaker. Anglers annually catch more than a half-million corvina, which weigh from 3 to more than 20 pounds.

Dick Bringle, owner of the Bombay Beach Marina, is typical of residents fighting to save their property.

He blames upland farmers and local water projects for much of the Salton Sea's present dilemma. He has, as he describes it, "batted heads" with the farmers and water officials, and now he's taking them to court.

"This flooding first started back in the early '60s," Bringle says from behind the counter of his bait and tackle shop. "We complained to the Imperial Irrigation District (IID) and after a lot of meetings thought we had it settled."

"The level of the Sea stayed about the same, and everyone got along great."

"THEN, about three years ago, the Sea started rising again."

Total rise in 1975 was 8 inches, he said, and last year there was another 10 inches.

"Then all hell broke loose with that storm — what was it? — Hurricane Kathleen last October. That storm dumped 10 more inches of water into the Sea in less than two weeks. Never saw anything like it!"

Since then, Bringle and other property owners at Bombay Beach have spent almost $12,000 building earthworks and sandbag dikes to control the flooding. Some streets in Bombay Beach are covered by more than two feet of water.

"There's no way to keep the water out," he said. "We just do what we can to save the property, but at least we're doing something."

Bringle, a catalyst in the Salton Sea Property Owners Association and a member of the Bombay Beach Community Services District, said only quick action by threatened residents has salvaged Bombay Beach.

"I tell 'em, everytime they get to complaining, 'Look what happened over PARADOX OF POWER is evident at Desert Beach on the Salton Sea's north shore as power boat roars past a submerged utility pole that once towered above now-sunken road.

at Salton City. They were washed out over there 'cause nobody did anything. 'I tell 'em, 'It could happen here. It's because we're hangin' in there together that we've only lost 15 per cent of our town.'"

There's much too much d--ed water in the Salton Sea area

come to the North Shore Beach and Yacht Club, where owners have so far spent $40,000 filling in breaks, raising the jetty and pumping out salt water.

Floating docks at North Beach Marina are at the top of their pilings and ready to snap, and owners have ordered specially built oil pipe from Long Beach to repair the pilings.

Fishermen and campers also pour into the Salton Sea State Beach, 10 miles north of Bombay Beach, where Graig Engal, who supervises the state recreation project, fights a losing battle to save his facility.

"The State Park policy right now is to have no policy," Engal says, "until there is some guarantee the lake will stabilize."

"In the meantime, we're spending money for repairs to save as much as possible. We've been having some success with riprap, but sometimes we have to cut away a bluff undercut by erosion."

"WE'VE lost 25 of 50 campsites here at North Beach and 20 of 164 down at Mecca Beach. Want some pictures of ducks swimming under picnic tables?" Engal laughs, sweeping his hand toward the beach.

It all began in 1927, he explained, when President Herbert Hoover designated the Salton Sea an agricultural sump. A federal survey that year recommended that for safety the maximum Sea elevation should be no more than 220 feet below sea level.

"It's complicated, but essentially the counties won't issue building permits below minus 220," he said. "We're only 9 feet from that now, but you have to understand that, below sea level, up is down."

He said that for years the sea level was stable at about minus 234 feet — minus 234 in 1960 and minus 232 in 1965.

"We've now got the highest level since 1914, when the lake started evaporating," Engal went on. "Today we're at minus 228.97, exactly one foot higher than this same time last year."

But the rise has been a mixed blessing, he said, because it has also diluted the salt content to where the Salton Sea today is just a bit more salty than the Pacific Ocean.

"I'VE GOT a drawer full of Los Angeles newspaper clips saying the sea was drying up, that it wouldn't support reproduction. Hah! Go ask the Fish and Game people."

"This place is crazy with fish."

Engal glances out the window at the salt water lapping away at his beach and tries to sort out the issues in his mind.

"You know, if it wasn't for the water districts, the Salton Sea would have dried up," he says quietly.

"The IID provides about 80 per cent of the water coming in from the Imperial Valley. The Coachella Valley Water District, the storms and some spill-over from the All-American Canal make up the other 20 per cent."

"Now it just may be that if you read that presidential order one way, the water districts can fill the Sink up to minus 220 — 9 more feet," he reflects.

"But, look, that would bring the Sea just about up to Highway 111."

Another 9 feet would destroy all Salton Sea developments.

"WE'VE filed an encroachment suit against the water districts, and now we've just filed a suit for injunction, to keep them from dumping more water," Bringle says.

"The IID just started fining farmers who waste water — why, one farmer paid $3,000 in fines in just one month."

"It's the water district system itself that's inefficient," Bringle says. "For one thing, farmers aren't even warned until they've let their water run more than nine hours."

"How much water do you think runs through a feeder ditch in nine hours? And it all winds up here, on our front porches."

Robert F. Carter, IID general manager in El Centro, is caught in the middle, taking flak from Salton Sea residents on one side and farmers on the other.

"The important issue here is that the President established the Sea as an agricultural sump," he says, "and that's what it's used for."

"I think that from my vantage point we're pretty well legally protected."

CARTER declines to specify how much of the 2.9 million acre-feet which his district diverts each year from the Colorado eventually ends up in the Salton Sea.

"That's a difficult figure to express," he says. "It's very difficult."

Other estimates have placed the total of wasted water, or "tailwater," as farmers call it — after evaporation — as high as 200,000 acre-feet. One acre-foot of water is 325,900 gallons.

Carter won't say how much water is excess, yet he acknowledges some of the waste another way. He says farmers in his district have paid about $40,000 in fines since October for wasting water.

"The fines are assessed at three times the water rate paid if the diverter wastes more than is permitted," Carter says. He adds that farmers are allowed to let up to 15 per cent of their usage run by before the district is willing to investigate.

At the current IID water rate of $4.25 per acre-foot, the fine would be $12.75 per acre-foot wasted. And $40,000 divided by $12.75 means that officially recorded waste, above 15 per cent, in the last five months was 3,100 acre-feet — slightly more than 1 billion gallons, or just less than needed to fill Lake Mission Viejo once.

"Now, I don't know about that," Carter answers. "I mean, these figures are awfully difficult to express."

THE FINE system established by the IID, which only went into effect last October, is enforced by inspectors who make two checks, nine hours apart, of a farmer suspected of wasting water.

come to the North Shore Beach and Yacht Club, where owners have so far spent $40,000 filling in breaks, raising the jetty and pumping out salt water.

Floating docks at North Beach Marina are at the top of their pilings and ready to snap, and owners have ordered specially built oil pipe from Long Beach to repair the pilings.

Fishermen and campers also pour into the Salton Sea State Beach, 10 miles north of Bombay Beach, where Graig Engal, who supervises the state recreation project, fights a losing battle to save his facility.

"The State Park policy right now is to have no policy," Engal says, "until there is some guarantee the lake will stabilize."

"In the meantime, we're spending money for repairs to save as much as possible. We've been having some success with riprap, but sometimes we have to cut away a bluff undercut by erosion."

"WE'VE lost 25 of 50 campsites here at North Beach and 20 of 164 down at Mecca Beach. Want some pictures of ducks swimming under picnic tables?" Engal laughs, sweeping his hand toward the beach.

It all began in 1927, he explained, when President Herbert Hoover designated the Salton Sea an agricultural sump. A federal survey that year recommended that for safety the maximum Sea elevation should be no more than 220 feet below sea level.

"It's complicated, but essentially the counties won't issue building permits below minus 220," he said. "We're only 9 feet from that now, but you have to understand that, below sea level, up is down."

He said that for years the sea level was stable at about minus 234 feet — minus 234 in 1960 and minus 232 in 1965.

"We've now got the highest level since 1914, when the lake started evaporating," Engal went on. "Today we're at minus 228.97, exactly one foot higher than this same time last year."

But the rise has been a mixed blessing, he said, because it has also diluted the salt content to where the Salton Sea today is just a bit more salty than the Pacific Ocean.

"I'VE GOT a drawer full of Los Angeles newspaper clips saying the sea was drying up, that it wouldn't support reproduction. Hah! Go ask the Fish and Game people."

"This place is crazy with fish."

Engal glances out the window at the salt water lapping away at his beach and tries to sort out the issues in his mind.

"You know, if it wasn't for the water districts, the Salton Sea would have dried up," he says quietly.

"The IID provides about 80 per cent of the water, coming in from the Imperial Valley. The Coachella Valley Water District, the storms and some spill-over from the All-American Canal make up the other 20 per cent."

"Now it just may be that if you read that presidential order one way, the water districts can fill the Sink up to minus 220 — 9 more feet," he reflects.

"But, look, that would bring the Sea just about up to Highway 111."

Another 9 feet would destroy all Salton Sea developments.

"WE'VE filed an encroachment suit against the water districts, and now we've just filed a suit for injunction, to keep them from dumping more water," Bringle says.

"The IID just started fining farmers who waste water — why, one farmer paid $3,000 in fines in just one month."

"It's the water district system itself that's inefficient," Bringle says. "For one thing, farmers aren't even warned until they've let their water run more than nine hours.

"How much water do you think runs through a feeder ditch in nine hours? And it all winds up here, on our front porches."

Robert F. Carter, IID general manager in El Centro, is caught in the middle, taking flak from Salton Sea residents on one side and farmers on the other.

"The important issue here is that the President established the Sea as an agricultural sump," he says. "and that's what it's used for."

"I think that from my vantage point we're pretty well legally protected."

CARTER declines to specify how much of the 2.9 million acre-feet which his district diverts each year from the Colorado eventually ends up in the Salton Sea.

"That's a difficult figure to express," he says. "It's very difficult."

Other estimates have placed the total of wasted water, or "tailwater," as farmers call it — after evaporation — as high as 200,000 acre-feet. One acre-foot of water is 325,900 gallons.

Carter won't say how much water is excess, yet he acknowledges some of the waste another way. He says farmers in his district have paid about $40,000 in fines since October for wasting water.

"The fines are assessed at three times the water rate paid if the diverter wastes more than is permitted," Carter says. He adds that farmers are allowed to let up to 15 per cent of their usage run by before the district is willing to investigate.

At the current IID water rate of $4.25 per acre-foot, the fine would be $12.75 per acre-foot wasted. And $40,000 divided by $12.75 means that officially recorded waste, above 15 per cent, in the last five months was 3,100 acre-feet — slightly more than 1 billion gallons, or just less than needed to fill Lake Mission Viejo once.

"Now, I don't know about that," Carter answers. "I mean, these figures are awfully difficult to express."

Expansion of Carter economic package urged

Edmond LeBreton
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's economic stimulus package should be enlarged to provide more tax relief for individuals and more funds for job-creating programs, the congressional Joint Economic Committee urged Saturday.

The Democratic majority of the committee signed the report, with some members dissenting on individual items.

The Republican minority filed its own report calling for permanent tax cuts instead of Carter's one-shot $50-a-person rebate.

Republican and Democratic members joined, however, in a "statement of agreement" on some fundamentals.

THEY AGREED that desirable goals for this year include a 6 per cent growth in the economy. They called for reducing unemployment, which stood at 7.5 per cent in February, to 6.5 per cent and making special efforts to get youths into jobs.

They also agreed that inflation still is a danger.

And they said business investment is too low to sustain healthy economic growth.

Congress now is considering a modified version of Carter's proposals designed to increase consumer spending and prime the economy in an effort to put unemployed Americans back to work.

The House last week approved a tax-cut package that would give some 200 million Americans a rebate of up to $50 this spring, plus an across-the-board permanent tax cut.

The measure now is pending in the Senate.

The Democrats on the Joint Economic Committee suggested that an additional tax reduction, perhaps as much as $8 billion, would be needed in 1978 to keep the economy growing at the desired rate.

Such a reduction "could be achieved by temporarily lowering tax rates, by enlarging the personal credit, or in other ways," the report said, but urged that the one-time rebate proposed as a temporary measure for 1977 should not be repeated the following year.

The report said the budget Congress is now developing should include a "jobs fund" of $5 billion for 1978 in addition to Carter's program.

THE FUND could be used to strengthen programs that prove most effective in boosting employment, the report said, and any unneeded part could be eliminated when Congress takes its final action on the budget in the fall.

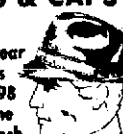

"The economic outlook for 1977 may be described as good, but not good enough," the report said. It said the economy could be expected to grow about 5 per cent and that unemployment should fall below 7 per cent by the end of the year. But it said recovery was not coming up to expectations and even a merely good year in 1978 would not be good enough.

The majority report strongly supported Carter's original proposal for business tax relief as against the substitute voted by the House.

Don't talk to them about a drought

Carter explained that farmers order their water by the acre-foot and that if the water ordered is allowed to pass unused and is more than 15 per cent of his usage, the farmer is warned.

"He'll be fined the second time," Carter said.

Some valley agricultural workers think the IID's fine assessment system is a joke, considering the incredible amounts of water consumed by Imperial Valley farmers.

"Hell," said Jack Warner, an El Centro farm machinery operator, "those farmers don't care about the fines. It's the wealthier farmers anyway who are wasting that water.

"Fines don't mean a thing to them," he said. "Why, they need at least six acre-feet of water a year just to irrigate one acre of cropland. Soil's so heavy with salt they have to leach the earth."

Few farmers in the water district will discuss the issue with outsiders, and none want to be identified.

"Dammit!" shouted one Brawley lettuce grower. "We've got first rights to that water. It's ours! I can't play God."

"I HAVE to order my water three days ahead of time," he explained, wiping his brow in the 90-degree sun. "Well, three days later, things can change."

"It might have rained or something. Anyway, maybe I don't need the water right now. I'll just let it go by and order more when I do need it."

"Sure," he said, "it sounds like a waste, and it costs more money, but my crops — everybody's crops here — are fragile. What can we do?"

"Folks want to eat, don't they? Water waste? Look at the food they waste!"

The state agency which has been most vocal about wasted water during this two-year drought, and the agency which ordered Lake Mission Viejo shut down, says it can't do anything about the Imperial Valley farmers.

"Why should we take any action?" asked one incredulous staff member at the Water Resources Control Board regional office in Palm Desert.

"WATER isn't being degraded here. It's an elevation problem."

The staff member, who declined to give his name, said that as far as his agency is concerned, the rise in the Salton Sea is from agricultural water.

"It's different for the farmers," he said. "There is a beneficial use in between. It's for farm use."

"That's the difference as we see it between the Salton Sea and that Lake what-is-it? Mission Viejo."

"There is no beneficial use to that lake."

cause few farmers are willing to spend the money.

SO THE water continues to pour today into the Salton Sea, but the worst is yet to come.

Engel glances at the calendar and says the still-rising sea level won't peak until May. All agricultural runoff aside, he explains, a series of spring storms could destroy what is left of the beachfront developments.

Everyone agrees.

"You can't compete with God," Carter says.

Vance reassures Arabs on policy

By George Gedda
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Four Arab ambassadors conferred Saturday with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and said they received assurances there has been no change in U.S. Mideast policy as a result of the visit here this past week of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

The meeting touched on Carter's statement at a press conference Wednesday about the possibility of creating two sets of Israeli borders — one a defense line to enhance Israeli security and the other a legal boundary denoting Israeli jurisdiction.

Lebanese Ambassador Najati Kabbani, who served as spokesman for the four envoys, was asked by newsmen whether Carter's comments helped or hurt the search for a Middle East peace.

"They certainly didn't hurt," said Kabbani.

Also present for the meeting with Vance were the ambassadors of Egypt, Syria and Jordan.

Kabbani said the major issue during the hour-long meeting was on the upcoming visits of several Arab heads of state to Washington.

President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, who is due here next month, is expected to be the first of the Arab visitors.

The Arab ambassadors had asked for the meeting after Carter's statement Monday of U.S. support for Israel's need for "defensible borders." This phrasing seemed to suggest U.S. backing of the long-standing Israeli position that a return to the pre-1967 boundaries would leave Israel militarily exposed.

Kabbani said Arab fears were alleviated later on when Vance and a White House spokesman affirmed that there was no change in the American position despite Carter's remarks.

Sirhan parole date advances nearly 1 year

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The parole date of Sirhan B. Sirhan, convicted assassin of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, has been advanced nearly a year to March 1, 1985, officials confirmed Saturday.

The date was advanced under a 1976 state law giving prisoners credit for jail time served while awaiting trial, according to Phil Guthrie, spokesman for the State Corrections Department.

Sirhan, 33, is now held at the Correctional Training Facility at Soledad.

He originally was sentenced to death for the fatal shooting of Kennedy on June 5, 1968. Under a State Supreme Court decision finding the capital punishment law unconstitutional, all death row occupants were given life terms.

Young hails Carter stand

SACRAMENTO (AP) — President Carter's appeals for human rights around the world "in the long run can't help but do good," United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young said Saturday.

"Of course, I'm a southern black American, and I know that it helped the United States to deal with the problems of black Americans in the South when the international community called our hypocrisy to our attention," Young said at a news conference.

"I think the President is not afraid to point out human rights violations within our own country. It's an even-handed approach to the rights of all human beings, which in the long run can't help but do good."

Byrd raps release of D.C. terrorists

By John Leugel
Associated Press Writer

Felony murder indictments sought for all 12

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd Saturday criticized the release without bail of the leader of the Hanafi gunmen charged in connection with the Moslem sect's capital siege.

"It's abhorrent in our society that individuals can commit these atrocious crimes and then be out on their own recognizance," the Senate leader said.

Hanafi leader Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, 54, and three others were released without bail Friday after they surrendered to police, freed 134 hostages and ended a 38-hour siege of three Washington buildings. Eight other Hanafi were held on bonds ranging from $50,000 to $70,000.

All 12 were charged with armed kidnaping, and prosecutors said they would seek felony murder indictments against them.

Under District of Columbia law, anyone who participates in a felony during which a murder is committed can be charged with felony murder.

In the Hanafi siege, a radio newsmen was killed during the Wednesday attack on city hall.

Khaalis was freed as part of a deal with police officials. He agreed to release the hostages in return for the police agreement to allow him to go free without bail. The other three were released under the liberal D.C. bail law. The law requires judges to free suspects if the suspects have no criminal records but have employment and ties to the community and are considered likely to show up in court for trial.

Meanwhile, a Baltimore attorney said Saturday he had acted as the court-appointed lawyer for Khaalis in 1968 after Khaalis was arrested for allegedly trying to extort money from a suburban Washington bank.

The lawyer, Joseph S. Kaufman, said the charges against Khaalis were later dismissed for unexplained reasons at the request of federal prosecutors.

Kaufman said he believed a court-ordered psychiatric examination of Khaalis had played a role in the dismissal of the charges.

Khaalis allegedly had threatened an official of a suburban Washington branch of the Maryland National Bank with violence unless money was delivered to a phone booth in Washington, according to Kaufman. He said Khaalis later was arrested in the phone booth by FBI agents.

More details were becoming known of the ordeal of the hostages held for 38 hours by the gunmen at city hall, two blocks from the White House: the headquarters of the Jewish service organization B'nai B'rith, and the Islamic Center, a mosque on Embassy Row. The hostages rarely resisted. Many were trussed hand and foot with telephone cords, tape, or their own neckties. Some were beaten with fists and pistols. Dr. Sidney Clearfield of B'nai B'rith said Khaalis kept punching him in the stomach — "He said he didn't like the way I was looking at him."

B'nai B'rith secretary Mimi Feldman, 60, said, "We were helpless ... People talk about Nazi Germany and they say why didn't the Jews fight back? Why didn't they do something? If they had been in there, they would understand."

A few hostages had chances to escape, but they declined freedom, fearing reprisals against those they left behind. And when it was over, none said they support the theory that a hostage eventually sympathizes with his captors.

'Mohammad' film re-opens

By TOM CRANE
Associated Press

NEW YORK — There was a mixture of apprehension and bravado as the curtain went up at the Rivoli Theater Saturday on what the manager called "American premier, part two," of the film "Mohammad, Messenger of God."

Security was heavy at the theater on Times Square, with city police watching the perimeter, private guards posted inside and borrowed staff from other theaters assisting in a check of all packages carried onto the premises.

The film started with most of the Rivoli's 1,500 seats occupied, as they were Wednesday afternoon when the first showing of the three-hour epic film was abruptly halted after one hour.

"We were reticent to discontinue showing it, but with what was happening in Washington, D.C., frankly we had no choice," Morris Rochelle, the Rivoli manager, said of the halt in the performance three days earlier.

One of the demands of Moslem terrorists who had killed a radio reporter and taken more than 130 hostages at three locations in the national capital was that "Mohammad" not be shown because, they said, it distorted the truth about the Moslem religion.

On Saturday, at the Rivoli Theater, a young woman who did not wish to be identified conceded she was somewhat concerned about the possibility of "more violence here in view of what happened in Washington.

She said she was at the interrupted show and said she returned for the same purpose, "to learn about Mohammad's life."

"It's a sign of the times," Robert Burton of Manhattan said goodnaturedly after being stopped at the Rivoli entrance for a thorough search of two shopping bags he was carrying.

Byrd raps release of D.C. terrorists

By John Lengel
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd Saturday criticized the release without bail of the leader of the Hanafi gunmen charged in connection with the Moslem sect's capital siege.

"It's abhorrent in our society that individuals can commit these atrocious crimes and then be out on their own recognizance," the Senate leader said.

Hanafi leader Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, 54, and three others were released without bail Friday after they surrendered to police, freed 134 hostages and ended a 38-hour siege of three Washington buildings. Eight other Hanafi were held on bonds ranging from $50,000 to $70,000.

Felony murder indictments sought for all 12

All 12 were charged with armed kidnaping, and prosecutors said they would seek felony murder indictments against them.

Under District of Columbia law, anyone who participates in a felony during which a murder is committed can be charged with felony murder.

In the Hanafi siege, a radio newsmen was killed during the Wednesday attack on city hall.

Khaalis was freed as part of a deal with police officials. He agreed to release the hostages in return for the police agreement to allow him to go free without bail. The other three were released under the liberal D.C. bail law. The law requires judges to free suspects if the suspects have no criminal records but have employment and ties to the community and are considered likely to show up in court for trial.

Meanwhile, a Baltimore attorney said Saturday he had acted as the court-appointed lawyer for Khaalis in 1968 after Khaalis was arrested for allegedly trying to extort money from a suburban Washington bank.

The lawyer, Joseph S. Kaufman, said the charges against Khaalis were later dismissed for unexplained reasons at the request of federal prosecutors.

Kaufman said he believed a court-ordered psychiatric examination of Khaalis had played a role in the dismissal of the charges.

Khaalis allegedly had threatened an official of a suburban Washington branch of the Maryland National Bank with violence unless money was delivered to a phone booth in Washington, according to Kaufman. He said Khaalis later was arrested in the phone booth by FBI agents.

More details were becoming known of the ordeal of the hostages held for 38 hours by the gunmen at city hall, two blocks from the White House; the headquarters of the Jewish service organization B'nai B'rith, and the Islamic Center, a mosque on Embassy Row.

The hostages rarely resisted. Many were trussed hand and foot with telephone cords, tape, or their own neckties. Some were beaten with fists and pistols. Dr. Sidney Clearfield of B'nai B'rith said Khaalis kept punching him in the stomach — "He said he didn't like the way I was looking at him."

B'nai B'rith secretary Mimi Feldman, 60, said, "We were helpless ... People talk about Nazi

Germany and they say why didn't the Jews fight back? Why didn't they do something? If they had been in there, they would understand."

A few hostages had chances to escape, but they declined freedom, fearing reprisals against those they left behind. And when it was over, none said they support the theory that a hostage eventually sympathizes with his captors.

Rare illness hit S.F. area after Army germ tests

By Lawrence K. Altman
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — In 1950, four days after the Army secretly released near San Francisco what then were considered harmless bacteria called Serratia marcescens, a 50-year-old kidney disease patient at Stanford Hospital developed a urinary tract infection that was found to have been produced by Serratia marcescens.

In the next five months, 10 other Stanford Hospital patients who had undergone urological tests, which often lead to secondary infections, developed Serratia marcescens infections of the urinary system, heart and blood.

Stanford doctors, who had no knowledge of the Army's biological warfare tests, were baffled by the outbreak. These were the first cases of Serratia infection recorded at the teaching hospital, which has since moved from San Francisco to the university's campus in Palo Alto.

THE STANFORD DOCTORS also were puzzled because reports of Serratia marcescens infections at hospitals elsewhere were rare. In a published experiment four years earlier, the Army tried to infect four healthy volunteers with massive doses of aerosolized Serratia marcescens. The men developed only mild, transient symptoms.

The scientific community considered Serratia marcescens so harmless that the bacterium was often used for demonstration purposes in high school and college biology classes, and by researchers studying the complications of dental procedures in patients.

Only in recent months has the Army acknowledged that it conducted biological warfare tests using Serratia marcescens in San Francisco and at other points around the country. But the Army has not disclosed precisely how and where the bacteria were released and the methods and results of the experiments.

LAST WEEK the Army released a report maintaining that the association between the San Francisco biological warfare tests and the infections at Stanford "appears to be coincidental."

Nevertheless, even now San Francisco doctors are reporting Serratia marcescens infections of the heart among addicts who inject themselves with heroin and other drugs. Such cases are few, about five each year at San Francisco General Hospital.

Local health officials are not required to report Serratia infections in this country. From voluntary reports, the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta says the incidence has increased over the last 10 years, in large part because of advancing knowledge about the organism's ability to produce disease, particularly in patients with an underlying serious disorder.

Dr. John Mills, the San Francisco General Hospital physician who with Dr. Denis Drew of Oakland reported the occurrence of Serratia infections among drug addicts, was the first to suggest a possible connection with the Army tests in the Annals of Internal Medicine in January 1976. Mills said in an interview that he is not now satisfied with the explanation that the outbreak was a coincidence. He cited a variety of reasons, including his impression, based on medical journal reports, that indicate no other part of the country is experiencing Serratia infections so frequently as San Francisco.

SO LITTLE is known about this phenomenon, and the biological aspects of the situation are so complex, that it appears virtually impossible to make a scientific judgment about whether the biological warfare tests caused the hospital cases.

The difficulty of trying to make scientific assessments, more than a quarter of a century after the experiment, is accentuated by the lack of complete records. Army officials have said that the protocol, or scientific blueprint, has been lost. But it seems clear that the Army, assuming that Serratia was harmless, made no attempt at the time to investigate whether human infections followed the aerosol's release over San Francisco. The tests seem to have been confined to sampling for Serratia at scattered collection points in the target area.

These officials also said that the strain of Serratia marcescens used in the San Francisco biological warfare testing was no longer available, so that bacteriologists cannot now do tests that might provide evidence for or against the connection theory.

FURTHER, ARMY officials have said they did the studies under presidential mandate and congressional supervision to help the United States catch up with the biological warfare capabilities of foreign powers. Much has been learned about Serratia and other infections since then. Also, these officials maintain that they are now in the scientifically difficult, if not impossible, position of proving that there was no cause and effect.

Nevertheless, the situation raises many questions about the coincidence and also the scientific merit of reports published in medical journals by doctors who were unaware of crucial factors that might have influenced the scientific interpretation of the data collected when biological warfare testing was done secretly.

The Stanford outbreak might have gone undetected had Anne Zuckerman, a laboratory technician, been less alert. Dr. Richard P. Wheat, who reported the outbreak with Miss Zuckerman and the late Dr. Lowell A. Rantz, said, "It was sort of a fluke."

WHEAT, WHO NOW practices internal medicine in Los Altos, said in an interview that Miss Zuckerman became curious about the unusual finding of Serratia, an organism thought to be harmless, in the blood specimens from a patient. That finding led the doctors to look for it in other patients.

"Lord knows how many others we didn't get," Wheat said.

Swindlers reap prison pleasures

federal prisoner, Phillis Brady, a former Catholic nun who also was allowed to attend Colson's Bible study class.

Halverson's companion for the Rose Parade and Rose Bowl game — in addition to his wife — was H. Kent Russell, former president of a San Francisco export firm, convicted of defrauding two banks and a Chinese steel company.

Russell defrauded the firms out of more than $850,000 then gave half of it to a one-time East Coast organized-crime figure who was involved in a lease with the City of San Francisco.

Russell pleaded guilty and was given a three-year sentence.

Less than six months later he was sitting with Halverson on the 50-yard-line at the Rose Bowl game.

The trip by Halverson and Russell to the parade and game did not violate prison policy, warden Lee Jett says.

Trips, where prisoners are allowed to go to a specific place for a short time, have different requirements than furloughs, where prisoners are allowed complete freedom.

"A prisoner must have served at least six months of his federal prison term and at least three months at Terminal Island before being considered for community trips," the warden explains. "Plus, they must have a 90-day clear conduct record. These men have met those criteria."

As far as furloughs are concerned, Jett said, they were allowed because it "may have been the judgment of the staff that they have served half of their expected sentence."

"Normally," the warden explained, "a person sentenced to 10 years can be paroled in three-and-a-half years. If in the opinion of the staff, and considering the prisoner's background, we feel he will be paroled in three-and-a-half years, all he has to serve is a little over a year and a half to be allowed out on furlough."

It's guess on the part of the staff, the warden said, on when the prisoner will be released.

"A car thief, given five years to serve, may have to serve the whole thing — depending on his background, etc. It's a 'guesstimation' on our part," he said.

Jett, however, admitted that perhaps an "exception" was made in the case of Halverson's trip to Washington, but, he said, it was for a good cause.

"Chuck Colson's turnaround . . . his switch to religion . . . has the support of the Washington office . . .

"A male and female are selected to go to Washington and are housed in a half-way house under close supervision."

"The people taken," he says, "have to have a sort of religious interest at the institutional level, get indoctrinated and spread the word."

At the Terminal Island Prison, the only word that has spread was that Halverson and his kind have "the juice to get out from behind bars when others — more than qualified — can't."

The federal prison system was similarly involved in preferential treatment of prisoners when, in 1971, San Diego millionaire John Alessio was allowed to leave Lompoc Federal Prison on trips and furloughs in return for favors — fishing trips, weekends in Las Vegas, liquor and gifts — to prison personnel. Four prison guards from the facility were charged with accepting bribes and fired.

probably annoy some Israeli public figures.

Making a distinction from the human rights situation in Israel proper, which is judged to be without serious problems, the report said the situation in the occupied Arab territories "is different from that in Israel proper because of the inevitable tension between the occupying authorities and the indigenous population."

It said that as of last May Israel "had about 3,100 Arabs under arrest or in prison who were not Israeli-citizen Arabs and were overwhelmingly inhabitants of the occupied territories." In the summary, the State Department listed violations by Israel of human rights in the occupied lands.

Bombing linked to Carter visit plans

MARLBORO, Mass. (AP) — A bomb damaged a factory Saturday night and an anonymous caller linked the blast to President Carter's plan to visit nearby Clinton, authorities said.

The explosion occurred at the Ideal Roller Co., a two-story concrete factory that manufactures rollers for printing presses. The plant was closed at the time and no injuries were reported.

About 30 minutes after the blast, an unidentified man telephoned the Boston office of United Press International and said the Sam Melville-Jonathan Jackson Unit was claiming responsibility for the blast. The unit is an underground group that has linked itself to several other bombings in the Boston area.

stock because it is calving season. "The wind is knocking the young calves over," he said.

A Union Pacific railroad spokesman said a work train with 20 crew members was isolated between Cheyenne Wells, Colo., and Sharon Springs, Kan.

"Reports from our roadmasters indicate some drifts in the Cheyenne Wells area are 25 to 30 feet deep," the spokesman said. "We've been unable to get into Cheyenne Wells, and we're hopeful our train is all right . . . There are cars on the train with heat, and, barring something unusual, everyone should be all right."

The spokesman said no trains would run between Denver and Kansas City until the storm was over.

A Colorado Highway Patrol spokesman at Sterling in northeastern Colorado said highway crews were reopening roads as the storm moved eastward. Westbound traffic from Sterling to Denver was reopened late Saturday morning, but eastbound traffic was still cut off.

"Virtually every town east of Sterling is isolated," the spokesman said. "We are getting to stranded motorists as fast we can. They rescued about 20 people from the Crook rest area, and we have crews trying to get to a family stranded in a vehicle in the Yuma area."

In Strasburg, Colo., 200 stranded motorists abandoned their cars along Interstate 70 and U.S. 36 and doubled the population of the community about 40 miles east of Denver.

At least 340 persons were stuck in southwestern and south-central South Dakota.

Ninety elementary and high school students stayed at a schoolhouse in Mission, S.D., when they were unable to get home in the blizzard.

"We've got films and things for them," said county school Supt. Glenn Barnes. "We're feeding them through the hot lunch program."

A group of 50 senior citizens from Canada was also stranded in Mission, a community of about 750. Members of the group, aged 64 to 81, were returning to Manitoba and Saskatchewan from California.

Three buses carrying more than 100 Kansas City vacationers headed for Colorado's ski slopes were stranded at Goodland, Kan., and at Burlington, Colo.

About 200 travelers waited out the storm in a city auditorium in Kadoka, S.D., after Interstate 90 was closed by snow drifts. The group included 50 youngsters en route to Mitchell to participate in a swimming meet.

"Snowplows haven't turned a wheel," said a local police officer. "It could be tomorrow before they get out of here."

Power outages were widespread in South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado. Restaurant operators said they were running out of food and motel owners said as many as seven people were crammed into single rooms.

Bolles murder probe team bares Arizona corruption

Associated Press

A team of reporters who spent six months in Arizona after the murder of newsman Don Bolles have ended their investigation of the state. A published account of the team's report says they found widespread evidence of organized crime, often condoned by local political leaders.

The Miami Herald carried a Page 1 article today saying the account was the first of a copyrighted series by the Investigative Reporters and Editors (IRE).

The story was mostly general, outlining the extent of crime in Arizona. The story included few specific instances of wrongdoing or names of individuals involved. The Herald version of the reporters' story said: "Laws, even when they are enforced, are inadequate. The staffing of police and regulatory agencies is miserly. . . . Government cracks, and there is widespread public resignation to corruption as the inevitable consequence of that government. . . .

"The leaders of the most powerful political machine in the state have set the general standard (of behavior) through a history of profitable and open association with organized crime figures."

The Herald was one of a group of newspapers and broadcast outlets whose employees participated in the IRE effort.

Among the team's findings as reported by the Herald were:

—Organized crime "is staging a blitzkrieg invasion of Phoenix, Tucson and other Arizona cities." The IRE said it had been able "to identify more than 200 persons in Arizona with ties to nationally recognized organized crime families."

—The state has become a haven for white-collar swindlers who "have often been encouraged by officials of both political parties who have joined them in attractive business deals and itchy-palmed public officials eager to look the other way for a price."

—Arizona has become "perhaps the single most concentrated corridor of illegal narcotics entry into the U.S."

—According to the Herald account, most people contacted by the IRE group agreed to be interviewed. "Exceptions were (U.S.) Sen. (Barry) Goldwater (R-Ariz.), the giant Del Webb Corp., the Valley National Bank and two Phoenix businessmen. Officers of the Webb Corp., once headed by Del Webb, former co-owner of the New York Yankees, refused to be interviewed after a reporter told an official of the publicly held building company that IRE was interested in delving into specific mob stockholdings in the firm."

The difficulty of trying to make scientific assessments, more than a quarter of a century after the experiment, is accentuated by the lack of complete records. Army officials have said that the protocol, or scientific blueprint, has been lost. But it seems clear that the Army, assuming that Serratia was harmless, made no attempt at the time to investigate whether human infections followed the aerosol's release over San Francisco. The tests seem to have been confined to sampling for Serratia at scattered collection points in the target area.

These officials also said that the strain of Serratia marcescens used in the San Francisco biological warfare testing was no longer available, so that bacteriologists cannot now do tests that might provide evidence for or against the connection theory.

FURTHER, ARMY officials have said they did the studies under presidential mandate and congressional supervision to help the United States catch up with the biological warfare capabilities of foreign powers. Much has been learned about Serratia and other infections since then. Also, these officials maintain that they are now in the scientifically difficult, if not impossible, position of proving that there was no cause and effect.

Nevertheless, the situation raises many questions about the coincidence and also the scientific merit of reports published in medical journals by doctors who were unaware of crucial factors that might have influenced the scientific interpretation of the data collected when biological warfare testing was done secretly.

The Stanford outbreak might have gone undetected had Anne Zuckerman, a laboratory technician, been less alert. Dr. Richard P. Wheat, who reported the outbreak with Miss Zuckerman and the late Dr. Lowell A. Rantz, said, "It was sort of a fluke."

WHEAT, WHO NOW practices internal medicine in Los Altos, said in an interview that Miss Zuckerman became curious about the unusual finding of Serratia, an organism thought to be harmless, in the blood specimens from a patient. That finding led the doctors to look for it in other patients.

"Lord knows how many others we didn't get," Wheat said.

Swindlers reap prison pleasures

federal prisoner, Phillis Brady, a former Catholic nun who also was allowed to attend Colson's Bible study class.

Halverson's companion for the Rose Parade and Rose Bowl game — in addition to his wife — was H. Kent Russell, former president of a San Francisco export firm, convicted of defrauding two banks and a Chinese steel company.

Russell defrauded the firms out of more than $850,000 then gave half of it to a one-time East Coast organized-crime figure who was involved in a lease with the City of San Francisco.

Russell pleaded guilty and was given a three-year sentence.

Less than six months later he was sitting with Halverson on the 50-yard-line at the Rose Bowl game.

The trip by Halverson and Russell to the parade and game did not violate prison policy, warden Lee Jett says.

Trips, where prisoners are allowed to go to a specific place for a short time, have different requirements than furloughs, where prisoners are allowed complete freedom.

"A prisoner must have served at least six months of his federal prison term and at least three months at Terminal Island before being considered for community trips," the warden explains. "Plus, they must have a 90-day clear conduct record. These men have met those criteria."

As far as furloughs are concerned, Jett said, they were allowed because it "may have been the judgment of the staff that they have served half of their expected sentence."

"Normally," the warden explained, "a person sentenced to 10 years can be paroled in three-and-a-half years. If in the opinion of the staff, and considering the prisoner's background, we feel he will be paroled in three-and-a-half years, all he has to serve is a little over a year and a half to be allowed out on furlough."

It's guess on the part of the staff, the warden said, on when the prisoner will be released.

"A car thief, given five years to serve, may have to serve the whole thing — depending on his background, etc. It's a 'guesstimation' on our part," he said.

Jett, however, admitted that perhaps an "exception" was made in the case of Halverson's trip to Washington, but, he said, it was for a good cause.

"Chuck Colson's turnaround . . . his switch to religion . . . has the support of the Washington office . . .

"A male and female are selected to go to Washington and are housed in a half-way house under close supervision.

"The people taken," he says, "have to have a sort of religious interest at the institutional level, get indoctrinated and spread the word."

At the Terminal Island Prison, the only word that has spread was that Halverson and his kind have "the juice to get out from behind bars when others — more than qualified — can't."

The federal prison system was similarly involved in preferential treatment of prisoners when, in 1971, San Diego millionaire John Alessio was allowed to leave Lompoc Federal Prison on trips and furloughs in return for favors — fishing trips, weekends in Las Vegas, liquor and gifts — to prison personnel. Four prison guards from the facility were charged with accepting bribes and fired.

probably annoy some Israeli public figures.

Making a distinction from the human rights situation in Israel proper, which is judged to be without serious problems, the report said the situation in the occupied Arab territories "is different from that in Israel proper because of the inevitable tension between the occupying authorities and the indigenous population."

It said that as of last May Israel "had about 3,100 Arabs under arrest or in prison who were not Israeli-citizen Arabs and were overwhelmingly inhabitants of the occupied territories." In the summary, the State Department listed violations by Israel of human rights in the occupied lands.

Bombing linked to Carter visit plans

MARLBORO, Mass. (AP) — A bomb damaged a factory Saturday night and an anonymous caller linked the blast to President Carter's plan to visit nearby Clinton, authorities said.

The explosion occurred at the Ideal Roller Co., a two-story concrete factory that manufactures rollers for printing presses. The plant was closed at the time and no injuries were reported.

About 30 minutes after the blast, an unidentified man telephoned the Boston office of United Press International and said the Sam Melville-Jonathan Jackson Unit was claiming responsibility for the blast. The unit is an underground group that has linked itself to several other bombings in the Boston area.

stock because it is calving season. "The wind is knocking the young calves over," he said.

A Union Pacific railroad spokesman said a work train with 20 crew members was isolated between Cheyenne Wells, Colo., and Sharon Springs, Kan.

"Reports from our roadmasters indicate some drifts in the Cheyenne Wells area are 25 to 30 feet deep," the spokesman said. "We've been unable to get into Cheyenne Wells, and we're hopeful our train is all right . . . There are cars on the train with heat, and, barring something unusual, everyone should be all right."

The spokesman said no trains would run between Denver and Kansas City until the storm was over.

A Colorado Highway Patrol spokesman at Sterling in northeastern Colorado said highway crews were reopening roads as the storm moved eastward. Westbound traffic from Sterling to Denver was reopened late Saturday morning, but eastbound traffic was still cut off.

"Virtually every town east of Sterling is isolated," the spokesman said. "We are getting to stranded motorists as fast we can. They rescued about 20 people from the Crook rest area, and we have crews trying to get to a family stranded in a vehicle in the Yuma area."

In Strasburg, Colo., 200 stranded motorists abandoned their cars along Interstate 70 and U.S. 36 and doubled the population of the community about 40 miles east of Denver.

At least 340 persons were stuck in southwestern and south-central South Dakota.

Ninety elementary and high school students stayed at a schoolhouse in Mission, S.D., when they were unable to get home in the blizzard.

"We've got films and things for them," said county school Supt. Glenn Barnes. "We're feeding them through the hot lunch program."

A group of 50 senior citizens

from Canada was also stranded in Mission, a community of about 750. Members of the group, aged 64 to 81, were returning to Manitoba and Saskatchewan from California.

Three buses carrying more than 400 Kansas City vacationers headed for Colorado's ski slopes were stranded at Goodland, Kan., and at Burlington, Colo.

About 200 travelers waited out the storm in a city auditorium in Kadoka, S.D., after Interstate 90 was closed by snow drifts. The group included 50 youngsters en route to Mitchell to participate in a swimming meet.

"Snowplows haven't turned a wheel," said a local police officer. "It could be tomorrow before they get out of here."

Power outages were widespread in South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado. Restaurant operators said they were running out of food and motel owners said as many as seven people were crammed into single rooms.

Bolles murder probe team bares Arizona corruption

Associated Press

A team of reporters who spent six months in Arizona after the murder of newsmen Don Bolles have ended their investigation of the state. A published account of the team's report says they found widespread evidence of organized crime, often condoned by local political leaders.

The Miami Herald carried a Page 1 article today saying the account was the first of a copy-righted series by the Investigative Reporters and Editors (IRE).

The story was mostly general, outlining the extent of crime in Arizona. The story included few specific instances of wrongdoing or names of individuals involved. The Herald version of the reporters' story said: "Laws, even when they are enforced, are inadequate. The staffing of police and regulatory agencies is miserly. . . . Government creaks, and there is widespread public resignation to corruption as the inevitable consequence of that government. . . .

"The leaders of the most powerful political machine in the state have set the general standard (of behavior) through a history of profitable and open association with organized crime figures."

The Herald was one of a group of newspapers and broadcast outlets whose employees participated in the IRE effort.

Among the team's findings as reported by the Herald were:

—Organized crime "is staging a blitzkrieg invasion of Phoenix, Tucson and other Arizona cities." The IRE said it had been able "to identify more than 200 persons in Arizona with ties to nationally recognized organized crime families."

—"The state has become a haven for white-collar swindlers" who "have often been encouraged by officials of both political parties who have joined them in attractive business deals and itchy-palmed public officials eager to look the other way for a price."

—Arizona has become "perhaps the single most concentrated corridor of illegal narcotics entry into the U.S."

—According to the Herald account, most people contacted by the IRE group agreed to be interviewed. "Exceptions were (U.S.) Sen. (Barry) Goldwater (R-Ariz.), the giant Del Webb Corp., the Valley National Bank and two Phoenix businessmen. Officers of the Webb Corp., once headed by Del Webb, former co-owner of the New York Yankees, refused to be interviewed after a reporter told an official of the publicly held building company that IRE was interested in delving into specific mob stockholdings in the firm."

The real danger of keeping Concorde out of N.Y.

By Bernard Valery
Knight News Service

PARIS — If the New York Port Authority or the American courts deny the Concorde its landing rights in New York, it will be the equivalent of a death sentence. For why have a Concorde if it cannot land in one of the world's transportation capitals?

And if the world's most advanced airplane, which already has cost France and Britain close to $4 billion, dies, America's relations with its two oldest allies will be poisoned for years. Furthermore, it could increase the Communists' chances of coming to power in France.

This is the view shared by the most coolheaded observers on both sides of the English Channel, and even on both sides of the Atlantic.

"The reaction we fear is not so much some kind of retaliation or even lasting anger by the governments," a top-level American observer said last week. "America is no Liechtenstein. It's an economic giant, and meaningful reprisals by the French and the British against it are inconceivable."

"BUT THERE ARE CONSEQUENCES more important than just denying some American foodstuffs European outlets, as the French minister of foreign affairs hinted, or just saying in anger that 'Britain reserves the right to take whatever action it deems necessary' as Stanley Clifton Davies, the British Under Secretary for aviation, said."

"The real danger comes from the absolute conviction of the French, and to a lesser degree of the British, that there is a downright 'plot' against the Concorde by America's big business and even administration to deny the Europeans technological superiority over America. It might sound crazy to Americans aware of the constitutional independence of the New York Port Authority vs. Washington, but that's the inner conviction of every blue-blooded Frenchman and most Englishmen, and it will leave deep and lasting scars."

To illustrate the seething anger of the French the observer could have quoted from a front page blast last Tuesday in the major evening newspaper, France-Soir, by Jean Dutoit, a famous writer known for his extreme nationalism but in this case surely representing what many Frenchmen feel.

"We made America two presents, Lafayette and the Statue of Liberty, which led us to believe that nation loves us more than anything in the world. But the United States, which is a serious country, loves no one but itself. By preventing our Concorde from landing in New York, they feel they're doing something very useful for their economy, their aeronautical industry and their trade hegemony. . . . The stakes are too high: It is a question of killing the Franco-British aviation which dared to compete with the American lines."

This blast may sound intemperate, and even crazy, to Americans, but there has been too much suspicion of American motives abroad for years, and the Concorde affair only confirms these suspicions to many of the British and French.

In France, these suspicions have a supplementary, dangerous effect. Today and next Sunday, France goes to the polls for municipal elections, which are normally nonpolitical. This time, however, the election is highly political. It will serve as an indicator and a spur for legislative elections, which must take place by 1978 but possibly earlier.

The Communists have pounced on the Concorde affair and are plugging, with even more violence, the same line as the rightist Dutoit. "We always told you Americans were our enemies," is the Communist line today. Let the Concorde die and they'll gain thousands of votes on that issue alone, experts here agree.

Why landing rights in New York are a matter of life and death for the plane is easily explained:

In the one year the supersonic has been exploited by the British Airways and Air France, it ran a deficit of nearly $50 million.

On the London-Bahrain and Paris-Rio-Caracas route, the plane flew practically half empty. On London-

Washington and Paris-Washington routes it had an occupancy of around 70 per cent.

Air France experts calculate that only the passenger-rich New York run would get the plane out of the red by 1980. Without that hope, neither the French nor the British government would continue to subsidize the plane.

Moreover, out of 16 planes to be built by 1980, only nine are in service now: five British and four French. Several countries — Iran, Saudi Arabia, China and eventually Japan — would be interested in buying or leasing the planes when they come off the production line. But none will touch the plane unless it is allowed to land in New York.

The direct effects of the Concorde's death would probably be less serious than the French and the British predict. For instance, because the 16 planes are to be finished by 1980, the British have already started laying off workers, more than 1,500 last year. The French are worried chiefly about some 180,000 subcontractors who would be badly hurt if production were to stop altogether.

What hurts most, however, and what makes the French scream, is the feeling of being powerless before the American giant, seeing a dream come to an end without its having been given a chance. It's sad, and it's bad, most Frenchmen feel.

But hope that, perhaps through the American courts, the plane will somehow be allowed to land in New York has not entirely vanished.

Luxury-car rings stealing to order

New York Times Service

PARIS — The French police have disclosed that the clandestine export of stolen luxury cars to the Middle East and Southern Europe has grown into a $15-million-a-year business.

The police estimate that 6,500 such cars were stolen here last year and conveyed to their destinations with forged certificates.

It is an elaborate racket with scant risk and considerable profit, said chief detective Georges Pajot, head of the Interior Ministry's automobile theft squad, adding that the cars were almost invariably stolen to order.

"On the campuses of the Emirates of the Persian Gulf," he said, "there is so much wealth now because of oil that students who would own a motorbike here want the latest Mercedes, say the 450 model — say light blue."

"THERE IS SO much work to be done on luxury cars that they tend to be slow in coming out of the factories," he went on. "Delays in delivery may take months, but what that student wants, he wants right now. Local tipsters for the car thieves sit around in the cafes and listen. They may overhear the student tell a friend the kind of car he would like to buy. So the tipster would tell the gang's local representative, who would seek out the student and offer delivery of that very same car for the following week."

Unrealistic MIA hopes cautioned

By James Gerstleazang
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Carter met Saturday with his special commission to Vietnam and Laos and warned against unrealistic expectations for full information about servicemen and civilians missing in action.

The five-member panel, headed by United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock, begins its mission today. It is expected to arrive in Hanoi Wednesday to seek answers to questions about the 2,550 persons listed as missing in action or presumed dead.

"We now have an opportunity to start communications with the Vietnamese government that I hope will lead to complete normalization of relations," the President told the panel in the Cabinet Room during a 45-minute meeting that preceded a luncheon at the State Department.

Meanwhile, Rep. Lester L. Wolff, D-N.Y., chairman of the House subcommittee on Asian and Pacific affairs, had written to former President Nixon and former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to ask about pledges they may have made for postwar aid to North Vietnam in 1973.

"In view of the present administration's probable intention of normalizing relations with Vietnam, it becomes essential that the subcommittee be able to document Vietnamese expectations in this matter," he wrote.

CARTER TOLD THE commission that soon after he took office Jan. 20 the administration asked Vietnamese leaders how soon such a panel could visit Hanoi. He said the leaders "responded very warmly" two weeks later, offering alternate dates when they "could spend almost full time" with the visitors.

He said this indicated the importance they attach to the visit.

Associate White House Press Secretary Jerrold Schecter said the group would spend three days in Hanoi.

He said Laotian leaders recently agreed to let the panel stop in Vientiane, but the dates for the visit had not been set.

He also said an attempt had been made to contact Cambodian leaders to let the group visit their nation for the same purpose of the Hanoi and Vientiane visits but "we haven't had any answer yet."

Schecter said the U.S. ambassador in Bangkok had been asked to look into a report from a refugee reaching the Thai capital from Haiphong that Americans were living in Vietnam. But the spokesman said no evidence had substantiated similar reports in the past.

In a statement issued after the morning meeting, Carter said:

"I am hopeful that this step we are taking will meet with a positive response and put in motion a process that will obtain the fullest possible accounting for our men who sacrificed so much for their country."

"At the same time, we recognize that information may never be available on many of them. Some were lost over water, or over heavily forested areas and mountainous terrain, where information may never be found or will be very slow in developing. So we are not unrealistic in our expectations."

THE PRESIDENT SAID he hoped the commission, upon its return, "will report that the Vietnamese share my desire to put the period of war behind us and look ahead rather than backward."

Woodcock, in a statement issued through the White House press office, echoed the President's warning, saying: "Although we seek an accounting for all our missing men, we should not expect the impossible."

But, he said, "I trust that we can find a key to the solution of the MIA problem."

Clinton readies for Carter

CLINTON, Mass. (AP) — Clinton merchants prepared for Jimmy Carter's St. Patrick's Day eve visit Saturday by selling corages made with green carnations and peanuts and putting in a supply of bumper stickers reading "Where the hell is Clinton? Ask President Carter."

In the town hall, the chairman of the Board of Selectmen dipped into a bright green drum to draw the names of 800 residents who will be allowed to attend the town meeting with Carter on Wednesday.

Clinton is the first stop in the President's planned series of "meet-the-people" trips around the nation.

The 50 or so townsfolk who gathered for Saturday's drawing cheered and applauded when they heard their names or the names of friends called out by the town election warden.

About 13,000 people live in Clinton, but the town auditorium seats only 1,165 people on its long rows of wooden folding chairs, and some of those chairs have been set aside for reporters, White House officials and security agents.

Some 3,000 people mailed in coupons clipped out of the local newspaper to be eligible for the drawing. After the names were selected, a three-man board of registrars certified that the winners were actually Clinton residents.

"This is the biggest thing to happen in Clinton since VJ Day," said Selectman Alan Jewett. "People were dancing in the streets. Maybe they will be again Wednesday night."

Signs welcoming the President were hung throughout the largely Irish-American and Roman Catholic town on Saturday, many of them shamrock-shaped.

One enterprising vendor hawked leftover "Carter for President" lapel pins at 75 cents apiece.

Unrealistic MIA hopes cautioned

By James Gerstenzang
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Carter met Saturday with his special commission to Vietnam and Laos and warned against unrealistic expectations for full information about servicemen and civilians missing in action.

The five-member panel, headed by United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock, begins its mission today. It is expected to arrive in Hanoi Wednesday to seek answers to questions about the 2,550 persons listed as missing in action or presumed dead.

"We now have an opportunity to start communications with the Vietnamese government that I hope will lead to complete normalization of relations," the President told the panel in the Cabinet Room during a 45-minute meeting that preceded a luncheon at the State Department.

Meanwhile, Rep. Lester L. Wolff, D-N.Y., chairman of the House subcommittee on Asian and Pacific affairs, has written to former President Nixon and former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to ask about pledges they may have made for postwar aid to North Vietnam in 1973.

"In view of the present administration's probable intention of normalizing relations with Vietnam, it becomes essential that the subcommittee be able to document Vietnamese expectations in this matter," he wrote.

CARTER TOLD THE commission that soon after he took office Jan. 20 the administration asked Vietnamese leaders how soon such a panel could visit Hanoi. He said the leaders "responded very warmly" two weeks later, offering alternate dates when they "could spend almost full time" with the visitors.

He said this indicated the importance they attach to the visit.

Associate White House Press Secretary Jerrold Schechter said the group would spend three days in Hanoi.

He said Laotian leaders recently agreed to let the panel stop in Vientiane, but the dates for the visit had not been set.

He also said an attempt had been made to contact Cambodian leaders to let the group visit their nation for the same purpose of the Hanoi and Vientiane visits but "we haven't had any answer yet."

Schechter said the U.S. ambassador in Bangkok had been asked to look into a report from a refugee reaching the Thai capital from Haiphong that Americans were living in Vietnam. But the spokesman said no evidence had substantiated similar reports in the past.

In a statement issued after the morning meeting, Carter said:

'Cheap' solar-energy for homes seen

By Tom Raum
Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Solar energy will be the cheapest way to warm homes and heat water in many parts of the nation by 1980, a study prepared for a congressional committee concluded Saturday.

The study also said solar heat will be economically more practical in colder northern portions of the United States before it is in the sun-belt states.

Prepared by a computer research team at the University of New Mexico and released by the House-Senate Joint Economic Committee, the study said solar heating will be cheaper than either gas or oil by 1980 in Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wyoming, Wisconsin, New York, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine.

By 1985, it will be the cheapest form of home heating in Idaho, Utah, California, Colorado, Nebraska, New Mexico, Iowa, Missouri, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia and Maryland, the study added.

The study assumed Congress will act to remove federal price limits on natural gas, now the nation's cheapest fuel, and that both gas and oil prices will continue to rise with inflation.

It said in more than half the states, solar heat is already cheaper for new homes than electric heat.

The study said it now costs about $1,350 to install a solar space heating system in the average new home and about $4,200 to equip the average old home for solar heat.

The study results were based on a computer analysis of the various forms of heating and their associated fuel costs.

"Solar feasibility begins in the northern tier of states and with very few exceptions systematically moves southward," the study said.

It listed two main reasons:

—Heating requirements in the South are less than in the North, so it will take longer for a solar heating system, with its high initial installation cost, to pay for itself, despite abundant amounts of sunshine in many southern areas.

—Conventional fuels are generally more expensive in the North than in the South, where they are produced. This will be especially true if Congress lifts the federal price limits that now apply to natural gas shipped in interstate pipelines, the study noted. President Carter is expected to recommend some form of gas price deregulation in the energy plan he submits to Congress on April 20.

"If natural gas prices remain controlled near current levels, homeowners who can obtain natural gas will have no incentive to substitute solar energy which will invariably cost more," the study said.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., vice chairman of the joint committee, said the study has "convinced me the federal government should temporarily subsidize the installation of solar energy equipment in homes and offices."

Humphrey, a leading congressional backer of solar energy, said a good first step would be for Congress to approve his proposal for a $2,000 tax credit for homeowners who install solar heating devices.

Byrd says dam cuts a 'waste'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Discontinuing 19 federal water projects on which millions of dollars has been spent would "be an exorbitant waste of money," Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd declared Saturday.

"Most of these projects, if not all, can continue to be justified," he said.

The Carter administration's plan to terminate the projects and the Senate's action to keep them afloat form the basis for a rift between the new President and Congress.

Byrd told reporters that he predicted all along "there would be spats from time to time during the honeymoon and this is one of them. I expect, though, to have generally good harmony overall."

THE FLAP began with the way in which the project cuts were revealed. Members of the Senate and House complained that they were not consulted beforehand and were given little notice of the cuts before the administration made its fiscal 1978 budget proposals public.

Consultations last week between Carter, his budget and Interior Department advisers and a delegation from Congress did not cause the administration to retreat. Carter said he would be willing to see the projects reinstated if further studies show they can be justified.

The Senate then adopted an amendment to a $4 billion public works bill Thursday that will restore the projects if it is enacted. The amendment passed 65 to 24 with 35 Democrats supporting it.

The administration cited economic and environmental reasons as justifications for cutting the 19 projects. The Army Corps of Engineers has reportedly used similar criteria in drawing up a list of 38 additional projects that could be cut.

BYRD SAID that the 19 projects would all be important in energy production, irrigation for food crops or creating or sustaining jobs.

"I think it's certainly a waste of money to stop a project on which millions of dollars have already been spent and which has gone through the lengthy legislative justification process," he said.

Byrd says dam cuts a 'waste'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Discontinuing 19 federal water projects on which millions of dollars has been spent would "be an exorbitant waste of money," Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd declared Saturday.

"Most of these projects, if not all, can continue to be justified," he said.

The Carter administration's plan to terminate the projects and the Senate's action to keep them afloat form the basis for a rift between the new President and Congress.

Byrd told reporters that he predicted all along "there would be spats from time to time during the honeymoon and this is one of them. I expect, though, to have generally good harmony overall."

THE FLAP began with the way in which the project cuts were revealed. Members of the Senate and House complained that they were not consulted beforehand and were given little notice of the cuts before the administration made its fiscal 1978 budget proposals public.

Consultations last week between Carter, his budget and Interior Department advisers and a delegation from Congress did not cause the administration to retreat. Carter said he would be willing to see the projects reinstated if further studies show they can be justified.

The Senate then adopted an amendment to a $4 billion public works bill Thursday that will restore the projects if it is enacted. The amendment passed 65 to 24 with 35 Democrats supporting it.

The administration cited economic and environmental reasons as justifications for cutting the 19 projects. The Army Corps of Engineers has reportedly used similar criteria in drawing up a list of 38 additional projects that could be cut.

BYRD SAID that the 19 projects would all be important in energy, production, irrigation for food, crops or creating or sustaining jobs.

"I think it's certainly a waste of money to stop a project on which millions of dollars have already been spent and which has gone through the lengthy legislative justification process," he said.

POLICE BLOCK AVENUE IN ROME IN FACE OF VAST STUDENT RIOTING —AP Wirephoto

Widespread riots rake Italy

A police officer was assassinated earlier in the day in Turin, apparently in retaliation for the student's death during a clash with police Friday.

Widespread rioting continued into the night in Bologna and Rome, and at least six policemen were wounded by gunfire.

In Rome, some 50,000 youths arrived in trains and buses from across Italy for a mass march that spread terror through parts of the historic center of the city.

Clouds of tear gas filled major squares; there were frequent exchanges of gunfire, and cars were set afire, stores firebombed and bystanders threatened.

After police broke up the march, small groups of protesters prowled the streets, throwing Molotov cocktails that generally caused little damage.

Some 30 youths were picked up for questioning. The national news agency ANSA reported police officials had to calm down some enraged officers involved in the arrests.

Bologna's city center became a battlefield between police and students who were tossing firebombs, cobblestones and pieces of metal.

THE MARCHES, following two weeks of student demonstrations, were prompted by the shooting in Bologna of Pierfrancesco Lorusso, 25, a medical student.

Big quake ravages repaired

By Alexander Higgins
Associated Press

PLUESTI, Romania (AP) — Workers in Romania's petrochemical industry have worked seven days a week and gone without sleep since the March 4 earthquake to restore production. "Now things are going to be easier," one worker said Saturday.

The massive quake, which killed more than 1,300 persons, also knocked out some 200 factories, many of them in Ploesti, the center of the country's petrochemical industry. Officials estimated the production loss caused by the quake at $50 million and the total damage nationwide at $500 million.

"All industrial activity stopped for about two days until electricity was restored," said Gheorghe Dinu, the Communist Party's district economic secretary. "Industrial halls collapsed, destroying everything underneath."

THE TREMOR also killed 26 persons in Ploesti, whose oil fields were a target of Allied bombing raids during World War II.

Romania has the second largest petroleum reserves in Europe after the Soviet Union, and a healthy petrochemical industry is essential to the country's economic stability.

Since the quake, workers have stayed on the job seven days a week and up to 10 hours a day to get the plants back into production. Dinu said most of the plants were operating again, but 14 were not yet at normal capacity.

President Nicolae Ceausescu, playing down speculation that the quake would derail the country's economic plans, told foreign reporters last week

"we are determined to change nothing in our development plans."

"In the beginning it was very difficult until we made the inventory," said Gheorghe Stanescu, an engineer at the Valea Calgareasca chemical fertilizer plant. "I've slept no more than two hours a night since the earthquake."

Red gains expected in France

By John Vinocur
Associated Press

PARIS — France votes today in nationwide municipal elections that are expected to bring extensive gains for the left wing and give the Communist Party its deepest penetration into public life here since the end of World War II.

The Socialist Party newspaper L'Unité in its weekend edition predicted victory for joint Socialist-Communist slates in 36 cities with populations over 30,000 now controlled by parties allied to the parliamentary majority of President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing.

An informant close to the Gaullist party said it could lose 50 cities over the two-stage voting procedure, involving run-off elections next Sunday in places where there is no majority on the first round. Among them is Paris, where a mayor is being elected for the first time in 105 years.

THROUGH their alliance with the Socialists, the Communists are expected to become part of municipal government in about 2,000 towns where they have never had an elected role. Since the first French governments after World War II, the party has not shared power on the national level, maintaining roughly 20 per cent of the popular vote in major elections.

Until now a poor weathervane for judging national political trends in France, the municipal elections this year are highly politicized and widely regarded as a significant factor in shaping opinion and tactics for next year's legislative elections, which polls indicate the left coalition could win.

There are 33.3 million eligible voters for the first municipal elections in six years. They will pick about 475,000 city council members in 36,575 communities. Computer projections on the outcome are expected shortly after the polls close at 8 p.m. (11 a.m. PST).

AMONG the big cities that could move to the left are Toulouse, Rennes, Montpellier, Le Mans, Toulon, Brest, Nantes and Nancy. At present, the left runs about 115 of 221 cities with populations over 30,000, but the figure is imprecise because some municipal governments and leaders reject party labels.

If the swing to the left develops as expected, according to a Socialist source, the Socialists should take control of the mayors' offices in about two-thirds of the 36 key cities moving left, with the Communists getting one-third.

But the Socialists appeared to give more than they got from the Communists in agreeing to set up joint tickets with them for the first time. In cities where they were already in power, notably Lille and Grenoble, they have given the Communists 263 "safe" municipal council seats. The Communists, who control the city of and many municipalities in the Paris suburbs, are turning over only 78 seats from their strongholds to the Socialists.

The Socialist turnover of votes has been widely condemned by the middle-of-the-road parties as a "historic surrender" to the weaker Communists.

In Paris, attention was centered on the first-round battle for leadership among the capital's non-Socialist voters between Jacques Chirac, the Gaullist leader and former premier, and Michel d'Ornano, the minister of industry handpicked for the race by Giscard d'Estaing.

The two have fought bitterly to eliminate each other in the first round, hoping to gather in the anti-left votes in the traditionally Gaullist city for the runoff.

The revival of the post of mayor of Paris, formerly administered by the central government and a weak municipal council, came on an initiative by the president that may have backfired. Although warned that a mayor could be a dangerous political rival, Giscard d'Estaing sought to strengthen his own power base by picking the bland d'Ornano as his candidate. But the calculations were upset when Chirac, a potential rival for the presidency in 1981, announced he was in the race. A virulent campaign followed, with the moderate parties appearing increasingly divided and local issues pushed aside. Men putting up campaign posters for the Chirac and d'Ornano camps clashed early Saturday, and a policeman who tried to intervene was hospitalized in serious condition. In Draguignan, near Cannes, a Socialist Party worker was run down by a truck, and in Lille the offices of Norbert Segard, secretary of state for post and telecommunications and non-Socialist candidate for mayor, were attacked.

'Car accident' kills Ugandan bishop's wife

LONDON (AP) — The wife of a Ugandan bishop of the Anglican Church has been reported killed in an auto accident in Uganda, but church leaders question the official version of her death, the Sunday Telegraph reported today.

It said in a front-page dispatch from Nairobi, Kenya, that Anglican officials in East Africa doubt the statement by President Idi Amin's government that the death of Mrs. Mary Nsubuga was accidental. Her husband, the Rt. Rev. Dunstan Nsubuga, is one of 18 bishops who have urged Amin to end what they believe is a purge against Christians in his country.

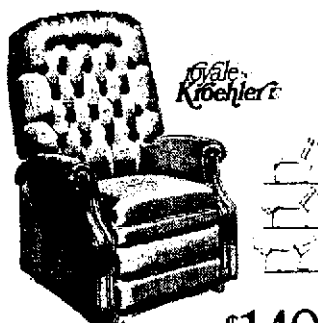

Anglican Archbishop Janani Luwum and two Ugandan cabinet ministers were killed Feb. 16 after they were accused of plotting to remove Amin, who is a Moslem. Amin said they were killed in a car accident, but refugees fleeing from Uganda said the three men were shot.

Associated Press

PARIS — France votes today in nationwide municipal elections that are expected to bring extensive gains for the left wing and give the Communist Party its deepest penetration into public life here since the end of World War II.

The Socialist Party newspaper L'Unité in its weekend edition predicted victory for joint Socialist-Communist slates in 38 cities with populations over 30,000 now controlled by parties allied to the parliamentary majority of President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing.

An informant close to the Gaullist party said it could lose 50 cities over the two-stage voting procedure, involving run-off elections next Sunday in places where there is no majority on the first round. Among them is Paris, where a mayor is being elected for the first time in 105 years.

THROUGH their alliance with the Socialists, the Communists are expected to become part of municipal government in about 2,000 towns where they have never had an elected role. Since the first French governments after World War II, the party has not shared power on the national level, maintaining roughly 20 per cent of the popular vote in major elections.

Until now a poor weathervane for judging national political trends in France, the municipal elections this year are highly politicized and widely regarded as a significant factor in shaping opinion and tactics for next year's legislative elections, which polls indicate the left coalition could win.

There are 33.3 million eligible voters for the first municipal elections in six years. They will pick about 475,000 city council members in 36,575 communities. Computer projections on the outcome are expected shortly after the polls close at 8 p.m. (11 a.m. PST).

AMONG the big cities that could move to the left are Toulouse, Rennes, Montpellier, Le Mans, Toulon, Brest, Nantes and Nancy. At present, the left runs about 115 of 221 cities with populations over 30,000, but the figure is imprecise because some municipal governments and leaders reject party labels.

If the swing to the left develops as expected, according to a Socialist source, the Socialists should take control of the mayors' offices in about two-thirds of the 36 key cities moving left, with the Communists getting one-third.

But the Socialists appeared to give more than they got from the Communists in agreeing to set up joint tickets with them for the first time. In cities where they were already in power, notably Lille and Grenoble, they have given the Communists 263 "safe" municipal council seats. The Communists, who control the city of and many municipalities in the Paris suburbs, are turning over only 78 seats from their strongholds to the Socialists.

The Socialist turnover of votes has been widely condemned by the middle-of-the-road parties as a "historic surrender" to the weaker Communists.

In Paris, attention was centered on the first-round battle for leadership among the capital's non-Socialist voters between Jacques Chirac, the Gaullist leader and former premier, and Michel d'Ornano, the minister of industry handpicked for the race by Giscard d'Estaing.

The two have fought bitterly to eliminate each other in the first round, hoping to gather in the anti-left votes in the traditionally Gaullist city for the runoff.

The revival of the post of mayor of Paris, formerly administered by the central government and a weak municipal council, came on an initiative by the president that may have backfired. Although warned that a mayor could be a dangerous political rival, Giscard d'Estaing sought to strengthen his own power base by picking the bland d'Ornano as his candidate. But the calculations were upset when Chirac, a potential rival for the presidency in 1981, announced he was in the race. A virulent campaign followed, with the moderate parties appearing increasingly divided and local issues pushed aside.

Men putting up campaign posters for the Chirac and d'Ornano camps clashed early Saturday, and a policeman who tried to intervene was hospitalized in serious condition. In Draguignan, near Cannes, a Socialist Party worker was run down by a truck, and in Lille the offices of Norbert Segard, secretary of state for post and telecommunications and non-Socialist candidate for mayor, were attacked.

'Car accident' kills Ugandan bishop's wife

LONDON (AP) — The wife of a Ugandan bishop of the Anglican Church has been reported killed in an auto accident in Uganda, but church leaders question the official version of her death, the Sunday Telegraph reported today.

It said in a front-page dispatch from Nairobi, Kenya, that Anglican officials in East Africa doubt the statement by President Idi Amin's government that the death of Mrs. Mary Nsubuga was accidental. Her husband, the Rt. Rev. Dunstan Nsubuga, is one of 18 bishops who have urged Amin to end what they believe is a purge against Christians in his country.

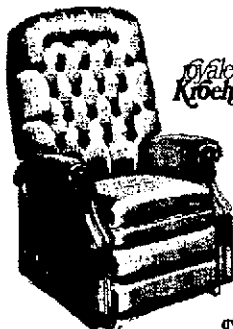

Anglican Archbishop Janani Luwum and two Ugandan cabinet ministers were killed Feb. 16 after they were accused of plotting to remove Amin, who is a Moslem. Amin said they were killed in a car accident, but refugees fleeing from Uganda said the three men were shot.

Japanese yen for movies declining

By Kathryn Tolbert
Associated Press

TOKYO — The Japanese aren't going to movies as much as they used to, and the film industry is feeling the pinch.

In 1960, the average Japanese went to about one movie a month. Now he sees less than two a year, compared with five or six for Americans. As a result, in the last 15 years, the number of theaters in Japan dropped to 2,500 from 7,500, and Nikkatsu, Japan's oldest movie company, is reeling under a $27.6-million deficit.

Imports such as "Jaws" and "Towering Inferno" are making inroads in Japan, which long had been one of the few countries where domestically produced films made more money than imports. But last year, for the first time, revenue from foreign films exceeded that of Japanese movies.

"Japan has experienced a bigger and faster decline in the movie industry than other countries," says Mrs. Kashiko Kawakita, head of the Japan Film Library Council.

The malaise has hit each of the Big Four Japanese movie companies — Nikkatsu, Toho, Toei and Shochiku — which produced the bulk of domestic movies. They released 552 feature films in 1960 and 169 last year. Now the small, independent companies are left to produce artistic cinema while the big ones concentrate on business problems.

"People are very worried, but they don't exactly know what to do," says Mrs. Kawakita. "Production costs are up tremendously, and it is very difficult to get investors for film making. The major companies are afraid to spend too much money."

The average budget for a film in Japan ranges from $300,000 to $800,000, peanuts by American standards where $1 million scrapes the bottom of the barrel and upwards of $20 million will buy "King Kong."

Part of the problem is that the Japanese have found new ways to spend their leisure time and pocket money.

"There aren't as many people who want to spend a quiet evening at the movie theater," says Susuma Suzuki, secretary general of the Motion Picture Producers Association of Japan.

The industry, aware of the change in leisure time tastes, turned theaters into bowling alleys, and some of the major companies diversified, investing in condominiums, cooking schools, flower shops, golf courses, restaurant chains, sauna baths, car rental agencies and billiard parlors.

Now there are complaints that the companies are putting all of their money into far-flung enterprises instead of investing in the production of good films.

In Japan, unlike the United States, movie companies produce the films, distribute the films and book the films in the theaters which they own — all of which leaves the ailing industry on a merry-go-round.

Isao Matsuoka, vice president of Toho, admits: "If we didn't own the theaters, it would be difficult to sell our films. If we made only good films, that would be fine, but they're not always good. But because we have the movie houses, we have to produce films to show in them."

Another problem is that porno flicks — "pink films" as they're called in Tokyo — are forbidden, so the film industry's board applies a strict code of ethics to avoid seizure and prosecution.

One such movie, Nagais Oashima's "L'Empire Des Sens," was filmed in Japan and produced in France. By the time it got to Japanese theaters, it was edited to the point where heads were connected to feet and some frames were blurred to disguise the goings-on.

No seizure. No prosecution. Possibly a buck.

THE INDUSTRY has gone to the government for help — with limited success. In 1973, the agency for cultural affairs started handing out $30,000 for the 10 best films. Two years later, the government dropped taxes on admission fees.

But for the most part, the industry has had to fend for itself, thinking of new ways to get back the old crowds. The Big Four has gone the way of the spaghetti Western — films of violence, sex and melodrama.

"The audience for the native product has dropped, and the Big Four movie companies are making those films they think will bring in a return," says Donald Ritchie, western expert of Japanese cinema.

Meanwhile, "King Kong" is running for 10 weeks at 175 Japanese theaters.

Like old soldiers, TV violence fading away

By Mike Goodkind
Associated Press

Television violence is not dying, but there are signs it is slowly fading

One producer sees downfall of action shows

Generally, network spokesmen say that current popular shows will not be dropped because of violent themes, but recent directives probably will limit the number of new action shows slated in the fall and possibly further into the future.

Some are taking the trend in stride; others, like David Gerber, executive producer of "Police Story" and "Police Woman," are biting the bullet, contending that the end of tube violence ultimately would mean the downfall of action adventure shows.

"Pressure groups, not the viewing audience at large," says Gerber, "are leveling such broad strokes at television that they are crippling any attempt at honesty in drama, honest reality, or just plain entertaining action shows, which people are entitled to."

"They are ruining serious quality, hour-long dramas."

A censor for NBC which buys Gerber's two police shows admits that the pressure groups are making an impression. "We have certainly been not unaware of the various groups which have been complaining about violence on television, and we have reacted to the extent that we have been examining the area much more carefully than before," says Jerome H. Stanley, NBC vice president of broadcast standards for the West Coast.

Among the groups decrying TV violence are the American Medical Association, the Parent-Teachers Association and the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting.

Some members of the advertising industry have vowed to monitor more closely where their dollars are spent, and the U.S. surgeon general has tentatively indicated that TV violence could have an effect on children.

NBC president Robert T. Howard has called for a reduction in violence. "We're saying, 'Enough of that. We're going to try new avenues.'"

ABC vice president Alfred R. Schneider, in a recent speech, makes clear that his network plans to continue some violence as part of a diversified program mix. But, he said, "it is clear that gratuitous, excessive violence serves no useful purpose."

CBS' Dick Kirschner, the West Coast program practice chief, doesn't see anti-violence as a new movement. "We've been involved in trying to cut down violence since 1968."

Joseph T. Naar, producer of ABC's popular "Starsky and Hutch," says network officials have not told him directly to limit violence but "they have told us we can explore humor, we can explore character a little more."

Why cancer scare

By Boyce Rensberger
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — If a small proportion of rats develop cancer when fed saccharin in doses hundreds of times larger than people could reasonably consume, does it make sense to consider saccharin a hazard for human beings?

The Food and Drug Administration's impending ban on the artificial sweetener and previous bans on many other substances were based on just such tests, and many people who are not familiar with animal testing question the logic of it.

As scientists look at the problem of chemical causes of cancer, however, relying on such experiments is not as unrealistic as it may appear.

Substances like saccharin cannot be properly tested on human beings for several reasons. It takes a quarter to a half a lifetime for many cancer-causing chemicals to produce tumors. One must kill the experimental subjects after a set time and look for tumors during an autopsy. The subjects would have to be isolated from other known cancer causes for the duration of the experiment; this would probably mean keeping people in environmentally controlled prisons.

Secret Witness cases, rewards

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 70 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $48,500 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of the selected and varying summaries of Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent, and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I.P.T. Secret Witness editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge an additional reward to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

How you can be a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret. You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column.

Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone (213) 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of James B. Milum, 28, wanted by Long Beach police as a fugitive from a no-bail bench warrant issued by Long Beach Superior Court Nov. 4, 1976, charging bad checks.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 38-year-old Rudy Unzueta, of Compton, shot to death by one of a youthful group while he was walking with his young niece in the 100 block of Bennett Street in Compton at 9 p.m. on Jan. 1.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Jack Adamson, 49-year-old seaman beaten to death with a tire iron during a street robbery on Anaheim Street near Flint Avenue in Wilmington at 2:30 a.m. on Dec. 17, 1976.

— A $1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and kidnap-robbery conviction, or $2,000 for the arrest and murder conviction, of persons responsible for the disappearance of Wilmington camper manufacturer Glenn Doughty, apparent victim of a robbery and kidnaping. Police checking Doughty's Fleet Aire agency at 1321 Alameda St. on Nov. 3, 1976, found the doors open and the safe standing open. Doughty's car, a 1976 Buick Regal with landau top, license 927-RCV, was missing.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Donald Lynch, 69-year-old owner of Don's

Turf Motel at 4732 Katella Ave., Los Alamitos, shot to death during a holdup at the motel at 11:05 p.m. on July 20, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the purse thief who attacked and knocked down Ruth Tournat, 78, of Long Beach, as she was walking on First Street at Atlantic Avenue at 7:20 p.m. May 14, 1976, causing injuries that resulted in her death on June 1, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Michael Lee Edmonds, 23, of Long Beach, found stabbed to death in Leland Park, on Gaffey Street south of Battery Street in San Pedro, on the morning of May 5, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 56-year-old Kermit Euland King, of Westminster, who was found stabbed to death with his pockets turned inside out in an alley behind the 1400 block on Walnut Avenue in Long Beach at 7:30 p.m. on April 12, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of 23-year-old John Anthony Whitehurst, of Lynwood, who was found lying shot to death beside his car parked in a driveway of the 1600 block of Stoneacre Drive in Compton on the night of Feb. 23, 1976.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of Douglas Lee Thompson, 23-year-old fugitive from a murder warrant in connection with the holdup slaying of David W. Arouette in his television repair shop at 6465 Long Beach Blvd. on Dec. 30, 1973, with an additional reward of $1,500 to be paid when and if Thompson is convicted of the murder.

FBI harassment charged

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An American Indian Movement leader charged FBI harassment Friday after he and two associates were held in their hotel room, guns at their heads, by FBI agents in search of a federal fugitive.

Vernon Bellacourt, AIM National Council director, called the incident an attempt to "intimidate and harass" AIM members.

"They continue to attack us in the same fashion — with that SWAT mentality," he said.

FBI spokesman Frank Perrone denied the charges, saying his men were responding to tips from two sources that inside the room was Stanley Richard Holder, an AIM member wanted for jumping bail before his sentencing on assault charges in 1975.

Perrone said his men were armed as a precaution and no harassment was involved.

Bellacourt said six agents knocked on the door of his room at the San Francisco hotel, and entered with guns drawn when the door opened. He said he heard a commotion from an adjoining room, and entered the main room to find his associates, Melvin Houston and Larry Kenton, with guns pointed to their heads.

"A pistol was immediately thrust in my face," said Bellacourt, who was in the city to address the California Compensatory Education Conference.

He said he told agents he recognized a picture he was shown of Holder. But after telling them he didn't know where Holder was, Bellacourt said the agents apologized and left.

"We didn't know what to expect," Perrone explained. "We had information that a man identical to this fugitive was in the hotel, and we acted on that basis." He added, "We will take whatever action it takes to neutralize the situation."

Charges against Holder stemmed from the Wounded Knee Occupation in Custer, S.D. in 1973.

Bellacourt and his brother, Clyde, are founding members of AIM, along with Dennis Banks and Russell Means.

'Drive-thru' burglar held

BEVERLY HILLS (AP) — A Los Angeles man who police said used a less-than-subtle technique was charged with the burglary of a leather store Saturday.

A man drove his car through the glass door of Wilson's House of Suede, scooped up a number of leather and suede coats and drove away, police said. But he was captured by police when he rammed a telephone pole.

Rodney Walker, 20, was held for the theft in the Beverly Hills Jail on $2,500 bond.

MARCELON JOHNSON OF HUNTINGTON BEACH HOPES TO LIVE FOREVER
Cryonics Member Wants To Be Frozen When She Dies, Later Unthawed

They'll freeze, if you please 'Immortalists' play it cool

By Brad Altman
Staff Writer

Long before Spanish explorer Ponce de Leon sought the Fountain of Youth, the dream of immortality excited man's imagination. For some, the thought of living forever remains as intriguing today.

These immortalists say scientists will have the technical know-how to keep people eternally young — someday.

But until that future arrives, some 100 members of the nationwide "cryonics movement" have a special request when doctors declare them clinically dead: they want their bodies frozen.

It's only a matter of time before scientists will be able to revive frozen cadavers, they believe. Cryonics devotees even wear Medic Alert bracelets on their wrists with engraved instructions for medical authorities to follow when they die: "Cool Body, Don't Embalm."

To date, 28 bodies are in storage at 320 degrees below Fahrenheit in tubular, gray, steel capsules in the San Fernando Valley, Berkeley, Michigan and Florida.

"People laugh and scoff at all great ideas," says 48-year-old Marcelon Johnson, a pioneer of the cryonics movement and wife of W.W. Johnson, head librarian for the city of Huntington Beach.

"One of my daughters came home from school one day and said her teacher was saying you're an idiot to believe frozen people can be unthawed and returned to life," says the Huntington Beach housewife and mother of six children.

"I told my daughter to tell him, 'May you rot in good health.'"

MRS. JOHNSON joined the cryonics movement in the mid-1960s after reading a book entitled "The Prospect for Immortality," by Richard Ettinger.

Today, a decade after the modern cryonics movement started, there are societies in Los Angeles, Michigan, Florida and in the San Francisco Bay area, home of the 50-member Trans Time Inc. of Berkeley.

Trans Time members sign up to be frozen, paying $1,000 for a lifetime membership and holding a $50,000 life insurance policy to cover the initial cost of freezing and the $2,000 a year maintenance after that.

Trans Time freezes or "cryonically suspends" the body, as president Art Quaipe terms the process.

Blood is flushed from the body and replaced with a saline solution — an antifreeze to protect tissues from the deep-freeze. The body is placed in a capsule and liquid nitrogen is added to maintain the "patient" at -196 degrees Celsius.

It's just a long nap after that, Quaipe says.

"THE BODIES look exactly the same today as the day they were frozen and conceivably there should be no deterioration for a thousand years," says Saul Kent, an immortality fan who assisted in four freezings in 1968 and 1969.

Kent, 37, is a medical writer and editor of "Aging Tomorrow," a bimonthly pamphlet on aging research.

Evidence is mounting yearly that proves living tissues can survive the freezing process, says Kent, noting freezing experiments with Arctic beetles, mouse and rat embryos, dog kidneys and cat brains.

"We're definitely on the right track," says Kent. "Research is quite slow, but even at this point there have been tremendous advances."

To Peter Zebot, a 30-year-old

Garden Grove bachelor, cryonics was in the same league with Buck Rogers space fantasies until he attended a few meetings of a Southland group called Alcor two years ago. Now he has a $50,000 life insurance policy with Alcor named as his beneficiary.

"THE PHILOSOPHY of cryonics is that it's desirable to strive to live for a long time and, ultimately, be immortal," says Zebot. "The bulk of people don't seem to think it's a realistic goal or even desirable."

Zebot, who grew up in Long Beach and was an Independent Press-Telegram paper boy for four years, holds a UCLA masters degree in business administration and works at Newport Beach's First Meridian Financial Corp.

Over lunch at a Garden Grove restaurant, Zebot told an interviewer he appreciates persons who are "open minded" and don't automatically label cryonics as bizarre or impossible.

Questions concerning the economic and ecological consequences of humans living forever will be pondered at a nationwide conference for life-extension buffs, to be held next March at a convention center near the Los Angeles International Airport.

Speakers who have expressed interest in attending include writer Ettinger, philosopher Timothy Leary and aging experts from USC's Andrus Gerontology Center, says Kent.

"Until recently the subject of death was taboo," says Kent. "We are challenging death. We want to avoid it, postpone it, challenge it."

Kent pauses. "Cryonics is insurance against what you don't want to happen. I figure being frozen is the second worst thing that can happen to you."

School board challenger rejects incumbents, I-PT

By Bob Houser
Staff Writer

Wayne Roy, the first runner-up in Long Beach school board elections of 1967 and 1969, Saturday challenged school district voters to reject the "smug" campaigns of incumbents and Independent Press-Telegram endorsements.

Roy is one of seven candidates contending for two seats on the board against incumbents Elizabeth Wallace and James Zarifes in Tuesday's election.

In his Saturday statement, Roy also criticized candidate Elliott Dixon, touching off a reaction that spread to Zarifes and the district administration.

Roy said he is overwhelmed and angered by "the fact that not once in this campaign has either incumbent met the public with the other candidates for an open public presentation and comparison of past performance, ideas or philosophy. Also, in most instances, they have refused to answer questionnaires sent to them by several different organizations."

Noting that the incumbents were first appointed to their board seats and thus have never stood for election except as incumbents, Roy said their attitude of ignoring candidate confrontation and questionnaires "is insulting and degrading to the parents and taxpayers of this school community."

"They must feel very smug and secure knowing the citizens' lack of knowledge, and apathy, practically guarantee their reelection."

"Worst of all," Roy continued, "the I.P.T. will no doubt once again just prior to election day come out with a big endorsement and stamped hallot for the incumbents."

"Come on, citizens and taxpayers of Long Beach, Lakewood, Signal Hill and Avalon; surely you deserve and will demand your own selection for once."

Roy suggested that his rejection by the Teachers Association of

Long Beach, which endorsed Dixon, may have been because of his (Roy's) refusal to join national and state teacher organizations because they "neither represent my political or educational philosophy and that also I would under no condition condone or consider appropriate a teacher strike."

While "a little envious" of T.A.R.'s $3,500 campaign contribution to Dixon, Roy said he is confident many teachers in the district will vote for him. And, citing Dixon's endorsement also by the district's classified employees (non-teachers), Roy suggested that Dixon, if elected, "will have an embarrassing role to play when these two groups come to the board for contract negotiations."

Dixon said he regards his endorsement by both teachers and classified employee groups as a "report card" on the incumbents "from those who know whether or not they've done a good job."

The hackers of Proposition X financed their successful drive for district elections in Long Beach last year with a $5.771 war chest that, in retrospect, makes their opponents seem like pikers by comparison.

According to statements filed with the City Clerk's office, the opponents spent only $1.171 in their bid to defeat the highly controversial measure, which passed by a slender 2.6 per cent vote margin last November.

The proposition's passage overturning the city's long-standing election system which required candidates in the nine councilmanic districts to run first on a district basis, then — if they were the two top vote getters in their respective districts — to submit to a citywide runoff election. From now on, a candidate need only win in his district to gain a council seat.

The disparity in campaign spending frankly surprised leaders of the Proposition X campaign.

"When I heard that a group had been formed to fight the proposition," says Carl Schiermeyer, head of the district elections drive, "I anticipated a well-advertised campaign in the neighborhood of $10,000 to $15,000."

Schiermeyer and others believe that the amount raised on behalf of the proposition was actually quite small, and that its real significance is distorted by the fact that so little was collected on the other side.

"For a citywide campaign," observes Councilman Ernie Kell, who was a heavy contributor to the Proposition X cause, "$5,000 is peanuts."

Exactly what accounted for the opposition's relatively meager financial backing is hard to pin down.

But one theory is that the opponents — spearheaded by the Chamber of Commerce — probably felt that their cause would succeed largely on the strength of the editorial support of the Independent Press-Telegram, which came out strongly against Proposition X.

At least that's the belief of Schiermeyer and James S. Hayes, both Democratic activists. Hayes, who is not to be confused with County Supervisor James A. Hayes, is a Democratic Party campaign consultant.

The theory is also supported in large measure by a source who was close to the campaign against Proposition X. As he puts it, the opponents "look for granted the power of the I.P.T.'s endorsement."

Beyond that, though, "the general idea of campaign contributions had become anathema to many people," he declares. And that scared off individuals who might otherwise have put money into the campaign, he adds.

Schiermeyer and Hayes believe that the opponents of Proposition X may also have been demoralized by a pre-election poll that showed a six-to-one majority in favor of district elections. The results of the poll were published in the news pages of the Independent Press-Telegram.

Then, too, says Schiermeyer, the opposition got a late start in the campaign, and that was probably a factor.

The financial statements show that the heaviest contributor to the campaign against Proposition X was Weckford Morgan, who gave $350.

Morgan, who was recently elected president of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, was co-chairman of "We the People for Responsible Government," which represented the organized opposition to Proposition X.

Morgan's contribution was eclipsed, however, by two $650 donations on behalf of the proposition.

The donations were made by Councilman Kell, an outspoken supporter of district elections, and Seaside Paint and Lacquer Co., a Westside firm owned by Joel Friedland. Friedland has been a strong opponent of the city's redevelopment efforts on the Westside.

In addition to his cash donation, Kell gave $139 in non-monetary contributions.

Schiermeyer and Hayes were also big contributors, giving $285 and $245, respectively.

The proposition found significant backing in the real estate community, too.

The Long Beach District Board of Realtors contributed $255 to the campaign, while two officials of the organization — first vice president Bernard Specht and executive vice president Dorothy Siegfried — each gave $50.

The other real estate contributors included Mel Salsman, who gave $100; Reg Dupuy, $75; L. & M. Realty, Inc., $50; Wofford Realty, Inc., $50; W. E. Deal, $50, and Donovan Rodman, $50.

Contributions of $30 or less accounted for the largest single portion of the Proposition X war chest. They added up to $1,449.

A reception held by Citizens for District Elections netted $222 for the campaign, while Coast Bank and its vice president, Nelson McCook, contributed $100 toward them.

Another prominent donor was E. John Hanna, who was recently appointed to the Long Beach Board of Harbor Commissioners. Hanna, director of industrial relations at the Long Beach Naval Shipyard and an unsuccessful council candidate two years ago, gave $125.

The other major contributors were Bee Chiswell, a homemaker, $175; Patrick O'Leary, a trust officer for the Bank of America, $135; Cantrell & Green, Inc., a law firm, $115; John M. Johnston, a community consultant, $100; Regina C. La Garde, retired, $85; Kenneth W. Sobieski, a salesman, $85; Harry Ryback, retired, $70, and Jerry E. Stein, a bookkeeper and treasurer for Citizens for District Elections, $60.

Goodbye to 2 old friends always been—a 20-minute oasis where cares and fatigue drop away with the sideburns and the fringe on top. You just know that when you leave the shop you'll look better and feel better. And probably you'll have a new joke or funny story to tell your friends.

The last time I saw Frank Mollica on duty was Feb. 19, the day before I entered Memorial Hospital. Characteristic of Frank, he was concerned for my welfare and recovery. "I'll be in the corner pulling for you," he said.

I didn't know that death would take Frank Mollica several days after that. Had I known I would have said some prayers, been in his corner pulling for him. But we don't know the hour of death's coming. And maybe it's a blessing. I'll leave the answer to that question to my Maker.

The essence of Frank Mollica was demonstrated when he asked me about Mrs. X and her husband and how they were getting on with their collection of newspapers consigned to the trash barrels. He wanted to help them. He said he would even take his own throwaway papers to the recycling center, sell them for a penny a pound and give all proceeds to me for delivery to Mr. and Mrs. X.

But death intervened. The charity Frank expressed must stand as a monument to his memory.

Frank cared for his fellow human beings, and it showed. He cared for his trade of barbering, and the care was reflected in the pains he took in his work. He had pride in his craftsmanship, and his customers were better for it and for knowing him.

I extend my condolences to Frank's wife, Ernestine; son, Joe; daughters, Thelma Hrush, Carlotta Van Epps and Ann Marie Bryan; brothers, Tony, James and Rocky; sisters, Mary Recenello, Ann Rzepecki, Virginia Nowak and Kate Donatella; eight grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

I never met the members of Frank's family, but I knew them through the words Frank expressed. I knew of his love for them and for the family of man.

The sign inside the shop at 3024 Woodruff Ave. is true:

"The only place you'll find better barbers is in the next world."

That's where Frank Mollica is now, with his God. I hope I'll be lucky enough to be in that celestial shop some day. If I am so blessed, I'll ask for Frank Mollica, master barber and friend. Maybe we can decide another pennant race.

DEATH has been working overtime among the friends of this column. Another good man taken from us was 73-year-old Ed Griffin, retired sergeant of Indianapolis police and former school crossing guard at 21st Street and Cherry Avenue.

Ed served the pupils at Signal Hill Elementary School for six years. They loved him, a sentiment widely shared in Long Beach. Ed was the kind of man who lightens the lives of all around him.

He had a Santa Claus suit and was annually a Christmas visitor at agencies serving the aged, the handicapped and the disadvantaged young. He always had time to bring cheer and joy to those who needed human sunshine the most.

Last Christmas season, Ed called me to volunteer his Santa Claus services to any public agency I deemed fitting. I gave him the name of one, and he did the rest. He even offered the gift of a free dog to a family desolate at the loss of their little pet.

A woman driving a battered old car once stopped at Ed's school crossing to hand him a bouquet of flowers in appreciation of his service to children. She was a stranger, one of the few Ed ever met. That was Ed, and this is his final bouquet from me.

MARCELON JOHNSON OF HUNTINGTON BEACH HOPES TO LIVE FOREVER
Cryonics Member Wants To Be Frozen When She Dies, Later Unthawed

They'll freeze, if you please 'Immortalists' play it cool

By Brad Altman

Long before Spanish explorer Ponce de Leon sought the Fountain of Youth, the dream of immortality excited man's imagination. For some, the thought of living forever remains as intriguing today.

These immortalists say scientists will have the technical know-how to keep people eternally young — someday.

But until that future arrives, some 100 members of the nationwide "cryonics movement" have a special request when doctors declare them clinically dead: they want their bodies frozen.

It's only a matter of time before scientists will be able to revive frozen cadavers, they believe. Cryonics devotees even wear Medic Alert bracelets on their wrists with engraved instructions for medical authorities to follow when they die: "Cool Body, Don't Embalm."

To date, 28 bodies are in storage at 320 degrees below Fahrenheit in tubular, gray, steel capsules in the San Fernando Valley, Berkeley, Michigan and Florida.

"People laugh and scoff at all great ideas," says 48-year-old Marcelon Johnson, a pioneer of the cryonics movement and wife of W.W. Johnson, head librarian for the city of Huntington Beach.

"One of my daughters came home from school one day and said her teacher was saying you're an idiot to believe frozen people can be unthawed and returned to life," says the Huntington Beach housewife and mother of six children.

"I told my daughter to tell him, 'May you rot in good health.'"

MRS. JOHNSON joined the cryonics movement in the mid-1960s after reading a book entitled "The Prospect for Immortality," by Richard Ettinger.

Today, a decade after the modern cryonics movement started, there are societies in Los Angeles, Michigan, Florida and in the San Francisco Bay area, home of the 50-member Trans Time Inc. of Berkeley.

Trans Time members sign up to be frozen, paying $1,000 for a lifetime membership and holding a $50,000 life insurance policy to cover the initial cost of freezing and the $2,000 a year maintenance after that.

Trans Time freezes or "cryonically suspends" the body, as president Art Quafie terms the process.

Blood is flushed from the body and replaced with a saline solution — an antifreeze to protect tissues from the deep-freeze. The body is placed in a capsule and liquid nitrogen is added to maintain the "patient" at -196 degrees Celsius.

It's just a long nap after that, Quafie says.

"THE BODIES look exactly the same today as the day they were frozen and conceivably there should be no deterioration for a thousand years," says Saul Kent, an immortality fan who assisted in four freezings in 1968 and 1969.

Kent, 37, is a medical writer and editor of "Aging Tomorrow," a bimonthly pamphlet on aging research.

Evidence is mounting yearly that proves living tissues can survive the freezing process, says Kent, noting freezing experiments with Arctic beetles, mouse and rat embryos, dog kidneys and cat brains.

"We're definitely on the right track," says Kent. "Research is quite slow, but even at this point there have been tremendous advances."

To Peter Zebot, a 30-year-old

Garden Grove bachelor, cryonics was in the same league with Buck Rogers space fantasies until he attended a few meetings of a Southland group called Alcor two years ago. Now he has a $50,000 life insurance policy with Alcor named as his beneficiary.

"THE PHILOSOPHY of cryonics is that it's desirable to strive to live for a long time and, ultimately, be immortal," says Zebot. "The bulk of people don't seem to think it's a realistic goal or even desirable."

Zebot, who grew up in Long Beach and was an Independent, Press-Telegram paper boy for four years, holds a UCLA masters degree in business administration and works at Newport Beach's First Meridian Financial Corp.

Over lunch at a Garden Grove restaurant, Zebot told an interviewer he appreciates persons who are "open minded" and don't automatically label cryonics as bizarre or impossible.

Questions concerning the economic and ecological consequences of humans living forever will be pondered at a nationwide conference for life-extension buffs, to be held next March at a convention center near the Los Angeles International Airport.

Speakers who have expressed interest in attending include writer Ettinger, philosopher Timothy Leary and aging experts from USC's Andrus Gerontology Center, says Kent.

"Until recently the subject of death was taboo," says Kent. "We are challenging death. We want to avoid it, postpone it, challenge it."

Kent pauses. "Cryonics is insurance against what you don't want to happen. I figure being frozen is the second worst thing that can happen to you."

School board challenger rejects incumbents, I-PT

By Bob Houser
Staff Writer

Wayne Roy, the first runner-up in Long Beach school board elections of 1967 and 1969, Saturday challenged school district voters to reject the "smug" campaigns of incumbents and Independent, Press-Telegram endorsements.

Roy is one of seven candidates contending for two seats on the board against incumbents Elizabeth Wallace and James Zarifes in Tuesday's election.

In his Saturday statement, Roy also criticized candidate Elliott Dixon, touching off a reaction that spread to Zarifes and the district administration.

Roy said he is overwhelmed and angered by "the fact that not once in this campaign has either incumbent met the public with the other candidates for an open public presentation and comparison of past performance, ideas or philosophy. Also, in most instances, they have refused to answer questionnaires sent to them by several different organizations."

Noting that the incumbents were first appointed to their board seats and thus have never stood for election except as incumbents, Roy said their attitude of ignoring candidate confrontation and questionnaires "is insulting and degrading to the parents and taxpayers of this school community."

"They must feel very smug and secure knowing the citizens' lack of knowledge, and apathy, practically guarantee their reelection."

"Worst of all," Roy continued, "the I.P.T. will no doubt once again just prior to election day come out with a big endorsement and stamped ballot for the incumbents."

"Come on, citizens and taxpayers of Long Beach, Lakewood, Signal Hill and Avalon; surely you deserve and will demand your own selection for once."

Roy suggested that his rejection by the Teachers Association of

Long Beach, which endorsed Dixon, may have been because of his (Roy's) refusal to join national and state teacher organizations because they "neither represent my political or educational philosophy, and that also I would under no condition condone or consider appropriate a teacher strike."

While "a little envious" of TALB's $3,500 campaign contribution to Dixon, Roy said he is confident many teachers in the district will vote for him. And, citing Dixon's endorsement also by the district's classified employees (non-teachers), Roy suggested that Dixon, if elected, "will have an embarrassing role to play when these two groups come to the board for contract negotiations."

Dixon said he regards his endorsement by both teachers and classified employee groups as a "report card" on the incumbents "from those who know whether or not they've done a good job."

A SIGN in the Plaza Barber Shop reads: "The only place you'll find better barbers is in the next world."

Frank Mollica's customers smiled when they read that sign. Now they're not smiling. They're sad because their friend Frank Mollica, 64, has gone to the next world and left behind good humor, good conversation, goodwill and good memories.

It won't be the same the next time I visit the shop at 3024 Woodruff Ave. It hurts to lose a man I first went to as barber and then came to know as friend. The hurt has to do not only with his loss but with the reminder of my own mortality.

Frank Mollica and I never solved the major problems of the world. But we could decide the winners of baseball pennants, football games and the fate of the Queen Mary and the proposed city art museum. I paid the price of a hair cut, but the opinions were on the house.

Keep good schools

The Board of Education and the administrators of Long Beach Unified School District have dealt effectively with problems that have paralyzed other large urban school systems.

Our schools have never had a teacher strike or any mass layoffs. Older schools have not been allowed to deteriorate, and they continue to be good places to get a solid education.

Public schools in Avalon, Long Beach, Lakewood and Signal Hill have continued to provide youth and adults with superior education, both in academic subjects and courses preparing students to become productive citizens. They have pursued a wise, middle-of-the-road program of racial balance that has broken down color barriers without arousing antagonisms in the community.

AS PROOF OF the effectiveness of the local educational product, high school seniors last year won nearly $3 million in academic scholarships.

And all of this has been accomplished while maintaining one of the lower school tax rates in Los Angeles County.

None of the above means that the local public school system is perfect. New problems will continue to arise and improvements undoubtedly can be made. But it does mean that the guidance provided by the Board of Education has been sound and effective.

Two members of that board — Elizabeth W. Wallace and James P. Zarifes — are seeking re-election on Tuesday, and we recommend that district voters return them to office for new four-year terms.

MRS. WALLACE, herself a product of Long Beach schools and a graduate of Polytechnic High School, has been a board member since 1967 and served four terms as its president, including consecutive terms in 1975-76 and 1976-77. She holds a masters degree from Claremont Graduate School and is working toward a Ph.D. there.

Both she and her husband, attorney Donald C. Wallace Jr., have been active in numerous local civic, school and service organizations. Their four children attended Long Beach public schools, and all were graduated from Poly High.

Among Mrs. Wallace's activities are memberships on the Long Beach Recreation Commission, the state board of the California Community and Junior College Association and the state board of the California School Boards Association. She is a past president of the Junior League of Long Beach and the Longfellow PTA, from which she received a life membership award. She also has been active with the Long Beach Day Nursery, Children's Dental Foundation, Community Hospital board, Memorial Medical Center's Women's Hospital board, boards of both Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, United Way and the Mayor's Task Force on Education.

Zarifes likewise attended Long Beach schools, graduating from Poly High. He received his bachelor of laws degree and a doctor of jurisprudence degree from Stanford University, and has been in private practice in Long Beach since 1959.

He has been a board member since 1971, serving as president in 1973-74. Zarifes has been active with numerous youth programs, including the Boys' Clubs of Long Beach, Boy Scouts, YMCA Indian Guides, junior baseball and junior flag football. While president of the Downtown Lions Club, he created a fellowship program which provides up to $2,500 annually to Long Beach State University students to be used in developing solutions to community problems.

ZARIFES IS THE son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Zarifes. The elder Zarifes arrived in Long Beach in 1920 from his native Greece and, for many years, owned and operated a shoe-repair store on Pine Avenue.

Zarifes and his wife, Angie, have three children, all of whom currently are enrolled in Long Beach public schools. Mrs. Zarifes, too, has been active in civic affairs, including board membership in the Community Volunteers Organization, PTA and Rick Rackers, the women's charitable organization.

With all school districts facing major financial problems arising out of the California Supreme Court's Serrano decision and pending state-mandated collective bargaining agreements with teacher organizations, we believe it is particularly important to retain on the Board of Education people whose record has shown them to be dedicated, competent and conscientious.

BOTH MRS. WALLACE and Zarifes are long-time residents of Long Beach who are serving on the Board of Education because of an interest in our schools and a feeling they are contributing to a part of the community from which they have received much benefit. Neither is serving as a stepping stone to some higher office. Or, as Zarifes put it, "We're not after something else in the name of education."

We believe the re-election of Mrs. Wallace and Zarifes will, as the slogan of their campaign committee of 10,000 district residents proclaims, "Keep Good Schools Good."

So, we urge you to be sure to vote Tuesday. And we recommend that you mark your ballot for Elizabeth W. Wallace and James P. Zarifes.

Government give and take

SACRAMENTO — Government giveth, and government taketh away.

The State Department of Motor Vehicles has decided that some wrong uses were being made of its files. Not illegal, but wrong, from the standpoint of just plain folks. It is moving to make corrections, to the extent it can.

So now a pilot project is underway in some DMV branches. If someone wants to know what's on a citizen's driving record, he has to give his name, address, business affiliation and reason for wanting to know. The application is kept on file, and the citizen is notified that the inquiry has been made.

Currently, information on driver's license applications and vehicle registration forms is considered public record, available to anyone who asks. There are no laws controlling the use of that information by the inquirer.

MOST REQUESTS to the DMV come from law enforcement agencies, but police have learned to their distress that the records can work against them, too. Suspects under surveillance, for instance, have sometimes spotted an officer's car, jotted down the license number, and used that to find the officer's home address.

When car manufacturers are forced to recall a model because it was discovered a "cheap thingamabob" makes the vehicle unsafe, DMV computers can spew out the names and addresses of all owners of the suspect model cars.

Insurance companies are eager to learn about citations or any other additions to the record so they can jack up premiums, and DMV files are how they find out about such things.

In addition to the bad guys who want to harass a policeman's family, there are, reportedly, the creepy guys who spot a good looking female and track her address down through the DMV.

So the DMV is trying to do something about that, and the Legislature is, too.

There are eight different bills in so far this session which deal with public access to DMV records.

Some want to make the records confidential to everyone but law enforcement, the courts and other government entities.

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

One bill provides that law enforcement officers' records be especially identified so that no personal information is given out.

But the thrust of what the DMV and the Legislature is doing is to increase citizens' privacy — which, in California, is a constitutional right — and safeguard them from unwanted commercial and/or criminal abuse and harassment.

The information which the DMV has been providing, by the way, must be paid for, so there is no gift of public funds.

OK, good for government.

Now, not so good for government.

A few years ago, the good citizens of Petaluma gained national fame when they took a look at their city and decided it was big enough, thank you. They approved an ordinance limiting the city's growth.

Last week, the citizens of Santa Barbara did much the same thing.

Whether or not one agrees with the wisdom of such a move, it is difficult to quarrel with the right of a community to make such a decision. At least, the Supreme Court agreed it should have that right.

Comes now the State of California to decide for communities when their growth must cease.

Southern Orange County is dotted with communities, but the area is relatively unpopulated by Southern California-by-the-sea standards. It is, therefore, logical that investors believe there is a buck to be made by buying some land, putting houses on the land, and selling them.

Such developments need things like streets, schools, parks, lighting, mail service and sewers, however, and so there are levers government can use to influence planning.

The Aliso Water Management Agency (AWMA) is a group of smaller sewage treatment agencies serving the area around coastal Laguna Beach and Irvine and the inland areas around El Toro. Trying to plan for projected growth, AWMA is applying for a federal grant to construct a waste-water treatment plant designed to serve about 24,000 homes in the two areas.

BUT, SAYS THE State Water Resources Control Board, 24,000 additional homes mean 24,000 or more additional cars, and since the air quality is not so good there, 24,000 additional cars are too many additional cars.

The board has administrative jurisdiction over the kind of federal grant AWMA is seeking, so what it says, goes. And what it says is that AWMA may construct facilities for 8,800 additional homes, but no more.

Even though its jurisdiction involves water, a state law forbids it from taking an action which might have a deleterious effect on some other aspect of the environment, staff members of the board say in defending the position.

Which, by the way, was the product of a 3-2 vote on the five-member board.

It is true that the air Californians breathe is part of the quality of life here, so in a way that makes the quality of the air everybody's business. But it is the people in the Laguna Beach-El Toro area who are going to be breathing their particular air, and if they can stand it, one would think the State Water Resources Control Board would abide by their decision.

Violence vs. 'important' news

WASHINGTON — The latest outrage in the news here demonstrates that the political terrorists have figured out how to use the newspapers, radio, and television for their own purposes, and that we still haven't puzzled out how to handle them.

It is a hard and dicey problem. The main objective of most terrorists is to get world-wide publicity from precisely the institutions they hate the most. They are using the free and competitive instincts of democracy to destroy it, and we cooperate by giving them even more publicity than they expect.

The Hanafi Muslim sect demonstrated here the tyranny of the minority, and the fragility of democracy. For by taking hostages at gunpoint and committing murder within sight of the White House, they disrupted the normal life of the federal capital, and diverted the media from the larger essential news of the nation to the immediate violence in the streets.

BY ANY TEST of news, this was clearly spectacular. Large areas around the Islamic Center on Massachusetts Avenue by the Rock Creek Bridge, around Scott Circle near the B'nai B'rith headquarters and at the City Council headquarters on Pennsylvania Avenue were cordoned off by the police, with helicopters circling the center of the city and rattling everybody's back teeth. It was almost a perfect local glee-whiz story, with dramatic pictures for the evening network news and with hour-by-hour reports on local radio and TV.

When the prime minister of Great Britain arrived at the White House in the middle of this turmoil, the radio and television reporters felt that they had better explain that the 19-gun salutes were not part of the Hanafi crisis — though in point of fact the salutes were canceled lest they aggravate the situation.

The interesting thing about the Hanafi

Muslim violence in Washington is that it came at almost the same time as a most remarkable press conference by President Carter. He proposed, among other things, a $1.5 billion youth employment bill to deal with the fact that "more than half the total unemployed are less than 24 years old, and among these, say from 16 to 19 years old, we have over 18 per cent unemployed, and in some of the minority groups in urban areas, more than 40 per cent."

James Reston

New York Times News Service

In the same press conference, Carter proposed a Youth Community Conservation Corps for people on the land; a Youth Conservation Corps for young unemployed people in the cities; a new proposal for compromise between Israel and the Arab states in the Middle East; a phased withdrawal of American troops from South Korea; a series of compromises with the Soviet Union for a military arms agreement, "leading ultimately to the complete elimination of atomic weapons from the face of the earth."

It is hard to remember at any time since the last World War when any American President made so much news in a press conference or anywhere else, proposed so many programs on the home front, suggested so many compromises and innovations abroad, some of them almost offhand and maybe premature or unwise, and yet still got so little attention in the newspapers or on radio or television.

The violence in the streets by the Hanafi Muslims drowned him out. With all these serious presidential suggestions, he didn't even get on the front page of The Washington Post, except in a footnote.

There were all kinds of things in this Carter press conference to argue about. He was curiously and unnecessarily combative with the Senate about the confirmation of Paul Warnke as his disarmament chief. He was almost casual and even reckless in proposing a Middle East compromise between Israel and the Arab states — just after seeing the head of the Israeli government and before his forthcoming meeting with the Arab leaders.

He gave a timetable for the withdrawal of American troops from South Korea and he was combative about negotiating an arms agreement with the Soviet Union.

"The obvious impression that concerns me," he said, "is a demonstration of lack of confidence in the Senate in my own ability and attitudes as a chief negotiator... I think many of the people that oppose Mr. Warnke just do not want to see any substantial reduction in atomic weapons — even though they are agreed to mutually by us and the Soviet Union, and even if they are designed to reduce the threat of nuclear destruction of the world."

THIS IS NOT very clear and certainly not quite fair to his opponents, and they will probably not forgive him for his rebuke. But again it is a publicity problem — speaking off-the-cuff on serious questions, which gets him into trouble.

Neither the President nor the press has figured out this problem of what is news in the modern world of terrorists, propaganda, and ambiguous politics. The men with the guns dominated the news here last week. The media followed them on the principle that what is new is news, but what Carter said, right or wrong, is clearly more important and more enduring, but nobody could hear him for the noise and the headlines about the terrorists.

Fishing rules may hike prices

By RICHARD C. SCHROEDER
Editorial Research Reports

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration is not one of the better known federal agencies. But its new regulations on offshore waters deeply affect the livelihood of deep-sea fishermen and trawler owners and, possibly, consumers' food bills.

Last month, the agency published rules governing fishing in the recently proclaimed Fishery Conservation Zone, extending 200 miles off the U.S. coast. It also issued regulations covering fishing anywhere in the world for tuna to be imported into the United States. American fishermen were delighted by the 200-mile rules, and outraged by the tuna regulations.

The new rules probably will reduce the total world catch of fish — a result welcomed by conservationists, but less agreeable to fishermen and fish-eaters. The effect on world food needs cannot be assessed at this time. Foreign fleets have been taking between six and seven billion pounds from U.S. coastal waters in recent years, while American fishermen have caught about four billion pounds.

UNDER THE NEW rules, the U.S. portion will rise slightly, and the foreign share will drop to 4.3 billion pounds this year. The Japanese and the Russians will still probably catch enough fish to supply their own markets, but as their access to the U.S. market declines, they will lose some foreign-exchange earnings.

Smaller U.S. vessels stand to benefit from reduced competition from giant floating factories put to sea by such nations as Japan and Russia. But consumers may find fish more costly. Last year, 46 per cent of all fish imported into this country were caught within 200 miles of our shores.

Henceforth, American fishermen will get first crack at the herring, mackerel and other fish swimming within 200 miles of the U.S. shore. Foreign fishing fleets must obtain a U.S. permit costing up to $5,000 and can catch only the portion of

The regulations have been a long time in coming. Canada, the European Economic Community, the Soviet Union and many Latin American countries adopted a 200-mile fishing limit even before the United States. The Law of the Sea Conference has been wrestling with the jurisdictional issue for a number of years, and is expected to return to its deliberations this spring.

Keep good schools

The Board of Education and the administrators of Long Beach Unified School District have dealt effectively with problems that have paralyzed other large urban school systems.

Our schools have never had a teacher strike or any mass layoffs. Older schools have not been allowed to deteriorate, and they continue to be good places to get a solid education.

Public schools in Avalon, Long Beach, Lakewood and Signal Hill have continued to provide youth and adults with superior education, both in academic subjects and courses preparing students to become productive citizens. They have pursued a wise, middle-of-the-road program of racial balance that has broken down color barriers without arousing antagonisms in the community.

AS PROOF OF the effectiveness of the local educational product, high school seniors last year won nearly $3 million in academic scholarships.

And all of this has been accomplished while maintaining one of the lower school tax rates in Los Angeles County.

None of the above means that the local public school system is perfect. New problems will continue to arise and improvements undoubtedly can be made. But it does mean that the guidance provided by the Board of Education has been sound and effective.

Two members of that board — Elizabeth W. Wallace and James P. Zarifes — are seeking re-election on Tuesday, and we recommend that district voters return them to office for new four-year terms.

MRS. WALLACE, herself a product of Long Beach schools and a graduate of Polytechnic High School, has been a board member since 1967 and served four terms as its president, including consecutive terms in 1975-76 and 1976-77. She holds a masters degree from Claremont Graduate School and is working toward a Ph.D. there.

Both she and her husband, attorney Donald C. Wallace Jr., have been active in numerous local civic, school and service organizations. Their four children attended Long Beach public schools, and all were graduated from Poly High.

Among Mrs. Wallace's activities are memberships on the Long Beach Recreation Commission, the state board of the California Community and Junior College Association and the state board of the California School Boards Association. She is a past president of the Junior League of Long Beach and the Longfellow PTA, from which she received a life membership award. She also has been active with the Long Beach Day Nursery, Children's Dental Foundation, Community Hospital board, Memorial Medical Center's Women's Hospital board, boards of both Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, Unified Way and the Mayor's Task Force on Education.

Zarifes likewise attended Long Beach schools, graduating from Poly High. He received his bachelor of laws degree and a doctor of jurisprudence degree from Stanford University, and has been in private practice in Long Beach since 1959.

He has been a board member since 1971, serving as president in 1973-74. Zarifes has been active with numerous youth programs, including the Boys' Clubs of Long Beach, Boy Scouts, YMCA Indian Guides, junior baseball and junior flag football. While president of the Downtown Lions Club, he created a fellowship program which provides up to $2,500 annually to Long Beach State University students to be used in developing solutions to community problems.

ZARIFES IS THE son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Zarifes. The elder Zarifes arrived in Long Beach in 1920 from his native Greece and, for many years, owned and operated a shoe-repair store on Pine Avenue.

Zarifes and his wife, Angie, have three children, all of whom currently are enrolled in Long Beach public schools. Mrs. Zarifes, too, has been active in civic affairs, including board membership in the Community Volunteers Organization, PTA and Rick Rackers, the women's charitable organization.

With all school districts facing major financial problems arising out of the California Supreme Court's Serrano decision and pending state-mandated collective bargaining agreements with teacher organizations, we believe it is particularly important to retain on the Board of Education people whose record has shown them to be dedicated, competent and conscientious.

BOTH MRS. WALLACE and Zarifes are long-time residents of Long Beach who are serving on the Board of Education because of an interest in our schools and a feeling they are contributing to a part of the community from which they have received much benefit. Neither is serving as a stepping stone to some higher office. Or, as Zarifes put it, "We're not after something else in the name of education."

We believe the re-election of Mrs. Wallace and Zarifes will, as the slogan of their campaign committee of 10,000 district residents proclaims, "Keep Good Schools Good."

So, we urge you to be sure to vote Tuesday. And we recommend that you mark your ballot for Elizabeth W. Wallace and James P. Zarifes.

Government give and take

SACRAMENTO — Government giveth, and government taketh away.

The State Department of Motor Vehicles has decided that some wrong uses were being made of its files. Not illegal, but wrong, from the standpoint of just plain folks. It is moving to make corrections, to the extent it can.

So now a pilot project is underway in some DMV branches. If someone wants to know what's on a citizen's driving record, he has to give his name, address, business affiliation and reason for wanting to know. The application is kept on file, and the citizen is notified that the inquiry has been made.

Currently, information on driver's license applications and vehicle registration forms is considered public record, available to anyone who asks. There are no laws controlling the use of that information by the inquirer.

MOST REQUESTS to the DMV come from law enforcement agencies, but police have learned to their distress that the records can work against them, too. Suspects under surveillance, for instance, have sometimes spotted an officer's car, jotted down the license number, and used that to find the officer's home address.

When car manufacturers are forced to recall a model because it was discovered a "cheap thingamabob" makes the vehicle unsafe, DMV computers can spew out the names and addresses of all owners of the suspect model cars.

Insurance companies are eager to learn about citations or any other additions to the record so they can jack up premiums, and DMV files are how they find out about such things.

In addition to the bad guys who want to harass a policeman's family, there are, reportedly, the creepy guys who spot a good-looking female and track her address down through the DMV.

So the DMV is trying to do something about that, and the Legislature is, too.

There are eight different bills in so far this session which deal with public access to DMV records.

Some want to make the records confidential to everyone but law enforcement, the courts and other government entities.

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

One bill provides that law enforcement officers' records be especially identified so that no personal information is given out.

But the thrust of what the DMV and the Legislature is doing is to increase citizens' privacy — which, in California, is a constitutional right — and safeguard them from unwanted commercial and/or criminal abuse and harassment.

The information which the DMV has been providing, by the way, must be paid for, so there is no gift of public funds.

OK, good for government.

Now, not so good for government. A few years ago, the good citizens of Petaluma gained national fame when they took a look at their city and decided it was big enough, thank you. They approved an ordinance limiting the city's growth.

Last week, the citizens of Santa Barbara did much the same thing.

Whether or not one agrees with the wisdom of such a move, it is difficult to quarrel with the right of a community to make such a decision. At least, the Supreme Court agreed it should have that right.

Comes now the State of California to decide for communities when their growth must cease.

Southern Orange County is dotted with communities, but the area is relatively unpopulated by Southern California-by-the-sea standards. It is, therefore, logical that investors believe there is a buck to be made by buying some land, putting houses on the land, and selling them.

Such developments need things like streets, schools, parks, lighting, mail service and sewers, however, and so there are levers government can use to influence planning.

The Aliso Water Management Agency (AWMA) is a group of smaller sewage treatment agencies serving the area around coastal Laguna Beach and Irvine and the inland areas around El Toro. Trying to plan for projected growth, AWMA is applying for a federal grant to construct a waste-water treatment plant designed to serve about 24,000 homes in the two areas.

BUT, SAYS THE State Water Resources Control Board, 24,000 additional homes mean 24,000 or more additional cars, and since the air quality is not so good there, 24,000 additional cars are too many additional cars.

The board has administrative jurisdiction over the kind of federal grant AWMA is seeking, so what it says, goes. And what it says is that AWMA may construct facilities for 8,800 additional homes, but no more.

Even though its jurisdiction involves water, a state law forbids it from taking an action which might have a deleterious effect on some other aspect of the environment, staff members of the board say in defending the position.

Which, by the way, was the product of a 3-2 vote on the five-member board.

It is true that the Air Californians breathe is part of the quality of life here, so in a way that makes the quality of the air everybody's business. But, it is the people in the Laguna Beach-El Toro area who are going to be breathing their particular air, and if they can stand it, one would think the State Water Resources Control Board would abide by their decision.

Water wasters

Recently I had the occasion to spend some time in Sacramento on business. Needless to say, the water shortage was the number one topic of conversation nearly everywhere I went.

As a lifelong southern Californian I found myself getting quite weary of hearing all the woes of the state being ascribed to the residents of the southern part of this state. There is even a lot of talk about breaking the state into two states (not a new idea) as if this would cure all the ills of the north. Apparently, dividing the state would somehow magically start the rain to falling.

The newspapers in the state have been a major contributor to this artificial furor. They repeatedly show pictures of a recreational lake in Orange County, and of gardeners watering lush plants and washing down streets in Beverly Hills. The impression they give is that all of us in the south are just as wasteful as these examples.

What they do not point out is that the reason we have the water in the first place is because we have agreed to tax ourselves (heavily) and build the projects needed to bring the water to this arid land. And we know far better than our brethren to the north the worth of water. Long before it became fashionable to conserve water, we in L.A. were doing it for the best and most effective reason, the high cost of our water.

I was shocked to learn in Sacramento that they do not even have water meters in their water system. One person I met told me that he pays $3.75 per month for his water, no matter how much he uses. This included last summer when he filled his new swimming pool in his back yard. I also observed people out washing down sidewalks and driveways, but I did not see any photographers from the news media on hand to record the event.

Assemblyman Bruce Young of Cerritos has entered a bill to require Sacramentoans to install water meters. He has not quite been tarred and feathered, but judging from the tone of the local news media the same ones who the day before were attacking us, that time may not be far off. It would seem that water conservation is a great idea, as long as they do not have to worry about it.

With the growing discussion on water rationing, and the increasing likelihood that it may be imposed, it seems only fair that the good people of Sacramento join with the rest of us in trying to save this precious resource.

Violence on TV

Recently television stations have been put under a lot of pressure. Violence on television is suddenly affecting children.

Parents feel that their children have become prisoners of the TV set. Suggestions have been made by "experts" to somehow restrict the hours that children watch television. The ideas range from stricter discipline on the part of the parents to putting special locks on the sets. Then, when the adults go away, they can take the key with them and the children can't watch.

Such a simple solution — the parents go out for the evening to enjoy themselves, but the kids are supposed to stay home and entertain themselves doing homework; at least that's what I assume they're supposed to do. No other ideas have been suggested.

The only problem is, people are expecting their kids to be something they themselves are not. Meetings have been held protesting violence and too much television. It's affecting the children.

I'm 14 and nobody ever asked me or anyone I know what I thought about television violence. I'm part of the ones who are supposed to be corrupted by what I watch. I'm still honest.

Hunt the killer

The tragic story about the two dogs, Libra and Agnew, who died in agony because a vicious, evil person poisoned them, should not be dismissed without pursuing the killer and making him pay for this evil deed by punishing him and exposing him to the public for the suffering he caused these helpless creatures.

The search should continue until the killer is found, and it would be a tremendous help if the Long Beach Animal Shelter would participate.

Regardless of whether or not he is found, he will answer to the Man Upstairs!

Israel democracy?

I am neither Arab nor Jew (far from it), but as a concerned heavily taxed taxpayer, I went to the library to learn why and what for the lion's share of our foreign tax dollar was tagged for Israel.

The United States is committed to the support of Israel, purportedly, because it is the last bastion of democracy in the Middle East against Communist expansion. In fact, Israel does not even have a constitution, and is a mixed communal society which includes laborites, socialists and avowed Marxists. All of these constitute the governing coalition of Israel.

Israel has two open Communist parties, each of which has elected representatives serving in the Knesset (Israel's parliament). The truth is that Israel is the only state in the Mideast having legal Communist parties. Russia was the first country to officially recognize Israel as a state.

Conversely, in Egypt, Syria, Yemen and the Sudan, the Arabs ousted the Russians and in most Arab countries, the Communist parties are outlawed.

One reason the Israelis claim Palestine is that it was the birthplace of the Jews. However, in the Old Testament it definitely states that Abraham was born in faraway Ur and never reached Palestine until he was 75 years old.

So, Israel is not the last bastion of democracy against Communist expansion, but in reality recognizes and embraces it in its government. Seemingly, our aid and expensive support of Israel has been in the wrong premises.

Unanswered questions

If President Eisenhower would have had a radio call-in show in 1953, I would have asked him the following question: since automatic transmissions in automobiles are decreasing gas mileage per gallon and since we are increasing automobile production every year, aren't we truly endangering our energy supply by burning the candle at both ends and failing to heed the warnings of the Paley Report on energy?

On March 5 I was unable to ask President Carter the following question (My number was taken at 12:10 CST, but I was not called back): since the life insurance industry is preparing for the elimination of motherhood and the government has held hearings on the creation of a "master race" from the scientific laboratories, don't you think it's time we begin a vigorous national debate and discussion on the impact genetic engineering will have on our society; or do we just ignore genetic engineering as we did energy 25 years ago and try to cope with it when it becomes a crisis?

Foolish questions, aren't they? But what do you expect coming from an ordinary citizen? That is why we let the intelligent media ask the questions. No wonder we have so much apathy.

Crime control laws

Mr. Levinson's suggestion ("Letters to the editor," March 9) that "real gun control laws" would in some manner alleviate the street crime problem is hardly a novel suggestion. If there were any assurance that the control of an inanimate object would in fact control crime, I would support his suggestion. There is none and I cannot.

His statement that "Both long and short guns can be purchased with simple formalities" indicates that he has never attempted to purchase either. Furthermore, the latest studies indicate that the great majority of firearms used in crime were stolen to begin with.

I would like to paraphrase Mr. Levinson's suggestion, the most obvious need is real crime control laws. I realize that this is not a novel suggestion either, but it is a realistic and workable suggestion.

Lowest human form

My heart goes out to G. A. Boykin regarding her poisoned dogs. I was sick with rage! We conquer space, have a lot of conveniences for the modern way of life, but I still think we have a long way to go to rid ourselves of despicable barbarians who call themselves "human." The nearest these cruel people come to being human is just in their bodily functions and appearance!

I certainly hope G. A. Boykin has enough evidence to prosecute these rotten worms. The lowest form of human, in my opinion and many other animal lover, is the one who takes his wrath out on animals who cannot defend themselves.

There are many ways to eliminate animal nuisances. Give the animal a break! Heaven knows, they need all the understanding and love they can get. Animals are like children — they are only as disciplined as the owner allows. And sometimes an animal owner needs to be told if a neighbor is irritated. Why take an animal's life?

I wouldn't give a plugged nickel for a majority of humans today when it comes to their attitude to animals. My sympathy for those two little wasted lives is very great. I still think we're living in the Middle Ages regarding love and care for animals.

An apology

To the students of the Anaheim Union High School District: we owe you an apology. We, the electorate, have failed you, our most valuable resource. Most of us didn't appreciate — didn't take the time Tuesday to exercise our precious right to vote. The rest of us cared so little about your needs that we elected only one trustee to your high school board who is concerned with your education, your welfare, and your rights.

We've done you a great wrong, for which we, and especially you, will pay dearly in the next four years. I wish I could say we got what we deserve, but I'm afraid you got what we deserve, and I'm so very sorry. Please forgive us.

No sense of 'humor'

Re F. C. Anderson's column today (March 10), I'm sorry his brother stuttered and had a miserable boyhood. I'm sorry Anderson had to fight others because of his brother's problem. And I'm very glad his brother made good despite his affliction. But I am furious over Anderson's asinine remarks about Merv Griffin!

Comparing Merv to Idi Amin is not only outrageous, it is despicable and irresponsible! To imply that Merv made fun of Mel Tillis is to reveal an abysmal ignorance of Merv and Mel. For Anderson's information, Mel Tillis uses his stammering as part of his performance, even to the point of titling his latest album "M-M-M-Mel," something he would have known if he hadn't let his personal prejudice affect his hearing. As for saying that Merv is a "singer who couldn't hit the right note . . . I really question Anderson's ability to hear, much less to judge.

Anderson, oaf that he is, should not watch Merv — it takes a sense of humor to enjoy the show, something Anderson, the klutz, obviously is lacking! Good grief, F.C., go to your room!

Advancement of all

In reply to Robert Wassman's letter of March 9, why would a "National Association for the Advancement of White People" have to be established? How much further does the white race in this country have to advance?

Even if such an organization were to be formed, no one would object to it if it did not work to hinder other races advancing in this country. Why not establish a "National Association for the Advancement of All People" instead?

Gentiles are not precluded from joining the Anti-Defamation League. It was formed to combat anti-Semitism, but it also speaks out against the violation of other groups' rights. By the way, how many Jews belong to the Knights of Columbus?

Pitiful podium

Again congratulations to the competent Long Beach Symphony under the sensitive and most capable direction of Alberto Bolet! Their concert at the LBCC auditorium on Saturday night, March 5, was a triumphant one!

Besides their two numbers exquisitely performed, our own Craig Nies played the Prokofiev Third Piano Concerto with such beauty, fire and fine technique, the full house gave him a standing ovation.

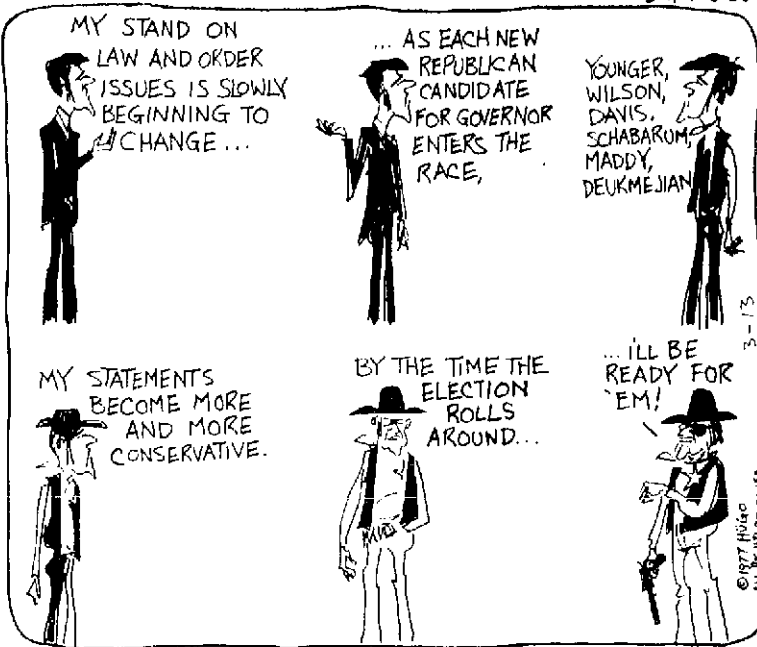

There was only one flaw I noticed during the evening which detracted from the otherwise perfection in its entirety! It was the podium! Never in my life have I seen such a decrepit, ravaged, worn-torn, decayed concoction, no doubt having been stuck together with Elmer's Glue!

It had been sloppily painted in black and green, with spindly, long splinters sticking out on all sides. I shuddered with disgust! It's a wonder Mr. Bolet trusted his equilibrium standing upon it.

I think the time has come to discard the old "orange crate" and have a good carpenter construct a new, sturdy one. This way, it would be more conducive to the dignified, all-black dress of the orchestra members, the conductor and guest artists.

The Sohio terminal

What a cruel hoax was the L. P.T. headline March 6 that the BP/Sohio terminal will make Long Beach "well" again, over a story saying "Long Beach stands to gain 9.8 million dollars per year" from the terminal which "would pull the city out of its near-bankrupt status."

Long Beach is not near bankruptcy; its fiscal health is sound. But if it were flat broke, the city still would not get one cent of net income from the Port of Long Beach — and never has. The port runs its private empire without interference from the city and spends its net income solely on the harbor. The port, in fact, claims that it may not share its income with the city. The harbor district is held in trust solely for the establishment, improvement, and conduct of a harbor. Port attorneys say flatly that the net income cannot go to the city. They say Los Angeles is in trouble right now for diverting money from its share of the harbor trust.

And the 9.8 million dollar number is not net income for the port, the city, or anyone else. That figure is a guess at gross lease revenues. After expenses and bond payments are taken out, what would the net income be? The article doesn't say.

We don't know how the L. P.T. could print these statements, but we can guess why: it is still practicing government by newspaper. British Petroleum (Sohio) hopes to force a decision out of the Air Resources Board within the next few weeks, and enormous and relentless pressure is being brought on the state to knuckle under. We think that explains the unsupported claim that the state wants an Avila Bay terminal to get revenues for Gov. Brown, which an ARB official says is ridiculous, and it also explains why the whole three-part series of news stories implied that there was only a single alternative at Avila Bay — which no one wants — and said nothing about the many alternatives that make the Long Beach terminal unnecessary: the northern pipeline routes, the new 600,000 barrel-a-day terminal going in in Panama, trading oil with Japan, etc.

Two courageous public servants, Tom Quinn of the ARB and Dick Maullin of the California Energy Commission, have so far stood alone in protecting the people of California from this destructive project. But unless they can get support from citizens, they may well have to retreat. The time for all of us to help them is now.

Estimates in an economic analysis provided by the Port of Long Beach indicate that during construction the City of Long Beach will be paid $1.7 million in property, utilities and sales taxes and fees for permits, etc. The Long Beach Unified School District would receive $2.2 million in property taxes and the Community College District would receive $378,000. Other public bodies in Los Angeles, Riverside and San Bernardino counties would receive more than $5.5 million. Total revenue would be $9,753,000 to tax-paying bodies. The port would not receive any tax revenue during this period.

During construction, the project would provide about 3,100 jobs with a direct payroll of more than $60 million. Long Beach residents would get about $18 million, other

Los Angeles County residents about $27 million and the balance would go to Orange County, Riverside and San Bernardino county residents. During this period of construction about $92 million would be spent in payroll and supplies.

Using last year's tax rates, normal public revenue during operation (after completion) would bring Long Beach city government better than $1 million yearly, the school district about $1.8 million yearly. Other governments, such as Los Angeles County, would collect more than $4.2 million in taxes yearly. The port would collect more than $6.1 million yearly of which all but $1.5 million would be set aside for bond retirement until such bonds are paid off. The $1.5 million yearly can be used for port purposes. Such money, because of tidelands trust restrictions, cannot be used for general city government purposes but can only be used on the tidelands.

There are a number of other financial aspects in terms of long-range payroll and in purchase of operating supplies which benefit many types of business in the area. — The Editor.

Offshore airport

Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 7 would request the State Department of Transportation to conduct a study of the feasibility of constructing maritime facilities in San Pedro Bay and seaward to accommodate air, sea and subsea cargo and report to the Legislature as to the environmental and economic consequences.

With respect to air cargo, the Southern California Association of Governments was advised on June 14, 1973 that air cargo forecasts for the Los Angeles region will have increased from 7 million tons in 1972 to 6 to 8 million tons in 1990.

In 1971, the California Assembly passed AB 2777 providing for the preparation of a long term plan to meet future air commerce needs including the "development of provisions for the protection and conservation of marine plant and animal life and other national resources." The bill was publicly opposed by Palos Verdes peninsula residents as authorizing an airport in Los Angeles harbor and by beach residents who believed an airport would block the ocean view. In reality, the concept presented by me was an airport on the horizon, eight miles from shore, in presently 100-foot water depth.

In the California Senate, the bill was expanded to cover all air transportation needs in California and to declare the "intent of the Legislature that society not be compelled to tolerate environmental pollution and that there be provided a level of air service acceptable to society without unacceptable costs in terms of pollution, congestion or dollars." The bill was signed by Gov. Ronald Reagan on Nov. 17, 1971.

ACR No. 7 requests the Brown administration to implement the 1971 law as it pertains to the future needs of the residents of the Los Angeles area. It is supported by the Los Angeles Board of Harbor Commissioners.

Letters to the editor

Water wasters

Recently I had the occasion to spend some time in Sacramento on business. Needless to say, the water shortage was the number one topic of conversation nearly everywhere I went.

As a lifelong southern Californian I found myself getting quite weary of hearing all the woes of the state being ascribed to the residents of the southern part of this state. There is even a lot of talk about breaking the state into two states (not a new idea) as if this would cure all the ills of the north. Apparently, dividing the state would somehow magically start the rain to falling.

The newspapers in the state have been a major contributor to this artificial furor. They repeatedly show pictures of a recreational lake in Orange County, and of gardeners watering lush plants and washing down streets in Beverly Hills. The impression they give is that all of us in the south are just as wasteful as these examples.

What they do not point out is that the reason we have the water in the first place is because we have agreed to tax ourselves (heavily) and build the projects needed to bring the water to this arid land. And we know far better than our brethren to the north the worth of water. Long before it became fashionable to conserve water, we in L.A. were doing it for the best and most effective reason, the high cost of our water.

I was shocked to learn in Sacramento that they do not even have water meters in their water system. One person I met told me that he pays $3.75 per month for his water, no matter how much he uses. This included last summer when he filled his new swimming pool in his back yard. I also observed people out washing down sidewalks and driveways, but I did not see any photographers from the news media on hand to record the event.

Assemblyman Bruce Young of Cerritos has entered a bill to require Sacramentoans to install water meters. He has not quite been tarred and feathered, but judging from the tone of the local news media (the same ones who the day before were attacking us), that time may not be far off. It would seem that water conservation is a great idea, as long as they do not have to worry about it.

With the growing discussion on water rationing, and the increasing likelihood that it may be imposed, it seems only fair that the good people of Sacramento join with the rest of us in trying to save this precious resource.

Violence on TV

Recently television stations have been put under a lot of pressure. Violence on television is suddenly affecting children.

Parents feel that their children have become prisoners of the TV set. Suggestions have been made by "experts" to somehow restrict the hours that children watch television. The ideas range from stricter discipline on the part of the parents to putting special locks on the sets. Then, when the adults go away, they can take the key with them and the children can't watch.

Such a simple solution — the parents go out for the evening to enjoy themselves, but the kids are supposed to stay home and entertain themselves doing homework; at least that's what I assume they're supposed to do. No other ideas have been suggested.

The only problem is, people are expecting their kids to be something they themselves are not. Meetings have been held protesting violence and too much television. It's affecting the children.

I'm 14 and nobody ever asked me or anyone I know what I thought about television violence. I'm part of the ones who are supposed to be corrupted by what I watch. I'm still honest.

Hunt the killer

The tragic story about the two dogs, Libra and Agnew, who died in agony because a vicious, evil person poisoned them, should not be dismissed without pursuing the killer and making him pay for this evil deed by punishing him and exposing him to the public for the suffering he caused these helpless creatures.

The search should continue until the killer is found, and it would be a tremendous help if the Long Beach Animal Shelter would participate.

Regardless of whether or not he is found, he will answer to the Man Upstairs!

Israel democracy?

I am neither Arab nor Jew (far from it), but as a concerned heavily taxed taxpayer, I went to the library to learn why and what for the lion's share of our foreign tax dollar was tagged for Israel.

The United States is committed to the support of Israel, purportedly, because it is the last bastion of democracy in the Middle East against Communist expansion. In fact, Israel does not even have a constitution, and is a mixed communal society which includes laborites, socialists and avowed Marxists. All of these constitute the governing coalition of Israel.

Israel has two open Communist parties, each of which has elected representatives serving in the Knesset (Israel's parliament). The truth is that Israel is the only state in the Mideast having legal Communist parties. Russia was the first country to officially recognize Israel as a state.

Conversely, in Egypt, Syria, Yemen and the Sudan, the Arabs ousted the Russians and in most Arab countries, the Communist parties are outlawed.

One reason the Israelis claim Palestine is that it was the birthplace of the Jews. However, in the Old Testament it definitely states that Abraham was born in faraway Ur and never reached Palestine until he was 75 years old.

So, Israel is not the last bastion of democracy against Communist expansion, but in reality recognizes and embraces it in its government. Seemingly, our aid and expensive support of Israel has been in the wrong premises.

Unanswered questions

If President Eisenhower would have had a radio call-in show in 1953, I would have asked him the following question: since automatic transmissions in automobiles are decreasing gas mileage per gallon and since we are increasing automobile production every year, aren't we truly endangering our energy supply by burning the candle at both ends and failing to heed the warnings of the Paley Report on energy?

On March 5 I was unable to ask President Carter the following question (My number was taken at 12:10 CST, but I was not called back): since the life insurance industry is preparing for the elimination of motherhood and the government has held hearings on the creation of a "master race" from the scientific laboratories, don't you think it's time we begin a vigorous national debate and discussion on the impact genetic engineering will have on our society; or do we just ignore genetic engineering as we did energy 25 years ago and try to cope with it when it becomes a crisis?

Foolish questions, aren't they? But what do you expect coming from an ordinary citizen? That is why we let the intelligent media ask the questions. No wonder we have so much apathy.

Crime control laws

Mr. Levinson's suggestion ("Letters to the editor," March 9) that "real gun control laws" would in some manner alleviate the street crime problem is hardly a novel suggestion. If there were any assurance that the control of an inanimate object would in fact control crime, I would support his suggestion. There is none and I cannot.

His statement that "Both long and short guns can be purchased with simple formalities" indicates that he has never attempted to purchase either. Furthermore, the latest studies indicate that the great majority of firearms used in crime were stolen to begin with.

I would like to paraphrase Mr. Levinson's suggestion, the most obvious need is real crime control laws. I realize that this is not a novel suggestion either, but it is a realistic and workable suggestion.

Lowest human form

My heart goes out to G. A. Boykin regarding her poisoned dogs. I was sick with rage! We conquer space, have a lot of conveniences for the modern way of life, but I still think we have a long way to go to rid ourselves of despicable barbarians who call themselves "human." The nearest these cruel people come to being human is just in their bodily functions and appearance!

I certainly hope G. A. Boykin has enough evidence to prosecute these rotten worms. The lowest form of human, in my opinion and many other animal lover, is the one who takes his wrath out on animals who cannot defend themselves.

There are many ways to eliminate animal nuisances. Give the animal a break! Heaven knows, they need all the understanding and love they can get. Animals are like children — they are only as disciplined as the owner allows. And sometimes an animal owner needs to be told if a neighbor is irritated. Why take an animal's life?

I wouldn't give a plugged nickel for a majority of humans today when it comes to their attitude to animals. My sympathy for those two little wasted lives is very great. I still think we're living in the Middle Ages regarding love and care for animals.

Highest kicker kicks a little

NEW YORK — Dancer Ann Reinking is said to be the highest kicker on Broadway, but the leggy, 27-year-old, blue-eyed beauty from Seattle and San Francisco says:

"I don't know. I've seen Gwen Verdon kick up to her ear. I saw a man who had very good 'extension,' as they call it, kick himself in the face and knock himself out. I've gotten so I can get close to my nose, but kicking high is not a real criterion as to how good a dancer you are."

When Gwen Verdon decided at 50 to quit dancing for a while, Ann Reinking replaced her as Roxie Hart in the musical "Chicago." Gwen practically handed her the crown of queen of the dancers by saying, "Ann can kick her legs higher and keep them up longer than I can."

"I don't know about all of that," Ann demurred the other day. "If Gwen was working I'd have to work real hard."

Anyway, being queen of the Broadway dancers, or only a candidate for it, is no bed of roses, she soon demonstrated.

"I'm injured again," she admitted. "I pulled the hamstring in the back of my thigh. It hurts every time I kick. I can get my leg up there, but it hurts."

SHE WAVED the injury aside, because it was inconsequential compared to the time she cracked a vertebra — equivalent to breaking her back — when she was doing a flip with the Andrews Sisters in "Over Here!" She crawled off stage, passed out, and couldn't bend her back for six weeks.

"Being a dancer," she said, "is being an athlete. A prima ballerina can have more injuries than any athlete. A 10-minute dance is the equivalent to running fast for 10 minutes. You start getting injuries when you're about 25. You have to warm up more."

"Mikhail Baryshnikov says when he was 20 he never warmed up. Then he did five minutes warm-up for each year. At 29 he warms up 45 minutes."

ANN HAS a face that's unique, she says — a little nose and a big jaw. She's photogenic and sexy looking. Bob Fosse, the choreographer-director, observed that about four years ago and cast her in a featured role in "Pippin," and she was off.

"I love doing Bob Fosse's work — he's brilliant!" she said. She gets plenty of opportunity in "Chicago." He choreographed new dances for her.

THE WEEKEND windup...

Ellen Burstyn said she'll be one of the four hosts at the Academy Awards... Dorothy London, a fine comedienne, plays a wicked orphanage-keeper in the musical "Annie" and says, "It's my first mean role — I didn't know it could be so much fun being mean!"

Constance Towers, cos-tarring with Yul Brynner in "The King and I," turned down the lead in a Norman Lear TV series, "All That Glitters." Cyd Charisse and Tony Martin said they've been invited to entertain at Princess Grace's Red Cross Gala in Monte Carlo.

Julie Harris will play her "Belle of Amherst" role in London next season... Producer Hall Wallis' idea: teaming

FINAL DAY OF WESTERN NATIONAL BOAT SHOW - ANAHEIM

Specialty craft such as a one-man Mini-Tunnel Boat that can reach speeds of 40-50 mph; a British Sports Hovercraft that can skim over water, sand, land, ice, snow, mud and marshes; and the famed Kawasaki Jet-Ski that provides all the thrills of speedboating, water skiing and surfing are among the features at Western National Boat & Marine Show, closing today, Sunday, Mar. 13 at Anaheim Convention Center, across from Disneyland.

These craft just complement the enormous display of conventional boats, ranging from small rubber inflatables that can be put into the trunk of a car to 30-foot luxury cruisers. Speed boats, ski and fishing boats, catamarans, dinghies, canoes and kayaks, plus accessories, are all being exhibited.

This is the trailerable boat show with a boat for every family budget.

See all this plus the spectacular July 4 Bicentennial event, "Tall Ships," in the Ciercescan Theater at Anaheim Convention Center. Last day, is today, Sunday, Mar. 13. Doors are open 12 noon until 8 p.m. Adults, $2, children 6-15, $1, under 6, free.

Highest kicker kicks a little

NEW YORK — Dancer Ann Reinking is said to be the highest kicker on Broadway, but the leggy, 27-year-old, blue-eyed beauty from Seattle and San Francisco says: "I don't know. I've seen Gwen Verdon kick up to her ear. I saw a man who had very good 'extension,' as they call it, kick himself in the face and knock himself out. I've gotten so I can get close to my nose, but kicking high is not a real criterion as to how good a dancer you are." When Gwen Verdon decided at 50 to quit dancing for a while, Ann Reinking replaced her as Roxie Hart in the musical "Chicago." Gwen practically handed her the crown of queen of the dancers by saying, "Ann can kick her legs higher and keep them up longer than I can." "I don't know about all of that," Ann demurred the other day. "If Gwen was working I'd have to work real hard." Anyway, being queen of the Broadway dancers, or only a candidate for it, is no bed of roses, she soon demonstrated. "I'm injured again," she admitted. "I pulled the hamstring in the back of my thigh. It hurts every time I kick. I can get my leg up there, but it hurts."

She's photogenic and sexy looking. Bob Fosse, the choreographer-director, observed that about four years ago and cast her in a featured role in "Pippin," and she was off. "I love doing Bob Fosse's work — he's brilliant!" she said. She gets plenty of opportunity in "Chicago." He choreographed new dances for her.

WoodWalk Final phase opens

The third and final phase containing 51 homes has opened at WoodWalk in Lake Forest. It was announced Saturday by Michael T. Murray, marketing manager for First Management Corp.

"In addition to the three and four-bedroom homes offered in the previous two phases of WoodWalk, a new elevation has been added to each model," Murray said.

THE 108 HOMES in Phases 1 and 2 at WoodWalk were sold out last year in less than five months. Murray reported.

Prices of the three and four-bedroom homes in the new phase will range from $86,000 to $113,000. Excellent conventional financing is available from Home Savings & Loan Association.

Residents of WoodWalk automatically become members of Lake Forest's private Sun and Sail Club, which has a 36-acre lake for boating and fishing, a 13,000 square foot clubhouse, five tennis courts, two swimming pools, volleyball and basketball courts and a children's play area.

The club is just a short walk or bicycle ride from the new homes and monthly dues are just $9.80.

DESIGNED BY Newport Beach architect Frank Leslie Spangler, AIA, WoodWalk's one and two-story homes have master suites with private dressing areas, terra cotta entries and plush nylon carpeting. Kitchens, dishwashers, disposers, ceramic tile countertops, luminous ceilings and pantries.

All homes have at least one woodburning fireplace, while one plan has three. Some models have cathedral ceilings which rise to 16 ft.

Architect Spangler has enhanced the exteriors of the homes through the use of textured stucco trimmed with cedar and high pitched shake roofs. Rear and sideyard fencing is furnished.

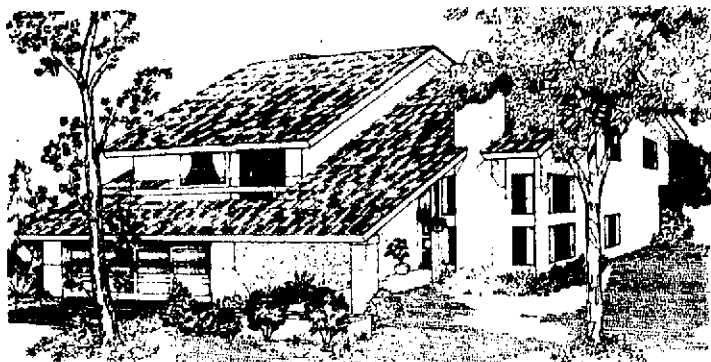

TO REACH the sales and information center and four furnished models from the San Diego Freeway, exit at Lake Forest Drive, go north on Lake Forest Drive to Serrano, turn right on Serrano to Ridge Route, left on Ridge Route Drive to Chestnut Lane, and right on Chestnut Lane.

The model complex is open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk.

INFLUENTIAL HOMES, LAKE FOREST, START AT $88,450

96-unit Influential Homes hold grand opening today

Influential Homes, Lake Forest, a 96-unit, $8.5-million, single-family community, holds its grand opening today. Merrill Butler Jr., president of Butler Housing Corp., the Irvine-based developer, said Saturday.

"These are the most contemporary and exciting homes our firm has ever produced, and we are very enthused about them," said Butler.

"The scenic surroundings of Lake Forest have been particularly appealing to homeshoppers, as the first two units of homes were 70 per cent sold out before the grand opening. Over 40 were reserved the weekend sales began," he added.

On the south side of Jeronimo Road, one block west of Lake Forest Drive, the project is within one block of the community's largest lake and within two blocks of its largest clubhouse. Lake Forest offers many recreational opportunities, including tennis, swimming, sailing, and horseback riding through the community's recreation clubs, to which all residents belong.

Three different plans are available with three or four bedrooms. Prices start at $88,450.

Standard features include slope-ceilinged master suites and living rooms, wood-burning fireplaces with gas log lighters, formal dining rooms, pantries, continuous-cleaning double ovens, two-car garages with direct access to the home, separate laundry areas and ample storage space.

The first unit is scheduled to be ready for occupancy in July; the second, in August. Walker & Lee, Inc., is the exclusive sales agent.

Silver Lakes commercial center due

SILVER LAKES RESORT - Construction will begin soon on this high desert resort's first commercial center. It will be called Southlake Plaza with Phase 1 a 5,000-square foot, single-story commercial building.

Owners of the four-acre commercial lot and plaza, located on the northwest corner of Silver Lakes' South Lake, are Joe and Iona Grecco of Thousand Oaks and Jerry and Belle Rocco, Woodland Hills.

Grecco, a Silver Lakes homeowner, said the resort's first commercial structure will be divided into 500- and 880-square foot stores, including a convenience market, laundromat, beauty shop, real estate office, travel and insurance agencies, interior decorator, CPA and a construction/landscaping business.

All owners are Silver Lakes residents.

Windward Village filling up

Windward Village, an adult mobile home park in Long Beach, is accepting reservations now, permitting those interested to make their space selection now, and take their time shopping for a compatible mobile home.

The luxurious complex has room for 305 spaces, 25 per cent of which were selected within two weeks of preview showing.

For further information call Continental Mobile Housing, Inc., (213) 694-2181.

The Village is surrounded with attractive perimeter fencing, and has security controlled entrance gate. Residents will enjoy such country club facilities as elegantly appointed club house with lounge, banquet-style kitchen, spacious meeting room and stage for entertainment, billiard and card rooms.

The park also has swimming pool, courts for outdoor games, an exercise room and inside therapy pool.

Each space has telephone service meters for natural gas and electricity. Carefully tended green areas, planted gardens and walkways offer environmental beauty and serenity.

Streets and walks are attractively and amply lighted.

Laundry room and car wash areas offer additional convenience. Off-street parking is provided.

Windward Village is close to recreational and cultural centers, beautiful beach areas, major shopping facilities and just two blocks from San Diego and Long Beach Freeways.

Salesman honored

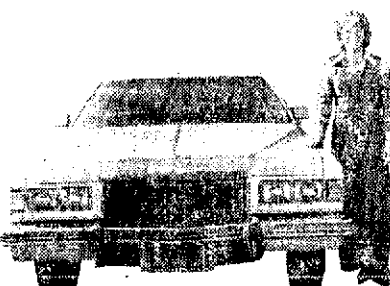

Edwin B. Sauls, manager of Orange County sales operations for Real Estate West in Anaheim, recently received a special award from the Sales and Marketing Council of Orange County in recognition of his selling over $3.5 million in new homes during 1976.

The $3.5 million plus represents 120 new homes Sauls sold for the Sant Construction Co. at three of the firm's new home developments.

About 100 homes were sold by Sauls at Yorba Park, Anaheim. The balance were at Shady Glen-Yorba Linda and Las Lanas in Fullerton.

Real Estate West is the exclusive sales agent for the Sant company and is a family operated real estate brokerage firm, headed by James Sauls.

LINDA JOINS "THE CADILLAC CLUB"

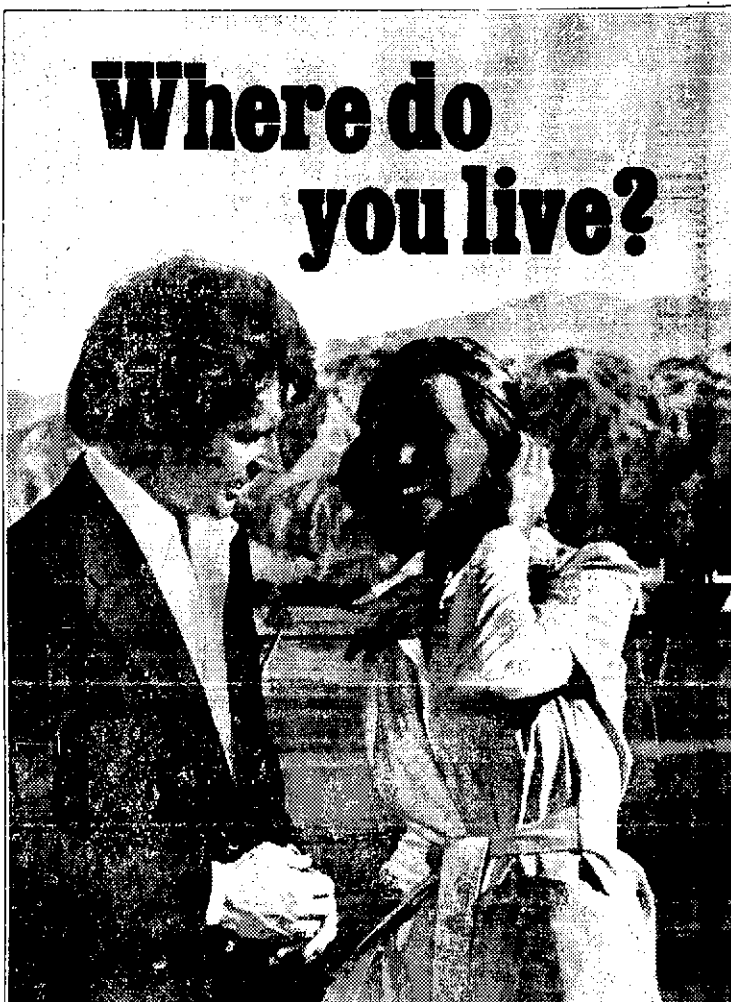

Linda Anderson of Tarbell's Valley View Office in Garden Grove has joined the firm's prestigious "Cadillac Club." Linda adds this latest accomplishment to an already staggering list of honors including several "Gold Keys" for excellence in sales and listings and the coveted "Presidential Top Producer's" trophy recognizing outstanding overall performance in real estate. A seven year resident of Orange County, Linda, her husband Ron and their three kids live in Cypress. For all your real estate needs, call a professional with proven results, call Linda Anderson.

Russians begin life in Israel

YOUNG Russian immigrant, above, waits for her mother outside supermarket in Mevasseret Zion, Jewish Agency absorption center outside Jerusalem. In picture at right, James Kraus, former New Yorker and now press spokesman for the agency, talks with newcomers to Israel from Russia, Zina Reines and her son and daughter-in-law, Leonid and Elizabeth Reines.

EDITOR'S NOTE: M. L. Stein, chairman of the Journalism Department at Long Beach State University, recently made a visit to Israel. Following is the first of three articles on his impressions of that infant nation.

JERUSALEM — Eighteen kindergarten children sit in a semicircle singing in unsteady Hebrew.

It might be an ordinary classroom in Israel, except for one fact. All of the youngsters were newly arrived immigrants from Russia, South Africa, England, the United States, India, Argentina and 10 other nations.

This was a school in the special village of Mevasseret Zion, an immigrant absorption center eight miles out of Jerusalem.

Here, nearly 1,000 newcomers remain for eight or nine months while they learn Hebrew and become adjusted to life in Israel, the country they have chosen as their home.

They get free furnished apartments, a food allowance, sightseeing trips to Jerusalem and other parts of Israel, cooking lessons, help in finding jobs and even low-interest loans to buy such luxuries as television sets.

Forty-five per cent of the village residents are from Russia. Some 120,000 Jews have left the Soviet Union for Israel since 1967, according to Yehuda Dominitz, deputy director of the Jewish Agency. The agency, whose mission is the resettlement of worldwide Jews in Israel, established Mevasseret Zion and four other absorption centers in other sections of the country.

The Jewish Agency is a private organization largely financed by worldwide Jewry. It works closely with the Israeli government in resettling foreign Jews. Although the agency is the main arm of the historic Zionist movement, Israel currently feels a special need to increase its population of 3,500,000.

It considers itself in a state of war with the surrounding Arab nations and their more than 40,000,000 people.

Mevasseret Zion is the largest and takes only immigrant families with children. Its two-story, barracks-like apartment buildings rest on a stony hillside. An armed civilian guard mans a gate through which only authorized persons may pass, a precaution against terrorist attacks.

The settlement also contains a grocery store, school buildings, synagogue, library, recreation hall and an air raid shelter, a common sight in Israel. The two and three-bedroom apartments are plainly furnished with essential furniture and kitchen equipment.

VISITORS usually are greeted by Bella Amit, the unit's educational director who came to Israel as a Russian immigrant five years ago.

"No one has to leave here until they know the language and have found a job," the chain-smoking, dark-eyed woman said. "As a matter of fact, not all immigrants come to the absorption centers. Some can be assimilated into the society on their arrival."

About half the Russian arrivals go through the centers, according to agency officials.

"It's very hard for them to get used to living in a free society," Amit explained. "In Russia they were told where to live, where to work and what to think. The news-

People's Pharmacy

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Doctors have the Physicians' Desk Reference, their annual guide to medications.

And now the consumer has "The People's Pharmacy," by Joe Graedon (St. Martin's Press, New York, $8.95).

Subtitle to Graedon's book is "A Guide to Prescription Drugs, Home Remedies and Over-the-Counter Medications." Over-the-counter means non-prescription.

Graedon, 31, a pharmacologist of Durham, N. C., said in a telephone interview that his book should not have had to be written.

But it had to be, he said, because most doctors won't take the time to tell the patient all about the medications they have prescribed.

Yet they should take the time to discuss the "most common and most serious" side effects, Graedon continued. For example, the drug reserpine, sometimes given for high blood pressure, can cause psychological depression. The person who takes this drug should be advised of this fact, he said.

What may happen, he continued, is that the patient may go to a psychiatrist, who, in turn, will prescribe a drug that will also cause a side effect or two. Finally, drugs may be prescribed in an effort to curb side effects, and still more side effects may be produced.

"It can be a vicious cycle," Graedon said.

IN HIS BOOK, Graedon reviews a variety of medication problems and even discusses home remedies.

A teaspoonful of dry sugar is still the best way to halt hiccups, he said. A few drops of water with the sugar may help if the patient is young. Another remedy, in case the dry sugar doesn't work, is a jigger of vinegar.

Another chapter is devoted to non-prescription drugs. Graedon also explores the problem of soaps, warning against the antibacterial deodorant bars which may cause sensitivity to the skin when one goes into the sunlight. He recommends "plain old soap like Ivory or Palmolive."

He describes treatments for accidental poisoning and discusses what he believes to be the best poison antidote kit available.

The book contains an eight-page chart of drugs that are especially dangerous to a fetus. The chart does more than just name the drugs to be avoided by a pregnant woman. It also describes in detail the abnormalities a drug may cause.

Probably the most fascinating chapter in the book is the one on drug interactions. It emphasizes that whenever a person takes one medicine in the presence of another, the potential exists for a serious interaction.

Diuretic drugs like HydroDiuril can react adversely with 34 other medications. Aspirin interacts with 24 other drugs. If tetracycline is prescribed along with penicillin, the effectiveness of penicillin can be reduced, and an infection may be prolonged.

Example after example is given of what happens when certain drugs are mixed.

GRAEDON CALLS codeine the best all-around drug there is. It can handle pain and manage diarrhea and coughs. It even has a slight sedative action.

At the other end of the scale are mouthwashes, which he calls "a total ripoff." They do no good at all, he said.

Graedon said in the interview that a package insert for the consumer should be considered so that the patient can learn some of the basic facts about his drug.

It would be better though, if the doctor sat down and told the patient about the drugs being prescribed.

Graedon emphasized that a patient should try to learn from the doctor:

—The name of the drug being prescribed — both the trade name and the generic (common) name.

—How to take the medication.

—The most common side effects.

—The names of the drugs that may not mix with the new medication.

Graedon said also that one should never take aspirin after drinking an alcoholic beverage. Alcohol plus aspirin may result in massive internal bleeding.

Finally, mixing aspirin with vitamin C can be a mistake. Vitamin C can increase the effect of aspirin by slowing its elimination from the body. The danger is that the toxicity potential of aspirin may be increased, Graedon said.

Glad you asked that!

YOUNG actor Robby Benson, right, with his "family," Ben Gazzara and Eileen Brennan from TV movie, "The Death of Richie" — he's no newcomer to the stage.

THE FORDS, son Jack, Betty and Gerald on a plane flight in 1975 when the President surprised the First Lady with a birthday cake — the former president's easy-going nature not just a facade.

"THE CAPTAIN AND TENNILLE," in offstage life Toni Tennille and husband, Daryl Dragon, with their pet bulldogs — the happily married pair have their musical act together.

COMEDIAN Henny Youngman and his coat of arms letterhead — various ventures keep him busy.

by gardner

Q: Does Henny Youngman have a coat of arms engraved on his stationery? Also, can you give us some of his recent timely quips? — Amy and Chuck Rentner, Bensonhurst, N.Y.

A: Henny's "coat of arms" is a drawing of an overcoat with eight sleeves hanging out.

And some of the laugh-lines he threw out in Miami Beach's Deauville Star Theater and his TV appearances these days and nights include: "A doctor gave a fellow six months to live. The guy couldn't pay him. So the doctor gave him another six months."

Youngman, who acts as his own agent, says, "I've got more agents than the CIA."

"Know why the new Italian navy has glass-bottomed boats? So they can see the old Italian navy."

"I was so ugly when I was born the doctor who delivered me slapped my mother."

"Know why all those nude shows still use wardrobe mistresses? For bare necessities."

"There are advantages of growing old. George Burns, in his 80s, is now permitted to go into the ladies room."

Youngman has branched out into another of his many sidelines — a syndicated newspaper cartoon called "Henny." "I write a gag a day, a cartoonist illustrates it and then it goes network," he says.

And still another possible career: The fellow who owns Groucho's old "You Bet Your Life" (now in syndication) is mulling over the idea of reviving the show with Youngman doing the Groucho bit.

Q: When he was President, though he looked like such a quiet, calm person, isn't a fact that Jerry Ford was a real rough one to work for? — Leslie Barret, Baltimore.

A: His looks weren't deceiving. "I'm too easygoing with those who work for me," Ford once confessed. "My nature is to overlook it when they're not up to par. I guess I'm too tolerant," the former President conceded. "It's hard for me to fire anyone."

Betty Ford expressed similar concerns before returning to private life. "I've only recently become aware," she said, "that some of my own staff, as well as some people in Jerry's, are doing things we don't approve of. Some aren't as qualified as we thought or as they should have been... I always worried about people telling him everything was going smoothly when in fact it really wasn't."

Q: On "The Captain and Tennille" show, the Captain (Daryl Dragon) makes it appear to be more corporal punishment than entertainment. He looks so bored you'd think he was a viewer, not a performer. What keeps them together? — P. Barnard, Birmingham, Ala.

A: They're happily married!

Q: About the boy who was so realistic as the drug-addicted teen-ager in the TV movie, "The Death of Richie." I heard this was his first acting role. Is this true? — Cynthia Robins, Milwaukee.

A: No. Though Robby Benson never studied acting, he's been on the stage since he was five. He made his debut as one of the little princes in Yul Brynner's Broadway hit, "The King and I." Robby has a long list of credits: He starred in "Search for Tomorrow," was Al Pacino's son in "Godfather II," was a standout in "Ode to Billy Joe," worked alongside Liza Minnelli and Gene Hackman in "Lucky Lady" and was Dyan Cannon's brother in "Virginia Hill." Another touching role of his was the dying boy in TV's "Death Be Not Proud."

ACTOR Jimmy Stewart as a private in World War II — he advanced in rank during the war and after.

Q: I remember during World War II that Jimmy Stewart went on bombing missions in the Air Force. Yet I recently heard he's superstitious about flying in a commercial plane. Is he? — Z. Jefferson, Topeka, Kan.

A: Yes. So much so that he reveals he wears the same necktie as a good-luck charm every time he flies. The soft-spoken actor, soon to be seen in "Airport '77," enlisted as a private in the Army Air Corps in '41. After completing 20 bombing missions, he rose to the rank of full colonel. In '57, the Senate authorized Stewart's promotion to reserve brigadier general in the Air Force. But it was held up for two years after Sen. Margaret Chase Smith pointed out that Stewart had only put in nine days of training in 11 years. The Senate overcame the objection by ordering Jimmy to put in two weeks of training.

Despite taxes, Gielgud likes England

Before John Gielgud, 72, left New York after his brilliant success in Harold Pinter's "No Man's Land," he told he he was losing his memory.

"I can still learn long speeches for the stage and screen but I have trouble remembering people. One day a beautiful woman came into my dressing room and I thought, 'Ah, is that Deborah Kerr?' It was only when she mentioned Monaco that I realized I had been talking all along to Grace Kelly."

Luckily for us all, Sir John — considered by many critics to be the greatest living actor in the English language — has no plans to retire. He's back home in England now. Despite the harsh tax situation there, he has sold his New York apartment to actress Rachel Roberts, and is trying to get used to being English again.

"I've always been fond of America," he said, "but I want to die in England. In America the cemeteries are so unfriendly and overcrowded. I make more money in America than I do in England, and the tax people let me keep it. In England the salaries are poor and I've had to sell off my valuable and cherished possessions to make ends meet."

Now that he's home, his financial difficulties have accelerated. The other day he told Sydney Edwards of the Evening Standard that he has just bought a country house after 30 years of living in London and "country life is costing me a fortune. The wall fell down the other day. They said it was an Act of God and I couldn't get any insurance. It infuriated me. But I can hear the birds and there are views of trees and lakes. I've never had such financial insecurity. The more you earn, the more they tax you."

"My accountant told me the other day I would never again be solvent until the day I die. I have to employ a chauffeur because I don't drive. I did drive at 20, but I was such a menace I gave it up."

"I'M DEPENDENT on the kindness of strangers. The expense of a chauffeur is the most awful drain. It worries me that I may be taken ill. Then what would I live on? Everything you save is worth so much less. Food prices have gone up five-fold. It doesn't encourage people in the theater although I'm awfully well paid. I hate to grouse and complain, but it's an unfortunate time."

He says he can't afford to stop working, but I know it would be a sad loss to the world and to himself if he gave up acting after so many years. A lot of people thought "No Man's Land" was boring. They used to anger him by walking out after intermission.

But during his Broadway run,

he and his old friend Ralph Richardson brought in lots of teen-agers who had never been inside a theater before and made Pinter fans out of them. He's a sensation in Alain Resnais' magnificent new movie "Providence," which is a cinematic sensation in New York, and he's just finished Tony Richardson's film "Joseph Andrews" with Ann-Margret, in which he plays an old miser covered with warts, and Gore Vidal's "Caligula" in Rome.

He's now completing the filming of a television version of Shaw's "Heartbreak House" and then he'll play the title role in John Schlesinger's new National Theater production of "Julius Caesar."

It seems evident that sooner or later he'll be back with us once again in America, although he once remarked wisely: "The way to come to America is for a short run. Americans love to welcome you and see you off. They give you parties when you arrive and parties when you go away. But if you stay too long, you've got to be an American."

Sir John, you're welcome anytime to stay as long as you like. You're a great and honest man, who in the twilight of your years, is still a prince of players.

TOPPLED BY the flu last week, I caught up on some reading: two vital, riveting new books I now pass on to you are Gloria Emerson's "Winners and Losers"

rex reed

(Random House, $10.95) and Brooke Hayward's "Haywire" (Alfred Knopf, $10).

Emerson was the N.Y. Times correspondent in Indochina and nobody has ever been better qualified to dissect, analyze or articulate the Vietnam experience. As horrifying as it seems, there are still millions of well-meaning, good-hearted Americans who do not understand why we were there, what we did there or how it affected us at home and abroad.

Ms. Emerson, in her moving, humane and totally dedicated way, examines the war from a personal point of view, interviewing hundreds of soldiers and civilians who were shattered by a war nobody wanted as she was. The most touching thing about this exhaustively researched masterpiece is that it isn't about war at all, but more directly about the lives that were torn and divided by it.

The frightened, hungry children who are always the most innocent victims of any war, the brave teen-agers who speak through ravaged faces, the parents of lost soldiers, the courageous resisters who suffered silently, the cynical CIA professionals who look back in boredom: they all come sadly, infuriatingly to life in a book that reads like great fiction but is all the more astounding and shocking because it really happened.

A number of cleverly unexplained mystiques are exploded for all time: the hypocrisy of the amnesty program; the real reasons why the Vietnam war was immoral, illegal and wrong as opposed to what the school textbooks still teach in U.S. public schools. There is outrage here, for Emerson writes like a saint possessed by a demon, seeking exorcism for us all.

There have been many fine books on why we failed in Vietnam, but no other book has penetrated the emotional surface of the human agony of war as this one does.

Out of it all, a work of deeply profound literature has emerged, and in the telling, we suddenly know Vietnam was not just a far-away place with a strange-sounding name on some funny-looking map. It was a human experience we must not forget. We are the war junkies; the book is our methadone. There is no need to feel guilt or remorse or inferiority while reading it, but it does light the dark recesses of the conscience and lights the way for a noble future. It is the wisest, most illuminating reading experience I've had this year, and Gloria Emerson should be canonized for writing it.

"I've only recently become aware," she said, "that some of my own staff, as well as some people in Jerry's, are doing things we don't approve of. Some aren't as qualified as we thought or as they should have been... I always worried about people telling him everything was going smoothly when in fact it really wasn't."

Q: On "The Captain and Tennille" show, the Captain (Daryl Dragon) makes it appear to be more corporal punishment than entertainment. He looks so bored you'd think he was a viewer, not a performer. What keeps them together? — P. Barnard, Birmingham, Ala.

A: They're happily married!

Q: About the boy who was so realistic as the drug-addicted teen-ager in the TV movie, "The Death of Richie." I heard this was his first acting role. Is this true? — Cynthia Robins, Milwaukee.

A: No. Though Robby Benson never studied acting, he's been on the stage since he was five. He made his debut as one of the little princes in Yul Brynner's Broadway hit, "The King and I." Robby has a long list of credits: He starred in "Search for Tomorrow," was Al Pacino's son in "Godfather II," was a standout in "Ode to Billy Joe," worked alongside Liza Minnelli and Gene Hackman in "Lucky Lady" and was Dyan Cannon's brother in "Virginia Hill." Another touching role of his was the dying boy in TV's "Death Be Not Proud."

ACTOR Jimmy Stewart as a private in World War II — he advanced in rank during the war and after.

Q: I remember during World War II that Jimmy Stewart went on bombing missions in the Air Force. Yet I recently heard he's superstitious about flying in a commercial plane. Is he? — Z. Jefferson, Topeka, Kan.

A: Yes. So much so that he reveals he wears the same necktie as a good-luck charm every time he flies. The soft-spoken actor, soon to be seen in "Airport '77," enlisted as a private in the Army Air Corps in '41. After completing 20 bombing missions, he rose to the rank of full colonel. In '57, the Senate authorized Stewart's promotion to reserve brigadier general in the Air Force. But it was held up for two years after Sen. Margaret Chase Smith pointed out that Stewart had only put in nine days of training in 11 years. The Senate overcame the objection by ordering Jimmy to put in two weeks of training.

Despite taxes, Gielgud likes England

Before John Gielgud, 72, left New York after his brilliant success in Harold Pinter's "No Man's Land," he told he was losing his memory.

"I can still learn long speeches for the stage and screen but I have trouble remembering people. One day a beautiful woman came into my dressing room and I thought, 'Ah, is that Deborah Kerr?' It was only when she mentioned Monaco that I realized I had been talking all along to Grace Kelly."

Luckily for us all, Sir John — considered by many critics to be the greatest living actor in the English language — has no plans to retire. He's back home in England now. Despite the harsh tax situation there, he has sold his New York apartment to actress Rachel Roberts, and is trying to get used to being English again.

"I've always been fond of America," he said, "but I want to die in England. In America the cemeteries are so unfriendly and overcrowded. I make more money in America than I do in England, and the tax people let me keep it. In England the salaries are poor and I've had to sell off my valuable and cherished possessions to make ends meet."

Now that he's home, his financial difficulties have accelerated. The other day he told Sydney Edwards of the Evening Standard that he has just bought a country house after 30 years of living in London and "country life is costing me a fortune. The wall fell down the other day. They said it was an Act of God and I couldn't get any insurance. It infuriated me. But I can hear the birds and there are views of trees and lakes. I've never had such financial insecurity. The more you earn, the more they tax you."

"My accountant told me the other day I would never again be solvent until the day I die. I have to employ a chauffeur because I don't drive. I did drive at 20, but I was such a menace I gave it up."

"I'M DEPENDENT on the kindness of strangers. The expense of a chauffeur is the most awful drain. It worries me that I may be taken ill. Then what would I live on? Everything you save is worth so much less. Food prices have gone up five-fold. It doesn't encourage people in the theater although I'm awfully well paid. I hate to grouse and complain, but it's an unfortunate time."

He says he can't afford to stop working, but I know it would be a sad loss to the world and to himself if he gave up acting after so many years. A lot of people thought "No Man's Land" was boring. They used to anger him by walking out after intermission.

But during his Broadway run,

he and his old friend Ralph Richardson brought in lots of teen-agers who had never been inside a theater before and made Pinter fans out of them. He's a sensation in Alain Resnais' magnificent new movie "Providence," which is a cinematic sensation in New York, and he's just finished Tony Richardson's film "Joseph Andrews" with Ann-Margret, in which he plays an old miser covered with warts, and Gore Vidal's "Caligula" in Rome.

He's now completing the filming of a television version of Shaw's "Heartbreak House" and then he'll play the title role in John Schlesinger's new National Theater production of "Julius Caesar."

It seems evident that sooner or later he'll be back with us once again in America, although he once remarked wisely: "The way to come to America is for a short run. Americans love to welcome you and see you off. They give you parties when you arrive and parties when you go away. But if you stay too long, you've got to be an American."

Sir John, you're welcome anytime to stay as long as you like. You're a great and honest man, who in the twilight of your years, is still a prince of players.

TOPPLED BY the flu last week, I caught up on some reading: two vital, riveting new books I now pass on to you are Gloria Emerson's "Winners and Losers"

rex reed

(Random House, $10.95) and Brooke Hayward's "Haywire" (Alfred Knopf, $10).

Emerson was the N.Y. Times correspondent in Indochina and nobody has ever been better qualified to dissect, analyze or articulate the Vietnam experience. As horrifying as it seems, there are still millions of well-meaning, good-hearted Americans who do not understand why we were there, what we did there or how it affected us at home and abroad.

Ms. Emerson, in her moving, humane and totally dedicated way, examines the war from a personal point of view, interviewing hundreds of soldiers and civilians who were as shattered by a war nobody wanted as she was. The most touching thing about this exhaustively researched masterwork is that it isn't about war at all, but more directly about the lives that were torn and divided by it.

The frightened, hungry children

who are always the most innocent victims of any war, the brave teen-agers who speak through ravaged faces, the parents of lost soldiers, the courageous resisters who suffered silently, the cynical CIA professionals who look back in boredom: they all come sadly, infuriatingly to life in a book that reads like great fiction but is all the more astounding and shocking because it really happened.

A number of cleverly unexplained mystiques are exploded for all time: the hypocrisy of the amnesty program; the real reasons why the Vietnam war was immoral, illegal and wrong as opposed to what the school textbooks still teach in U.S. public schools. There is outrage here, for Emerson writes like a saint possessed by a demon, seeking exorcism for us all.

There have been many fine books on why we failed in Vietnam, but no other book has penetrated the emotional surface of the human agony of war as this one does.

Out of it all, a work of deeply profound literature has emerged, and in the telling, we suddenly know Vietnam was not just a far-away place with a strange-sounding name on some funny-looking map. It was a human experience we must not forget. We are the war junkies; the book is our methadone.

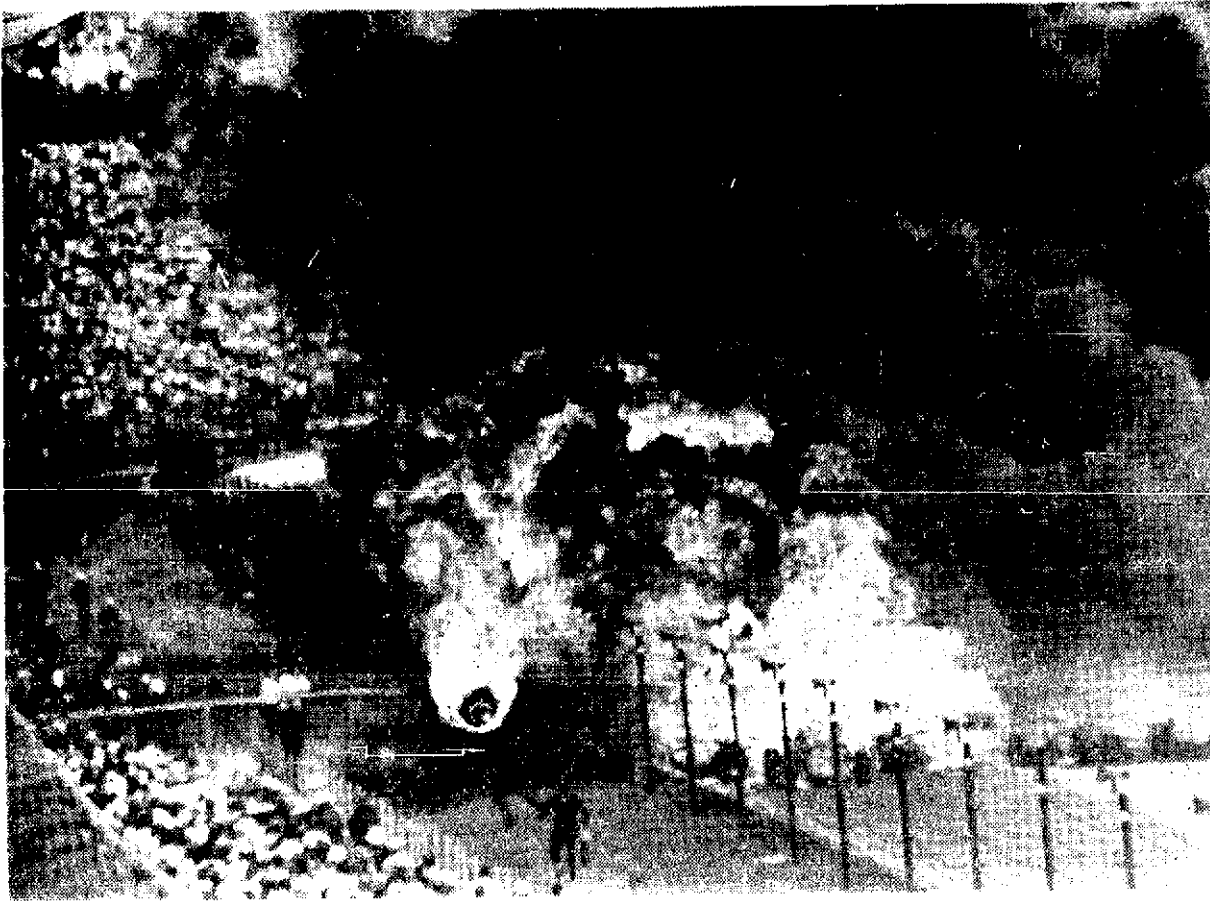

There is no need to feel guilt or remorse or inferiority while reading it, but it does light the dark recesses of the conscience and lights the way for a noble future. It is the wisest, most illuminating reading experience I've had this year, and Gloria Emerson should be canonized for writing it.

"In the long run," race driver Eddie Sachs once said, "death is the odds-on favorite." Sachs was speaking of the Indianapolis 500. America's traditional Memorial Day auto race, and clearly he was right. By 1964, the year of the 48th running of the race, the track had claimed 54 lives. Drivers come and go, auto styles change, engines get bigger and faster, but at Indy the only constant is danger.

The field for the 1964 race is the highest ever — 33 cars. Sachs, driving in his eighth straight 500, lines up in the 19th row directly behind Dave MacDonald, driving at Indy for the first time. The green starting flag drops and the mass of slowly orbiting cars spurts forward with an ear-splitting roar.

Just as the leaders head into their third 2 1/2-mile lap, Dave MacDonald, back in the pack at a point where the homestretch begins, loses control. His blue car spins, smacks the inside wall at 150 miles an hour and bounces into the middle of the track. The buzzing of the 200,000 fans turns suddenly into screams and the exploding fuel tank belches a fiery tower of black smoke.

Blinded by the smoke and flames, six other drivers, unable to stop, boom into MacDonald's car. Sachs hits it broadside. Flaming wreckage leaps the guard fence. Sachs, trapped in his cockpit, is dead when rescuers reach him.

Two hours later, at about the time the wreckage is cleared and the race resumes, as it always does, MacDonald dies in a hospital. The odds-on favorite wins again: Indy has claimed its 55th and 56th victims.

From an eighth of a mile away, Associated Press photographer Bob Daugherty can feel the heat of the flames. He leans far out from the photographers' perch 40 feet above the track — his favorite position in several years of covering the race — and shoots picture after picture through a telephoto lens as car after car plows into the burning wreckage. He senses that what he has in his camera is dramatic, and decides to take the film personally to the AP darkroom nearby rather than entrust it to a courier. "Who was the guy who was killed?" he asks, unloading his camera. "Eddie Sachs," someone says.

Daugherty gasps. He hands over his film and walks out, not waiting to see the prints. Eddie Sachs was Bob Daugherty's pal, a cheerful, helpful, good friend. The photographer, dazed, returns to his perch and makes a few more perfunctory pictures as the race drags on. The following year, assigned again to photograph the Indy race, Bob Daugherty selects a position from which the stretch of track where his friend died is completely out of his vision.

Psychology training clinic counsels public

By PATRICIA de LUNA
Staff Writer

For the past six years the Community Psychology Clinic at Long Beach State University has been training graduates and undergraduates in the ways and where-with-all of easing the emotional woes of the public.

Paul Peterson, a tall middle-aged teaching psychologist, has been clinic director for two years. He expects to turn over the rotating leadership soon to Victor Benassi, the next psychologist in line.

Under the clinic's leadership are two satellite facilities — King's Place in the predominantly black neighborhood surrounding King's Park on Rhea Street and the Orizaba facility, housed in the city's Westside Community Center on Santa Fe.

The clinic at LBSU, located across from the second floor stairwell in the psychology building, counsels about 80 members of the community a week. They are seen by the 64 trainees in one of two programs at the clinic.

The first program trains juniors and seniors in community clinical psychology. The second program is for graduate students with more academic background who want practical experience.

First semester students receive both clinical and community academic work, training in interview techniques and do some role playing as a learning method.

Beginning with the second semester and continuing through the second year, students receive training in family therapy, adolescent counseling, crisis intervention, some substance abuse counseling and child and filial therapy.

THE CLINIC also makes use of outside professionals willing to come in for four or five hours on an afternoon to demonstrate their techniques for the students. Louis Paul, a leader in crisis intervention, is a frequent visitor. Several video tapes, which students may view at their leisure, have been made of Paul in action personally training a group of clinic students.

In working with clients from the community, students have the opportunity to observe one another through one-way mirrors for the purpose of learning and pointing out areas of improvement in their techniques. The first year students observe the second year students and second year students observe the graduate students.

Students are videotaped at least once during the course of their training, also to show where improvements can be made.

Most of the clients, who average six to eight weeks of once-a-week visits to the clinic, are people troubled by marital conflicts and women in transition, many of them recently divorced.

The clients' problems are evaluated so that any one requiring care longer than can be accommodated during the academic calendar will be referred to outside professional agencies. "We try to avoid the more severe cases," says Peterson.

"We are a training facility and have to be more watchful."

INCOMING clients have a personal interview with a trainee and take the 556-question Minnesota Multiphasic Personality Inventory test; faculty members then go over each case during a regular Friday in-take meeting and accepted clients are assigned to trainees for care. (The clinic has many family clients at the moment and students work with them in teams of two.)

Charges to the clients range from 50 cents to $15 a visit, depending on level of income. Few people have been required to pay the maximum.

Peterson looks over each new case, judges the difficulty of care and assigns each case to one of three categories. The less difficult cases go to first year undergraduates and the most difficult cases are assigned to graduate students.

"We maintain no waiting list," says Peterson "and try to arrange a visit within 24 hours of the initial phone call."

The clinic also runs group counseling sessions, with changing memberships. These groups are for women in transition, adolescents and preadolescents. An estimated one-third of the clients seen by trainees for individual counseling also become involved in one of the eight-week-long group sessions.

Once a student has completed training at the clinic he or she receives a certificate of completion which has little academic standing but can be useful in getting into graduate schools or in obtaining positions later on.

Graduate students "are exposed to more than most students receive in a master's program," says

Peterson. "They know their own strengths and weaknesses in dealing with clients and can learn to build on their strengths."

Socially Speaking

Scooped by a billboard telling wedding news

SOMETIMES I say "you read it first in Socially Speaking."

But you may have already read today's story on a billboard at the corner of Wardlow Road and Long Beach Boulevard.

The story and billboard are about the recent wedding of attorney Kosta George and the former Debra Ketchum of Valencia.

The billboard was the brain child of Mike Salta, Kosta's best man Bob Cree, Dan Dunlap and Hollywood resident, David Shane. In retaliation, Kosta wants me to tell all my readers that best man Bob's true name is Ira and he has been living under a nom de plume for years. Bob, and his wife, Jan, are also new parents of a little girl with the lovely name of Elizabeth.

Debra, whose parents, Marvin and Jeanne Frey, came from their home in Valencia, asked her sister, Carol Nardello, to be matron of honor.

Other family members witnessing the vow exchange with Judge Roy Brown officiating were the bridegroom's mother, Stavroula George, his sister Margaret DeMasters and her husband, Charles, and Kosta's daughters, Vicki and Stephanie.

The bride's family included her sisters, Janet and Susan Frey, and grandparents, Clint and Peggy Tanner.

The newlyweds plan a delayed honeymoon to Hawaii this summer.

SLIGHTLY longerweds.

A silver anniversary for Dr. Don and Joanne Timmons was celebrated at the El Dorado Park Estates home of Merry Lee Chambers.

Merry Lee was assisted by the four young Timmons, Tom, Nancy, Donna and Bob. The last two collaborated on the baking of a tiered anniversary cake, with a silver 25 on top and trimmed in pink and white frosting.

The hostess decked the house with wedding bells and flowers with the aid of Norma Marter, there with husband, Burt, and Marilyn Breedlove, there with husband, Dick.

Among others in the crowd of nearly 100 well-wishers were Roby and May Bessent, J. B. and Mary Lou Dixon, Dr. Dick and Betty Nixon, Dave and Dorothy Main, Bud and Irene Warren, Dave and Judy Kline, Dr. Bob and Carol Ann Kelleher, Dr. Art and Ann DeNio, Maxine Spears, Mary Thompson (husband, Dr. Jim was skiing) Dr. Dick and Nancy Daniels and Bill and Dottie Harris.

MARA GRAHAM got carried away on a recent trip to South America and brought back all kinds of party goodies.

carolyn mcdowell

So she chose a South of the Border theme for the luncheon for life members of Assistance League. Mara is current president of the group.

League House went Latin from the menu to pinatas to burros centering the tables draped with festive cloths.

Marinoff's in Belmont Shore did

a huge Mexican-style flower arrangement with red and pink roses, orchids, candles and wooden Mexican figurines.

Mara brought sombreros for some of the ladies to set the mood for listening to a strolling guitarist, Fidel Hinojosa.

I'm glad I wasn't there. Mara conducted the meeting in excellent Spanish. My four year study of Spanish produced si and gracias.

Leaguers welcomed at the front door by huge paper flower trees framing the entry included Flo Brooks, representing active members of the League, Clare Hossom, Josephine Paap, Grace Rowe, Dorothy Goodnight, Virginia Mitchell, Ruth Dougherty, Dolly Ward and founding member Winifred Campbell, resplendent in a spanish shawl.

MORE WITH the ladies.

Diana's Club, social group founded at Poly High School in 1927, combined installation of officers with a golden anniversary party.

New board member Evelyn Pine hosted the 34 members at a dinner party at Long Beach Yacht Club.

Helen Teeple was installed as president.

Other board members are Kay Richardson, Mary Emrich and Ann Rosner.

Many of the local members still meet on a regular basis after a half century of friendship.

Four of the original charter members came from out of town especially for the party — Irma Thomas from San Francisco, Catherine Sullivan, Bakersfield, Evelyn Barriek, Laguna, and Dorothy Mitchell, Fallbrook.

JEWEL MARCHESE, Nelva Lane and Mary Kay Williams must be the busiest gals in town. First, Jewel was one of the hostesses for a birthday luncheon honoring Mary Kay at Long Beach Yacht Club. Neva was co-hostess.

Then the three, and others, went to a housewarming luncheon in Nelva's new Leisure World apartment.

Housewarmers were Jeannette Becker, Florence Toennings, Freda MacDonald, Josephine Willin, Athena Hall and Lillian Browne.

JEWEL TOOK TIME OUT to assist Haldis Hertzog at the home of Haldis and Dr. Fritz, with a buffet dinner party featuring two hours of African travel films taken by Jewel's uncle, Bill French, and his wife, Evelyn.

Also assisting with the screening for some 40 movie-goers were the Hertzogs' son and daughter-in-law, Dr. Red and Nancy.

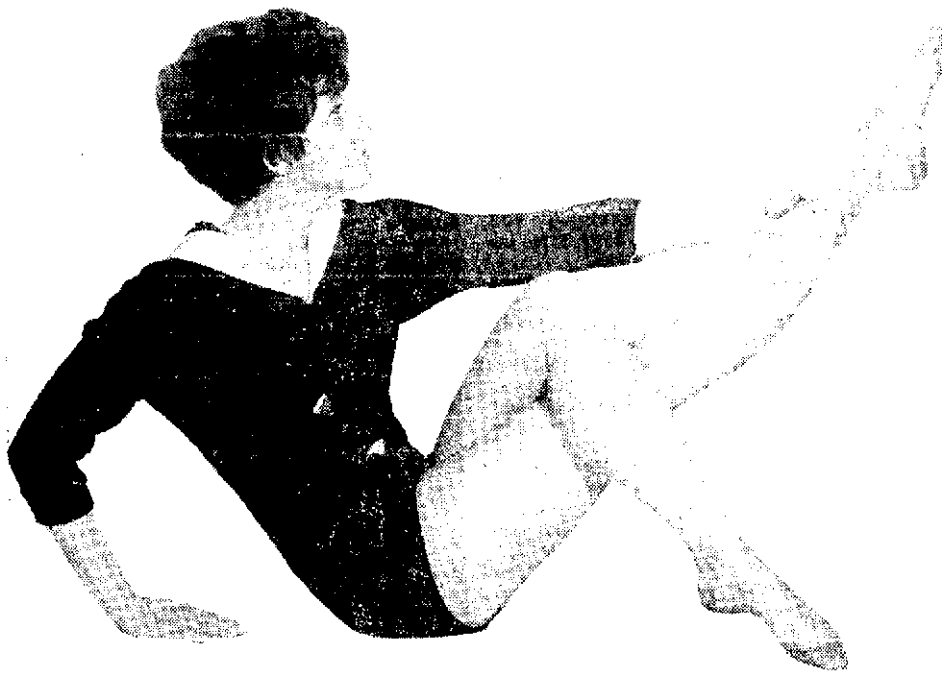

During "intermission" from the movies, Fritz guided a tour through his famous orchid growing hot house.

BELETED Happy Birthday greetings to Elmer Wendt who observed his 92nd birthday on Saturday. Elmer was a pioneer worker in construction of some of the older buildings in Long Beach such as the Independent, Press-Telegram building.

AND A HAPPY Birthday today for Genevieve Towle, who is a mere slip of a girl at age 90.

There will be an open house today at the home of her daughter Virginia Lantow with whom she lives.

The honoree also has a son, Ted Towle of Huntington Beach.

Women are asking...

'What is one of the most helpful forms of exercise?'

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

One of the most helpful types of exercise, according to a panel of physical conditioners interviewed, is "The s-t-r-e-t-c-h."

The action of slowly reaching up, expanding the rib cage, and putting lazy muscles to work not only tones and conditions, but is a great warm-up exercise. If you really want to learn the most "professional" way to perform the action, notice a kitten in the warm sunshine. No huff and puff here, just easy, slow, thoroughly relaxing movements.

"The stretch," agreed the panel, "can be as simple as lifting the hands above the head. Inhale through the nose; exhale through the mouth. You suddenly feel more wide awake, since lungs are cleared of stale air."

"Progress to a tension releaser. Sit, with legs separated 18-22 inches, and bend forward from the waist. Let both hands touch right ankle (or come as close as you can). Then, bounce-and-reach for the count of three. Reverse sides, and practice six times."

The workout, illustrated by actress Eileen Wesson, is not for the weak or the weekend gymnast. It's strictly professional and vigorous. Always get exercises okayed by your doctor. He may agree a good, healthy stretch revs circulation, but some may be too strenuous.

"If routine is too extreme, modify it by bracing both hands on floor, and lifting both legs. Return slowly to "at ease" pose. This, too, is vigorous; repeat only twice."

Carter-style White House parties win pro's praise

Perhaps it's time to expend more energy observing real manners in the White House and less energy in quibbling over every detail of the Carter's style of entertaining. We have been flooded since Inauguration Day with minute descriptions of our new President's "down-on-the-farm" way of entertaining.

tish baldrige

What has been omitted is the fact that a large majority of the guests seem to have been impressed by the genuine warmth emanating from their hosts, as well as the sincere desire to please their guests. This is far more important than the fact that only four courses were served at dinner, instead of five. (In some of the chicest houses in the world only four courses are served, instead of five!)

The first week of the Kennedy Administration, as social secretary, I quite innocently was responsible for getting President Kennedy into trouble with the entire Baptist Belt of Congress by organizing the serving of hard liquor at the White House at a large party attended by the press.

This precedent-shattering party occurred on a Sunday, another black mark. We continued to serve liquor, however, and other Presidents followed suit. Naturally, I was more than a little interested when I read a headline, "Liquor banished again from the White House."

THEN I READ, buried deep in the article, that different wines were served before dinner, as well as during the meal.

Another headline read, "Grits-type dinner served by Carters to head of state." The truth behind that statement was that the menu had been printed all in English, not in French. The same good food had been prepared by White House Chef Henry Haller, the Swiss master who has served three Presidents continuously.

In the Carter White House, the Marine Band plays as always, the beautifully trained White House staff of footmen (many of them there since the Kennedy era) served the dinner. The social aides from the military services still assist the guests, formal protocol is observed and the exchange of toasts is still a warm, witty meaningful moment for the guests.

ONE OF THE NICE Carter touches of good manners came at the conclusion of the state dinner for the Trudeauas. The Canadians decided to walk back across the street to Blair House, where they were staying, instead of taking the limousine for those few yards. The Carters walked down the curving driveway with them, right out through the gate on Pennsylvania Avenue.

Unheard of — but such a nice show of manners. It reminded me of the hue and cry that was raised when the Kennedys used to come to the bottom of the steps of the North Portico to greet their state visitors as they emerged from the limousine; previous Presidents and First Ladies had waited "grandly" in the front hall inside.

As for daughter Amy and her books, which she has read at two state dinners, I don't know whether she'll be present for all such affairs, but I hope not. She is probably bored beyond belief by them.

We have the right to complain if they give shabby dinner parties for visiting heads of state, but so far they have entertained with warmth and distinction. That's what good entertaining is all about.

The Formula Keeping your feet dry

Perspiration is a natural and essential function in the human body. Its purposes are to eliminate wastes and to control body temperature by evaporation much as a mechanical refrigeration system does. But when this perspiration is contained, as it often is in shoes, it ceases to retain its function and problems appear. The solution to these problems is to reduce the amount of perspiration to an acceptable level by an anti-perspirant. Here's a formula that has been successful in doing that.

Dry mix one tablespoon POWDERED ALUM with one-fourth cup BORIC ACID, and one-third cup TALC. (These three items can be found at drug stores). To use, sprinkle on feet, especially between toes, and in shoes. Store in glass or plastic container.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

Socially Speaking

Scooped by a billboard telling wedding news

SOMETIMES I say "you read it first in Socially Speaking."

But you may already read today's story on a billboard at the corner of Wardlow Road and Long Beach Boulevard.

The story and billboard are about the recent wedding of attorney Kosta George and the former Debra Ketchum of Valencia.

The billboard was the brain child of Mike Salta, Kosta's best man Bob Cree, Dan Dunlap and Hollywood resident, David Shane. In retaliation, Kosta wants me to tell all my readers that best man Bob's true name is Ira and he has been living under a nom de plume for years. Bob, and his wife, Jan, are also new parents of a little girl with the lovely name of Elizabeth.

Debra, whose parents, Marvin and Jeanne Frey, came from their home in Valencia, asked her sister, Carol Nardello, to be matron of honor.

Other family members witnessing the vow exchange with Judge Roy Brown officiating were the bridegroom's mother, Stavroula George, his sister Margaret De-Masters and her husband, Charles, and Kosta's daughters, Vicki and Stephanie.

The bride's family included her sisters, Janet and Susan Frey, and grandparents, Clint and Peggy Tanner.

The newlyweds plan a delayed honeymoon to Hawaii this summer.

SLIGHTLY longerweds.

A silver anniversary for Dr. Don and Joanne Timmons was celebrated at the El Dorado Park Estates home of Merry Lee Chambers.

Merry Lee was assisted by the four young Timmons, Tom, Nancy, Donna and Bob. The last two collaborated on the baking of a tiered anniversary cake, with a silver 25 on top and trimmed in pink and white frosting.

The hostess decked the house with wedding bells and flowers with the aid of Norma Marter, there with husband, Burt, and Marilyn Breedlove, there with husband, Dick.

Among others in the crowd of nearly 100 well-wishers were Roby

and May Bessent, J. B. and Mary Lou Dixon, Dr. Dick and Betty Nixon, Dave and Dorothy Main, Bud and Irene Warren, Dave and Judy Kline, Dr. Bob and Carol Ann Kelleher, Dr. Art and Ann DeNio, Maxine Spears, Mary Thompson (husband, Dr. Jim was skiing) Dr. Dick and Nancy Daniels and Bill and Dottie Harris.

MARA GRAHAM got carried away on a recent trip to South America and brought back all kinds of party goodies.

So she chose a South of the Border theme for the luncheon for life members of Assistance League. Mara is current president of the group.

League House went Latin from the menu to pinatas to burros centering the tables draped with festive cloths.

Marinoff's in Belmont Shore did

a huge Mexican-style flower arrangement with red and pink roses, orchids, candles and wooden Mexican figurines.

Mara found some of the ladies to set the mood for listening to a strolling guitarist, Fidel Hinojosa.

I'm glad I wasn't there. Mara conducted the meeting in excellent Spanish. My four year study of Spanish produced si and gracias.

Leaguers welcomed at the front door by huge paper flower trees framing the entry included Flo Brooks, representing active members of the League, Clare Hossom, Josephine Paap, Grace Rowe, Dorothy Goodnight, Virginia Mitchell, Ruth Dougherty, Dolly Ward and founding member Winifred Campbell, resplendent in a spanish shawl.

MORE WITH the ladies.

Diana's Club, social group founded at Poly High School in 1927, combined installation of officers with a golden anniversary party.

New board member Evelyn Pine hosted the 34 members at a dinner party at Long Beach Yacht Club.

Helen Teeple was installed as president.

Other board members are Kay Richardson, Mary Emrich and Ann Rosner.

Many of the local members still meet on a regular basis after a half century of friendship.

Four of the original charter members came from out of town especially for the party — Irma Thomas from San Francisco, Catherine Sullivan, Bakersfield, Evelyn Barriek, Laguna, and Dorothy Mitchell, Fallbrook.

JEWEL TOOK TIME OUT to assist Haldis Hertzog at the home of Haldis and Dr. Fritz, with a buffet dinner party featuring two hours of African travel films taken by Jewel's uncle, Bill French, and his wife, Evelyn.

Also assisting with the screening for some 40 movie-goers were the Hertzogs' son and daughter-in-law, Dr. Red and Nancy.

During "intermission" from the movies, Fritz guided a tour through his famous orchid growing hot house.

BELATED Happy Birthday greetings to Elmer Wendt who observed his 92nd birthday on Saturday. Elmer was a pioneer worker in construction of some of the older buildings in Long Beach such as the Independent, Press-Telegram building.

AND A HAPPY Birthday today for Genevieve Towle, who is a mere slip of a girl at age 90.

There will be an open house today at the home of her daughter Virginia Lantow with whom she lives.

The honoree also has a son, Ted Towle of Huntington Beach.

Women are asking...

What is one of the most helpful forms of exercise?
By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

One of the most helpful types of exercise, according to a panel of physical conditioners interviewed, is "The s-t-r-e-t-c-h."

The action of slowly reaching up, expanding the rib cage, and putting lazy muscles to work not only tones and conditions, but is a great warm-up exercise. If you really want to learn the most "professional" way to perform the action, notice a kitten in the warm sunshine. No huff and puff here, just easy, slow, thoroughly relaxing movements.

"The stretch," agreed the panel, "can be as simple as lifting the hands above the head. Inhale through the nose; exhale through the mouth. You suddenly feel more wide awake, since lungs are cleared of stale air."

"Progress to a tension releaser. Sit, with legs separated 18-22 inches, and bend forward from the waist. Let both hands touch right ankle (or come as close as you can). Then, bounce-and-reach for the count of three. Reverse sides, and practice six times."

The workout, illustrated by actress Eileen Wesson, is not for the weak or the weekend gymnast. It's strictly professional and vigorous. Always get exercises okayed by your doctor. He may agree a good, healthy stretch revs circulation, but some may be too strenuous.

If routine is too extreme, modify it by bracing both hands on floor, and lifting both legs. Return slowly to "at ease" pose. This, too, is vigorous; repeat only twice.

Freedom must be learned

papers and radio belong to the government.

"It takes time to learn freedom. The Soviet newcomers must find out for themselves what freedom is and how to react to it."

She recalled overhearing a conversation on a bus between two women who had just arrived from Russia. One had read an Israeli newspaper columnist who had expressed doubt about Israel's ability to absorb thousands of immigrants.

"One woman said to her companion, 'See, I told you Israel doesn't want us here.'"

"She was sure," Amit said, "that the column reflected our government's policy, instead of the voice of one individual, who had a right to his own view."

Dominitz mentioned other problems in absorbing the Russian Jews.

"They are products of a totally planned society," he said. "For this reason, many of them have little initiative. This has to be developed. For example, a number of them prefer a low-salaried government job here instead of one in private industry that pays much more. In the Soviet Union, a government position means security and a higher status."

"On the other hand, we get immigrant Jews who left Russia to escape a planned life."

"THE JEWS who come here really want to live in Israel," said James Kraus, a former New Yorker who is the agency's press spokesman in Jerusalem.

Most defections, he explained, take place in Vienna, the transfer point for Jewish emigres from Russia.

"Once they get to Vienna," Kraus said, "some of them declare a preference for the United States, West Germany, Italy or some other country. They never intended to settle in Israel in the first place and probably lied to Russian authorities about their intentions."

Why not Israel?

The reasons are varied, according to Agency experts. Some immigrants, they said, simply want the broader opportunities offered in the United States.

Another Agency official said some Russian Jews preferred a non-Jewish country where they could be assimilated.

Still others, according to agency spokespersons, want to avoid Israel's pioneer hardships, the threat of a war and inflationary prices.

None of these reasons were strong enough to keep the Reines family from leaving the relative comfort of Leningrad for Israel and the Mavasseret Zion absorption center.

LEONID REINES, who looks younger than his 42 years, is a metallurgical engineer with a Ph.D. His wife, Elizabeth, is a mechanical engineer and his mother, Zina, taught English at the university level. The Reines also brought their two daughters, age 16 and 5.

"It is impossible to live in the Soviet Union and be a Jew," Reines said in English. "We were forbidden to study Hebrew or to learn Jewish traditions."

Reines said he was not particularly religious but "I want the right to belong to my people."

The Reines are expected to have little trouble in adjusting to their new homeland. They are learning Hebrew rapidly and Leonid already has been interviewed for jobs in his field.

For many immigrants, however, problems remain even after they leave the absorption centers. Another organization, the Association of Russian Newcomers to Israel, helps them cope with such realities as getting children into schools, retraining for jobs and meeting the daily stresses of life in Israel.

"We try to handle human problems," explained Rachel Sadinsky, an association executive. "For some Soviet immigrants the adjustment is painful. We have from 30 to 50 people a day visit our Tel Aviv and Jerusalem offices seeking advice and help with a number of things."

SADINSKY said her group also tries to give Israelis a better understanding of immigration and what it means to their country.

Some Israelis believe that the immigration tide is putting too much of a strain on Israel's economy. There also is some resentment about the newcomers getting special privileges not given to ordinary citizens.

"Immigrant students are being admitted to our medical schools while some of our young people have to study medicine in Italy," a Tel Aviv jeweler protested.

His complaint was denied by Dominitz, of the Jewish Agency, who said prized places in Israel's medical schools are given on a strictly merit basis.

But he said Sadinsky acknowledged that the newcomers received government subsidized loans, low-cost housing and other benefits during their adjustment period.

Most Israelis, however, look forward to the immigration movement and are willing to make the necessary sacrifices to meet the needs of the settlers.

Jews from other countries also present problems. After 250 families from India had been moved into Beethsheba in the Negev Desert, health officials discovered numerous cases of under-nourishment, lack of knowledge of child care, backwardness in studies and frequent absence from work.

According to the Jewish Agency, the situation improved considerably following an education program.

"After all," said Bela Amit at the Mavasseret Zion absorption center as she watched the kindergarten children singing, "This is our future."

In-Sights Different view of death

Dear Dr. Menninger:

Please permit me to make some comments, drawn from personal experience, on the subject of funerals as discussed in your In-Sights column.

My mother died when I was seven. I was taken in to see her as soon as she died. At that time, in 1910, it was customary to take children to funerals. So I went to my mother's. I do not think I suffered any emotional scars from the experience.

However, I went to live with my grandmother, alone, and all the relatives kept saying, "Now you take good care of Grandma." That was a heavy burden for me, because people had always said "Take good care of Mama," and Mama had died. So I worried lest Grandma die.

Now, I would advise relatives and friends not to put the burden of responsibility on children in such serious matters, for although lightly meant, it does burden a conscientious child who tends to feel responsibility.

But I would like to speak to another matter — that of viewing the deceased body in a casket, as an adult, not as a child. You said, "Unlike what many morticians suggest, the image seen in an open casket is not...life or death, but a 'fake life' or 'blurred death.'"

Hear another point of view. My husband was an invalid for five years, the last two of which he was completely bedfast. We saw him go down daily — a little thinner, a little less aware of what was going on and not caring, a catheter draining constantly at his bedside. We were thankful that when the end came, it was peaceful.

Our son, my husband's sister, and I, approached the funeral home with a sort of dread when the mortician advised that we could "view the body." But when we saw him, we all exclaimed, "Isn't he handsome!"

Gone was the haggard, pained look; gone was the colorless skin. His hair was still white, but he looked exactly as he had looked 20, maybe 30 years before. We had actually forgotten how he looked when he was well and strong. Now all the good times came back and we almost forgot the painful ones.

THIS LAST LOOK at the man I married — not the pitiful can. It was almost like a resurrection.

I am a Christian, but I don't think my husband is "up there" somewhere in his mortal body. Yet my last look at his body has made me confident that his soul — or whatever remains — has made a good transition to something better than things were on earth.

Of course, the mortician knew my husband well and was prepared to make him look as natural as possible. Maybe that took away the "artificially real" look of a corpse.

Those who refuse to look at the corpse of a loved one because they "want to remember him as he was" are cheating themselves. At any rate, I consider myself fortunate to have seen my husband in "good health" at the end, and I think my feeling was shared by our relatives and friends.

Yours very truly, Mrs. Vivian Smith, Louisiana.

Dear Mrs. Smith:

Thank you for sharing your viewpoint. While I am sure your experience is what all morticians might hope to provide, it is not always accomplished. It may be particularly difficult to achieve when a complete post-mortem examination is performed to determine the medical causes of death. (And I strongly suggest such examinations be done.)

Most people will still want to take that last look in wishing a loved one farewell; but on the whole, it may not be best to expect that look to renew all the good memories.

Dr. Menninger invites your comments and questions. Write to him in care of this newspaper. Because of the volume of mail, he cannot answer each individually but will handle questions of general interest in his column.)

Freedom must be learned

papers and radio belong to the government.

"It takes time to learn freedom. The Soviet newcomers must find out for themselves what freedom is and how to react to it."

She recalled overhearing a conversation on a bus between two women who had just arrived from Russia. One had read an Israeli newspaper columnist who had expressed doubt about Israel's ability to absorb thousands of immigrants.

"One woman said to her companion, 'See, I told you Israel doesn't want us here.'"

"She was sure," Amit said, "that the column reflected our government's policy, instead of the voice of one individual, who had a right to his own view."

Dominitz mentioned other problems in absorbing the Russian Jews.

"They are products of a totally planned society," he said. "For this reason, many of them have little initiative. This has to be developed. For example, a number of them prefer a low-salaried government job here instead of one in private industry that pays much more. In the Soviet Union, a government position means security and a higher status."

"On the other hand, we get immigrant Jews who left Russia to escape a planned life."

"THE JEWS who come here really want to live in Israel," said James Kraus, a former New Yorker who is the agency's press spokesman in Jerusalem.

Most defections, he explained, take place in Vienna, the transfer point for Jewish emigres from Russia.

"Once they get to Vienna," Kraus said, "some of them declare a preference for the United States, West Germany, Italy or some other country. They never intended to settle in Israel in the first place and probably lied to Russian authorities about their intentions."

Why not Israel?

The reasons are varied, according to Agency experts. Some immigrants, they said, simply want the broader opportunities offered in the United States.

Another Agency official said some Russian Jews preferred a non-Jewish country where they could be assimilated.

Still others, according to agency spokespersons, want to avoid Israel's pioneer hardships, the threat of a war and inflationary prices.

None of these reasons were strong enough to keep the Reines family from leaving the relative comfort of Leningrad for Israel and the Mavasseret Zion absorption center.

LEONID REINES, who looks younger than his 42 years, is a metallurgical engineer with a Ph.D. His wife, Elizabeth, is a mechanical engineer, and his mother, Zina, taught English at the university level. The Reines also brought their two daughters, age 16 and 5.

"It is impossible to live in the Soviet Union and be a Jew," Reines said in English. "We were forbidden to study Hebrew or to learn Jewish traditions."

Reines said he was not particularly religious but "I want the right to belong to my people."

The Reines are expected to have little trouble in adjusting to their new homeland. They are learning Hebrew rapidly and Leonid already has been interviewed for jobs in his field.

For many immigrants, however, problems remain even after they leave the absorption centers. Another organization, the Association of Russian Newcomers to Israel, helps them cope with such realities as getting children into schools, retraining for jobs and meeting the daily stresses of life in Israel.

"We try to handle human problems," explained Rachel Sadinsky, an association executive. "For some Soviet immigrants the adjustment is painful. We have from 30 to 50 people a day visit our Tel Aviv and Jerusalem offices seeking advice and help with a number of things."

SADINSKY said her group also tries to give Israelis a better understanding of immigration and what it means to their country.

Some Israelis believe that the immigration tide is putting too much of a strain on Israel's economy. There also is some resentment about the newcomers getting special privileges not given to ordinary citizens.

"Immigrant students are being admitted to our medical schools while some of our young people have to study medicine in Italy," a Tel Aviv jeweler protested.

His complaint was denied by Dominitz, of the Jewish Agency, who said prized places in Israel's medical schools are given on a strictly merit basis.

But he and Sadinsky acknowledged that the newcomers received government subsidized loans, low-cost housing and other benefits during their adjustment period.

Most Israelis, however, look favorably on the immigration movement and are willing to make the necessary sacrifices to meet the needs of the settlers.

Jews from other countries also present problems. After 250 families from India had been moved into Beethsheba in the Negev Desert, health officials discovered numerous cases of under-nourishment, lack of knowledge of child care, backwardness in studies and frequent absence from work.

According to the Jewish Agency, the situation improved considerably following an education problem program.

"After all," said Bela Amit at the Mavasseret Zion absorption center as she watched the kindergarten children singing, "This is our future."

In-Sights Different view of death

Dear Dr. Menninger:

Please permit me to make some comments, drawn from personal experience, on the subject of funerals as discussed in your In-Sights column.

My mother died when I was seven. I was taken in to see her as soon as she died. At that time, in 1910, it was customary to take children to funerals. So I went to my mother's. I do not think I suffered any emotional scars from the experience.

However, I went to live with my grandmother, alone, and all the relatives kept saying, "Now you take good care of Grandma." That was a heavy bedside. We were thankful that when the end came, it was peaceful.

Our son, my husband's sister, and I, approached the funeral home with a sort of dread when the mortician advised that we could "view the body." But when we saw him, we all exclaimed, "Isn't he handsome!"

Gone was the haggard, pained look; gone was the colorless skin. His hair was still white, but he looked exactly as he had looked 20, maybe 30 years before. We had actually forgotten how he looked when he was well and strong. Now all the good times came back and we almost forgot the painful ones.

THIS LAST LOOK at the man I married — not the pitiful invalid — has been more comfort to me than I can express. It was almost like a resurrection.

I am a Christian, but I don't think my husband is "up there" somewhere in his mortal body. Yet my last look at his body has made me confident that his soul — or whatever remains — has made a good transition to something better than things were on earth.

Of course, the mortician knew my husband well and was prepared to make him look as natural as possible. Maybe that took away the "artificially real" look of a corpse.

Those who refuse to look at the corpse of a loved one because they "want to remember him as he was" are cheating themselves. At any rate, I consider myself fortunate to have seen my husband in "good health" at the end, and I think my feeling was shared by our relatives and friends.

Yours very truly, Mrs. Vivian Smith, Louisiana.

Dear Mrs. Smith:

Thank you for sharing your viewpoint. While I am sure your experience is what all morticians might hope to provide, it is not always accomplished. It may be particularly difficult to achieve when a complete post-mortem examination is performed to determine the medical causes of death. (And I strongly support such examinations being done.)

Most people will still want to take that last look in wishing a loved one farewell; but on the whole, it may not be best to expect that look to renew all the good memories.

(Dr. Menninger invites your comments and questions. Write to him in care of this newspaper. Because of the volume of mail, he cannot answer each individually but will handle questions of general interest in his column.)

dr. walt menninger

burden for me, because people had always said "Take good care of Mama," and Mama had died. So I worried lest Grandma die.

Now, I would advise relatives and friends not to put the burden of responsibility on children in such serious matters, for although lightly meant, it does burden a conscientious child who tends to feel responsibility.

But I would like to speak to another matter — that of viewing the deceased body in a casket, as an adult, not as a child. You said, "Unlike what many morticians suggest, the image seen in an open casket is not...life or death, but a 'fake life' or 'blurred death.'"

Hear another point of view. My husband was an invalid for five years, the last two of which he was completely bedfast. We saw him go down daily — a little thinner, a little less aware of what was going on and not caring, a catheter draining constantly at his

Of ceramics, and some extras

Innovative ways with ceramics combined with other materials make for an intriguing exhibition opening Saturday at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. Even the title of the exhibit, 1977 Ceramic Conjunction, tantalizes the mind.

From 500 works submitted from Hawaii to New York, juror David Furman selected works of 71 artists. Furman, nationally recognized west coast artist and assistant professor of ceramics and glass art at Pitzer College in Claremont, considered the inspiration of the artist's vision, development of the idea and the uniqueness of its final manifestation and presentation.

The artists are competing for approximately $2,500 in awards, which will be made in Long Beach. Exhibition sponsors, who may select works for their permanent collections, are the Los Angeles County Department of Parks and Recreation, Associates of Brand Art Center, Los Angeles County Cultural Arts Association and Long Beach Museum of Art.

Lukman Glasgow, visual art specialist and invitational curator, says the Ceramic Conjunction showcases the highest quality of clay art in some of the most contemporary terms. Yet, he says, it also contains the traditional fundamental base of pottery forms. One, he suggests, extends the other.

According to Glasgow, the artists' work also reflects the current trends of artistic investigation and the range is from lidded jars to conceptual myth.

Invitational artists in the exhibit are Gifford Myers, Riverside; Adriane Saxe, Los Angeles; Ken D. Little, Missoula, Mont.; Art Morrison, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Dennis Parks, Tuscarora, Nev.; and John Roloff, Lexington, Ky.

Approximately 100 works will be featured in the exhibit which may be viewed through April 29.

The museum is open Wednesday through Sunday from noon to 5 p.m.

CONTINUING ITS "Meet the Artist" series, Long Beach Art Association will gather Tuesday to watch Mentor Huebner present a drawing demonstration.

Huebner, widely acclaimed set designer for MGM, is doing all the background for the animated film, "Lord of the Rings." He has worked on many major films including "Fiddler on the Roof," "North by Northwest," "Ben Hur," "King Kong" and "Silent Green."

Before going into set designing, Huebner taught painting and drawing for 20 years at Chouinard Art Institute.

The public is invited to the meeting at no admission charge. Parking tickets will be validated for the 7:30 p.m. program in Long Beach Recreation Department building, 155 Queen's Way Landing.

LBAA's selected membership exhibit is on view through April in the Fireside Room of the Recreation Department. Winners selected by Eugene C. Wallin, professor of art at Long Beach State University, are Morgan Johnson, first; Marian Bruce, second, and Malcolm Moreheart, third.

Honorable mention went to Lenore Stribley, Salvador Casso, Louise Anderson, Margaret Laubacher and Dorothy Wack.

Work for the association's all-media membership show will be entered March 28. The exhibit will hang in the association gallery and will be juried by Pat Berger, past president of the National Watercolor Society.

Association viewing hours are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays.

PALETTE TALK — The 77 juried member show of Downey Art League opens today at 2 p.m. in Downey Museum of Art, 10419 S. Rives Ave., and continues through April 3.

Pat Rippeto will be guest demonstrator when Southern California Community Artists meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Cypress Community Center, 5700 Orange Ave. The floral painting she will do as a demonstration of technique will be given as a door award. The public may attend.

Winners of the February SCCA competition were Beryl White, Pat Morgan and Bonnie Powell, regular; Esther Keller, Joy McCammon and Lorraine Brakke, advanced; Barb Pegram, masters, and Zelma Norrington, crafts.

HE DOES the backgrounds, she paints the sprites and elves. Together, Long Beach natives Bill and Lyn Teeple call their combined artistic efforts, "Play of Nature."

Their watercolors will be exhibited in a show, open to the public, Saturday and Sunday at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Seventh Street and Atlantic Avenue, Long Beach. Both hold a degree in art from UC, Berkeley.

During the viewing hours, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday, Renaissance music will be played by lutenist Steve Jacomini.

PROOF THAT art is therapy will be evident Thursday when a collection of oil paintings by elderly residents of Palmcrest House goes on exhibition at the Senior Eye Art Gallery, 3501 Cedar Ave.

Fourteen residents of the health care facility will display their oil paintings along with work by their instructor, Gary Tanner, in the "Art 70-Plus" show, hanging through April 27.

The public is invited to a champagne reception for the artists at 7:30 opening night.

Established in 1974, the Senior Eye Art Gallery is a professional, non-profit, gallery of rotating fine arts exhibitions. Following "Art 70-Plus," the works of sculptress and lithographer Claire Falkenstein will be featured beginning May 4.

Gallery hours are daily from 3 to 5 p.m.

THE NEW and the old meet in downtown Los Angeles. New is the Louis Newman Galleries on Figueroa Street's entrance level to the new Bonaventure Hotel. Old is the fascinating subject matter of Susan Schary's solo exhibition with the lengthy title "Arroyo Seco '77: Susan Schary's Tribute to an Historic Southern California Community."

The Arroyo has been an attractive home site and subject for artists of many disciplines since the 1870's. Important locales treated in Schary's oils include the Hale House in Heritage Square, Lumis House, St. Encino Abbey, Huntington Gardens, Descanso Gardens, Green and Green Gamble House and the Arroyo Seco Stables.

The exhibition will remain at the gallery through April 27. Hours are 10:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily.

IT'S CERAMIC — and a little bit more. Diane Scolaro of Los Angeles calls her work "Monkey Trainer." It is among 100 unusual works in Long Beach Museum of Art exhibition opening Saturday.

Sierra Trio's concert today

The Sierra Trio will present a program of chamber music today at 3 p.m. in Burnett branch library, 560 E. Hill St.

The admission-free program is the sixth in a series arranged by the Long Beach Museum of Art.

Musicians include Greg Moore, piano; Connie Kupka, violin, and Robert Adeock, cello. They will perform the Trio Op. 49 in D Minor by Mendelssohn; Trio Op. 121a, Ten Variations on the song, "Ich binder Schneider Kakadu," by Beethoven, and Trio by Walter Piston.

Moore free lances in the Los Angeles area. Ms. Kupka is a member of the Arriaga Quartet and is active in the commercial recording field. Adeock is a member of Chapman College's chamber players and is also a musician in the motion picture, TV and recording industries.

Lecture on Frick collection

Limited reservations may be available for a lecture by Edgar Munhall today at 6 p.m. in the Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. Munhall, curator of New York's Frick collection, will tell of the history and highlights of the Frick family and their collecting.

Both the privately owned Frick museum and its collection of "old masters" are considered among the world's finest.

The program is sponsored by the Museum Alliance and admission is free. Since seating is limited to 40 persons and remaining reservations should be ascertained by calling the museum.

Poet wins award

Charles Wright, Laguna Beach poet and instructor at the University of California at Irvine, is among 10 persons in the United States awarded $3,000 each by the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters.

The award is given for literary excellence and promise of important work to come.

Dancers on college program

The R'Wanda Lewis Dance Company will perform an Afro-American dance concert Saturday at 8 p.m. at Chapman College, 333 N. Glassell St., Orange.

Formed in 1969, the dance company was the first black dance group to be formed in the Los Angeles area. Lewis is artistic director, doing most of the choreography and playing the lead in performances.

Brief interlude of joy

Charlton Heston and Deborah Kerr share a light moment in Eugene O'Neill's highly autobiographical "Long Day's Journey into Night" at the Music Center's Ahmanson Theater through April 2. The gripping play of a family haunted by tragedy details a single day in 1912 in the summer home of the family patterned after O'Neill's own. Due to its intensely personal nature, O'Neill denied production of the play until after his death. Premiered posthumously in Sweden in 1956, it won the New York Drama Critic's Circle Award, Tony Award and the Pulitzer Prize. Sons in the drama are portrayed by Andrew Prine and Robert Burke.

AMONG THE 18 COMPANIES and 500 performers from many lands participating in the International Folk Dance Festival will be the Tokuyae Hanayagi Kabuki Dancers, one of whom is shown above left, and Lamont Laird, Shawnee hoop and fancy war dance champion who will be featured with the American Horse Company. The festival is scheduled Saturday in the Music Center Pavilion, Los Angeles.

Irish are coming, and that's not all

Sure, and it's the time 'o year for everyone to utter a few faith and begorras, whether or not they are Irish. Persons may need the luck of the Irish to obtain tickets to The Irish Rovers' program Monday at 8:30 p.m. in UCLA's Royce Hall, and Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Chapman College, 333 N. Glassell St. Orange.

The five lads, whose first single, "The Unicorn," became an international hit record, will present their concert collection of bawdy songs, love songs, drinking and funny songs.

Mutual and Wallich-Liberty agencies may be consulted for ticket information for the UCLA appearance and the college information center for the Chapman concert.

At noon on St. Patrick's Day itself — Thursday — the "Black Velvet Band" will be featured in a concert of Irish music at the Triforium, focal point of the mall in downtown Los Angeles' civic center.

The trio specializes in traditional and contemporary music of Ireland and the British Isles.

VOCAL ARTS Ensemble, resident choir for the Long Beach Bach Festival, will leave its heavy classical works at home, and on Saturday take a Musical Showcase for Youth audience on a musical trip to many lands.

"Edelweiss," "The Happy Wanderer," "What Child is This" and "Have Nagella" are just a few of the selections which comprise the 2 p.m. program at Lakewood High School auditorium, Briercrest Avenue and Harvey Way.

A costumed narrator, Pam Marsh, will guide the children on the musical tour.

Groups of 10 or more persons will be admitted for $1 per person. Single tickets will be available at the door for $1.50. Reservations may be made with the Long Beach Symphony Association, sponsor of the youth programs, 121 Linden Ave.

TO CELEBRATE the 30th anniversary of the original International Folk Dance Festival, more than arts

500 colorfully costumed dancers, musicians, acrobats, puppeteers and choraleers will perform Saturday in the Music Center Pavilion, Los Angeles. Narrator will be actress Susan Strasberg.

Among the acts in the 8 p.m. program will be fire and knife jugglers, a hot jazz combo, bagpipe, balalaika and bouzouki players, a gamelan orchestra and title-winning dancers from many countries.

The festival offers the best-loved entertainments from Argentina, Cuba, China, Egypt, Greece, Israel, Japan, Java, the Philippines, Poland, Polynesia, Scotland, the Ukraine and the U.S.A.

Ticket information is available through the Music Center's box office.

Medicine and You

Lemon good salt substitute

Salt substitutes, although low in sodium, have quite a bit of potassium in them, researchers report.

And this can be dangerous. A report in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition tells of a case of excessive potassium in the blood of a patient because of overuse of salt substitutes.

A consultant to the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dean C. Fletcher, Ph. D., of Washington State University, Pullman, tells of an alternative to the salt substitutes.

It's lemon juice. It can provide a zesty taste, he says, "without concern for either sodium or potassium excess."

Pills prohibit sleep

An authority on sleep problems says that one cause of sleeplessness is the use of sleeping pills.

And sleep can be improved merely by withdrawing the pills.

So says Dr. William C. Dement, director of the sleep clinic at Stanford University.

He reports one case — a "champion patient" — who had taken 8,000 milligrams of sleep medication daily for 30 years.

This patient slept four and one-half hours a night but her sleep really resembled a coma, Dr. Dement says. Doctors withdrew her from the drugs over a two-year period. Eventually she had six and one-half hours of normal sleep a night.

The report is in Current Prescribing, a periodical for physicians.

Aids leg ulcers

Benzoyl peroxide lotion has proved to be an effective skin-surface treatment for various types of leg ulcers, a researcher reports.

At Cleveland Clinic in Cleveland, Ohio, medical investigators applied the agent to ben zinsner

24 leg ulcers. Eighteen of the ulcers healed in an average of 33 days.

Dr. Henry H. Roegnik Jr., chairman of dermatology at the clinic, gives details on how to apply the lotion in a report in Dermatology News, a medical newspaper.

Victims ill-prepared

Women who have undergone surgery for breast cancer often feel they were not adequately prepared for their postoperative experiences.

This was reported to the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists by Nancy Woods, R. N., of the Duke University School of Nursing, Durham, N. C.

Only 18 of 49 women surveyed four years after undergoing mastectomy felt that a physician or nurse had done much to prepare them psychologically for the operation, according to a report in Family Practice News, a medical newspaper.

Kidneys damaged

Kidney disease in heroin addicts differs from kidney disease in nonaddicts, a researcher reports.

The damage to the kidneys of addicts is similar to that produced by various chemical toxins (poisons).

Dr. Jacob Churg, chief of renal pathology at Mount Sinai Hospital, New York City, says that kidney disease in addicts has an extremely poor prognosis. For more than half the patients studied, there was complete kidney failure within five years.

Migraine syndrome

Some migraine victims have what is known as the Alice in Wonderland syndrome: They feel as if their head is growing.

In "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland," author Lewis Carroll describes some of the fantastic hallucinations that may affect patients with migraine. One excerpt:

"Holding her hand on the top of her head to feel which way it was growing... she was quite surprised to find that she remained the same size."

School menus

The following menus will be served in Long Beach elementary schools during the week of March 14-18. All lunches include milk.

Workshop

For all "do-it-yourselfers" who love growing things, whether vegetables for the family table or ornamental plants for pleasure, our new Lean-To Greenhouse is a must. Designed to attach to any wood, stucco, stone or brick house, the greenhouse utilizes permanent, shatterproof fiberglass-reinforced plastic (the same type used in commercial greenhouses). However, this plastic paneling is available everywhere (sold by the foot).

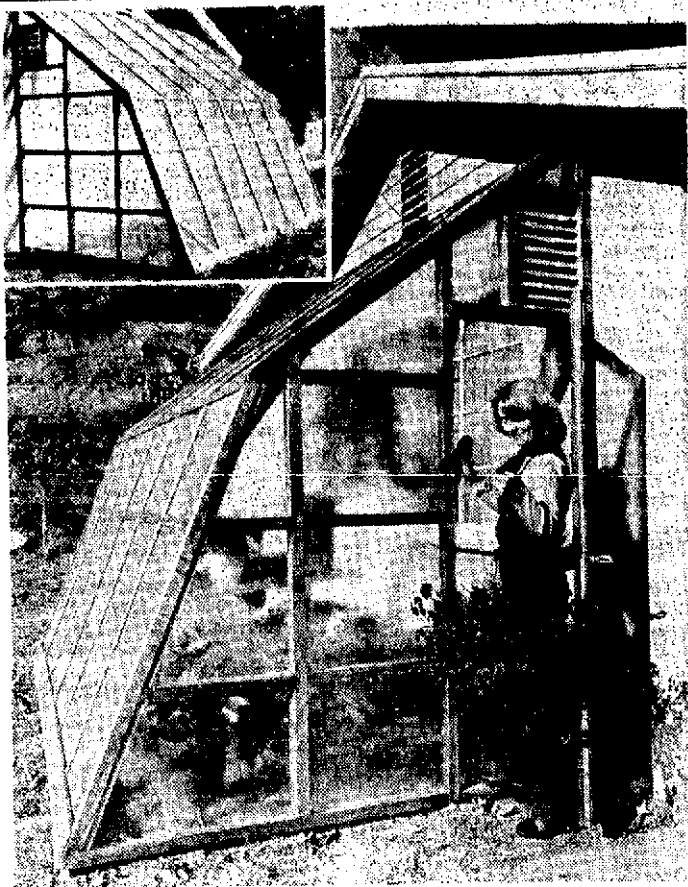

The version pictured here measures 12-feet long by 7-feet wide and 9-feet high. The size may be modified to fit your requirements by increasing or decreasing the structure in 4-foot segments. The framework of the greenhouse is built from standard-sized redwood 2x4's, 2x3's and 1x6's found in most lumber outlets. Our easy-to-follow plan contains dozens of step-by-step photos, drawings and instructions, also a complete materials list and even a selection guide for the correct plastic panel to use in your area.

To obtain the Lean-To Greenhouse Pattern No. 596, send $2.50 by check or money order (includes postage and handling) to Steve Ellingson, Independent, Press-Telegram, Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409.

HANDY TIP! A potting bench with separate compartments for tools and supplies completes your greenhouse. To obtain our easy-to-build Potting Bench No. 425, send $1.50.

At Wit's End

Luster dims for twinkle toes

We all marry for better or for worse. But you don't know how bad it can get until you find out you're stuck with an "I don't dance."

During courtship, the "I don't dancers" mislead you (I don't believe I said that). They're the first ones on the floor, pushing your arm up and down like they're priming a pump, and maneuvering around between couples dipping and swaying.

It wasn't until our wedding reception when the orchestra played the anniversary waltz that I knew I had been conned. The crowd made a circle around my new husband and me to lead the dancing when he turned to me and said, "Please, not tonight. I have a headache."

If his excuses for not dancing were laid end to end, they would encircle Ann Miller's teased hair 30 times. These are some of his better ones:

"It's too crowded. Wait till it thins out."

"No one else is dancing. Wait until there's a crowd."

"Stardust" is too fast. Let's wait until the tempo slows down a bit."

"My varicose veins have been acting up."

"The song is almost finished. Let's wait until next New Year's."

"We just got here an hour ago. Give me a chance to talk."

"Why didn't you mention you wanted to dance before I unbuttoned my jacket?"

THROUGH THE years I have resigned myself to sitting around listening to the music and watching my feet swell under the table. I tell myself he's a good provider, loves children, and is kind to my mother-in-law.

But I couldn't resist mentioning his handicap the other night as we watched a period movie. The hero moved across the floor and chose his dancing partner — a beautiful woman of mystery. Together, they joined a line of about 50 other people and went through a routine of counting steps, swaying, dipping, turning, bowing and skipping that would have baffled the Ohio State marching band.

At the same time, mind you, the hero carried on a conversation that was provocative, suggestive, witty, and political — without missing a beat.

"Would you look at that!" I exclaimed to my husband. "Face it, Bunkie, you would never have hacked the Virginia Reel."

My husband took note of the dancer resplendent in cutaway coat, powdered wig, lace over the hands, satin vest and buckled shoes and observed, "Without his Suppohse, he'd be sitting it out like the rest of us."

Advice to the Taxlorn

Church missionary funds deductible

DEAR MR. SMITH: I have a son serving a full-time mission for our church. He is in El Salvador and has been there for over a year. It costs around $250 a month to keep him in the mission field. Is any of this money a church donation? And if so, is it deductible on my income tax return?

I know of several families who have children serving missions, and they have been paying their money to their bishop, who in turn forwards it to the missionary. They say that by doing this they are paying it to the Missionary Fund and therefore it is tax deductible.

smith

If they can claim a tax deduction by going through their bishop, I feel that I, too, should be able to claim a tax deduction. — I.A.N.

If your payments are authorized and encouraged by your church, and they support a church activity, they are deductible no matter who the payments are made to. The law says your payments must be "to or for the use of" the church or charity. This rule makes it possible to deduct auto mileage at seven cents per mile, and various other out-of-pocket, unreimbursed expenses, if such expenses are incurred in performing free services for the organization.

It would be advisable to retain in your files, in case of audit, all supporting church and other documentation related to this deduction. Your payments must be for the benefit of your U.S.A.-based church, and not for the personal benefit of your son or yourself.

DEAR MR. SMITH: My husband is going to receive $50,000 from his mother's estate. We were told that if he put it in a joint tenancy account it might constitute a gift to me and he would have to pay a gift tax. We owe about $29,500 on our home mortgage, and we hold the property in joint tenancy. If he paid off the mortgage with some of his inheritance would that also be considered a taxable gift? — D.M.D.

If your husband deposits his inheritance in a joint tenancy bank account, or if he uses the money to pay off the mortgage on your residence held in joint tenancy, the precise wording of the title, and what it means in your state, could postpone the taxability of these "gifts." Furthermore, under the new law which became effective in 1977, there is no gift tax due on the first $100,000 of taxable gifts, where the gifts are from husband to wife, or vice versa.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I have one child who resides with her mother, from whom I am divorced. I pay my daughter's air fare once a month when she comes to visit. She is 12 years old. I pay $175 a month in child support. Can I use the $85-per-month air fare costs towards my claim to be the provider of more than one-half of the support of my child? — T.R.G.

You have the right, as a non-custodial parent who has contributed more than $1,200 to his child's support, to claim your daughter as a dependent. But you and your divorced wife each have the right to request an exchange of information as to the child's income, support, etc., while indicating your intention to claim the dependency. If that is done, attach copies of both sets of figures to your return and claim the exemption, if your total payments, gifts, transportation, etc., equal more than 50 of the grand total of all support requirements for the child.

DEAR MR. SMITH: In 1974 I purchased an annuity from my savings and loan association. The income earned is not taxable until I start receiving payments at age 65. I learned that Internal Revenue is now taking another look at these plans. I don't know what to do about it in my 1976 income tax returns. — B.A.S.

Prepare your 1976 returns as before, and consistent with the bank's instructions. It would be premature and inadvisable to report income before something authoritative is available. The final determination may have no effect on your plan at all.

Do you have an income tax problem? Write to "Advice To The Taxlorn," P.O. Box 49081, Tucson, Ariz. 85717, with a self-addressed, stamped, envelope, for information that may help you. Your identity will not be disclosed.

What's in a name? Plenty

By RICHARD FLASTE
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — A couple might have no difficulty at all in deciding to have a child; it's the name that gives them the problem. They'll spend days, weeks, even years mulling over names, accepting then rejecting, sometimes right up until a child is born and after.

So difficult is this decision that children have been born without given names, and it is not unknown for parents to change a child's name a few weeks after the birth, because they are still having trouble with the sound of it.

Names do matter to people. And in recent years psychologists have been stirring up even more interest in them, with research indicating that undesirable names (in minds of classmates or teachers) may be a handicap, while desirable names may be helpful. The names, the psychologists say, are linked to the way children are viewed by others and the way they view themselves.

Dr. John McDavid and his colleagues at Georgia State University first got interested in the subject when they realized that the most popular children in the classrooms they were studying were also the ones with the commonest names.

Not only did having a desirable name such as John, Michael or Sally seem related to how well liked one was, but Dr. McDavid with his co-researcher, Dr. Herbert Harari, later concluded that it was linked to the teacher's grading.

ESSAYS FROM hypothetical children named Elmer or Bertha were graded lower by teachers than the same essays when they bore popular names.

Dr. S. Gray Garwood (the name is Samuel, but he refuses to use it) followed up on the earlier research with a study of how children with desirable and undesirable names perceived themselves.

He used only boys' names because the ones for girls go in and out of fashion too quickly, while the popularity of boys' names remains relatively constant over the years.

The desirable names in this study, conducted in Atlanta, were Craig, Gregory, James, Jeffrey, John, Jonathan, Patrick, Richard and Thomas. The undesirable names were Bernard, Curtis, Daryl, Arnold, Horace, Jerome, Maurice, Roderick, and Samuel.

Dr. Garwood found that the boys with desirable names generally thought of themselves in a more positive way than the others. They had higher aspirations, too.

Taking all this a step further is Dr. Thomas Busse, an educational psychologist at Temple University who had studied more than 2,000 children's names. He has linked the desirability of a child's names to IQ.

THE BOYS who tended to have the highest I.Q. regardless of their parents' level of education, tended to bear names such as David, Michael, Paul, John, Gary, James, Richard, Scott and Steven.

The most desirable girls' name and the girls reputed to be the brightest were Susan, Linda, Barbara, Carol, Cindy and Diane.

All of the researchers warn against getting carried away with the name game. It's important, they say, for parents and teachers to realize that a name brings to a child a set of biases from other people. But a name, which can vary in desirability from one group to another, is just a single factor in how a child is viewed, and it is tightly intertwined with others, such as appearance and economic level.

Workshop

For all "do-it-yourselfers" who love growing things, whether vegetables for the family table or ornamental plants for pleasure, our new Lean-To Greenhouse is a must. Designed to attach to any wood, stucco, stone or brick house, the greenhouse utilizes permanent, shatterproof fiberglass-reinforced plastic (the same type used in commercial greenhouses). However, this plastic paneling is available everywhere (sold by the foot).

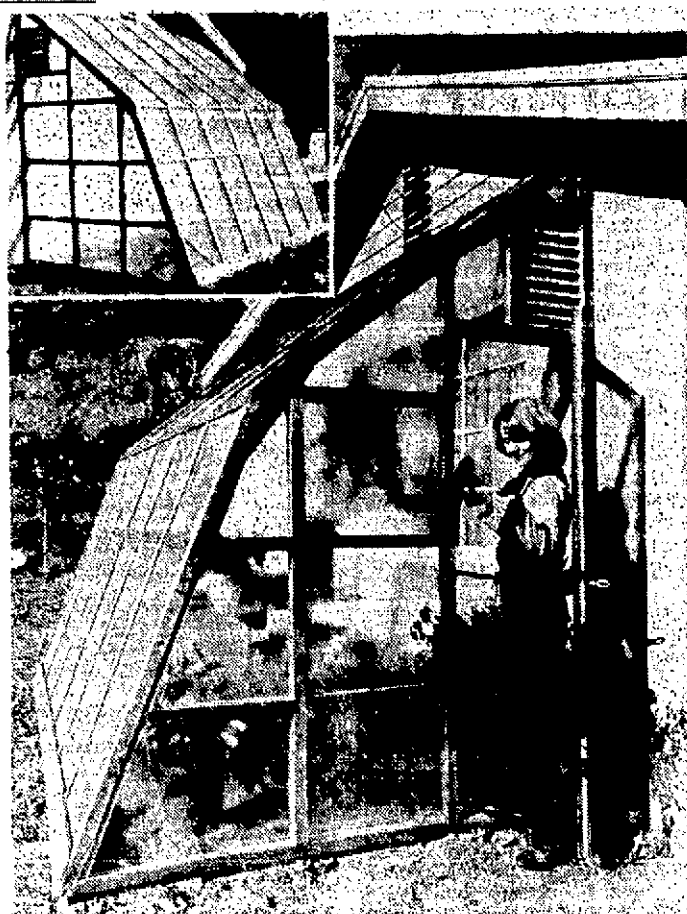

The version pictured here measures 12-feet long by 7-feet wide and 9-feet high. The size may be modified to fit your requirements by increasing or decreasing the structure in 4-foot segments. The framework of the greenhouse is built from standard-sized redwood 2x4's, 2x3's and 1x6's found in most lumber outlets. Our easy-to-follow plan contains dozens of step-by-step photos, drawings and instructions, also a complete materials list and even a selection guide for the correct plastic panel to use in your area.

To obtain the Lean-To Greenhouse Pattern No. 596, send $2.50 by check or money order (includes postage and handling) to Steve Ellingson, Independent, Press-Telegram, Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409.

HANDY TIP! A potting bench with separate compartments for tools and supplies completes your greenhouse. To obtain our easy-to-build Potting Bench No. 425, send $1.50.

Advice to the Taxlorn

Church missionary funds deductible

DEAR MR. SMITH: I have a son serving a full-time mission for our church. He is in El Salvador and has been there for over a year. It costs around $250 a month to keep him in the mission field. Is any of this money a church donation? And if so, is it deductible on my income tax return?

I know of several families who have children serving missions, and they have been paying their money to their bishop, who in turn forwards it to the missionary. They say that by doing this they are paying it to the Missionary Fund and therefore it is tax deductible.

smith

If they can claim a tax deduction by going through their bishop, I feel that I, too, should be able to claim a tax deduction. — I.A.N.

If your payments are authorized and encouraged by your church, and they support a church activity, they are deductible no matter who the payments are made to. The law says your payments must be "to or for the use of" the church or charity. This rule makes it possible to deduct auto mileage at seven cents per mile, and various other out-of-pocket, unreimbursed expenses, if such expenses are incurred in performing free services for the organization.

It would be advisable to retain in your files, in case of audit, all supporting church and other documentation related to this deduction. Your payments must be for the benefit of your U.S.A.-based church, and not for the personal benefit of your son or yourself.

DEAR MR. SMITH: My husband is going to receive $50,000 from his mother's estate. We were told that if he put it in a joint tenancy account it might constitute a gift to me and he would have to pay a gift tax. We owe about $29,500 on our home mortgage, and we hold the property in joint tenancy. If he paid off the mortgage with some of his inheritance would that also be considered a taxable gift? — D.M.D.

If your husband deposits his

DEAR MR. SMITH: I have one child who resides with her mother, from whom I am divorced. I pay my daughter's air fare once a month when she comes to visit. She is 12 years old. I pay $175 a month in child support. Can I use the $85-per-month air fare costs towards my claim to be the provider of more than one-half of the support of my child? — T.R.G.

You have the right, as a non-custodial parent who has contributed more than $1,200 to his child's support, to claim your daughter as a dependent. But you and your divorced wife each have the right to request an exchange of information as to the child's income, support, etc., while indicating your intention to claim the dependency. If that is done, attach copies of both sets of figures to your return and claim the exemption, if your total payments, gifts, transportation, etc., equal more than 50 of the grand total of all support requirements for the child.

DEAR MR. SMITH: In 1974 I purchased an annuity from my savings and loan association. The income earned is not taxable until I start receiving payments at age 65. I learned that Internal Revenue is now taking another look at these plans. I don't know what to do about it in my 1976 income tax returns. — B.A.S.

Prepare your 1976 returns as before, and consistent with the bank's instructions. It would be premature and inadvisable to report income before something authoritative is available. The final determination may have no effect on your plan at all.

Do you have an income tax problem? Write to "Advice To The Taxlorn," P.O. Box 49081, Tucson, Ariz. 85717, with a self-addressed, stamped, envelope, for information that may help you. Your identity will not be disclosed.

At Wit's End Luster dims for twinkle toes

We all marry for better or for worse. But you don't know how bad it can get until you find out you're stuck with an "I don't dance."

During courtship, the "I don't dancers" mislead you (I don't believe I said that). They're the first ones on the floor, pushing your arm up and down like they're priming a pump, and maneuvering around between couples dipping and swaying.

It wasn't until our wedding reception when the orchestra played the anniversary waltz that I knew I had been conned. The crowd made a circle around my new husband and me to lead the dancing when he turned to me and said, "Please, not tonight. I have a headache."

If his excuses for not dancing were laid end to end, they would encircle Ann Miller's teased hair 30 times. These are some of his better ones:

"It's too crowded. Wait till it thins out."

"No one else is dancing. Wait until there's a crowd."

"Stardust" is too fast. Let's wait until the tempo slows down a bit."

"My varicose veins have been acting up."

"The song is almost finished. Let's wait until next New Year's."

"We just got here an hour ago. Give me a chance to talk."

"Why didn't you mention you wanted to dance before I unbuttoned my jacket?"

THROUGH THE years I have resigned myself to sitting around listening to the music and watching my feet swell under the table. I tell myself he's a good provider, loves children, and is kind to my mother-in-law.

But I couldn't resist mentioning his handicap the other night as we watched a period movie. The hero moved across the floor and chose his dancing partner — a beautiful woman of mystery. Together, they joined a line of about 50 other people and went through a routine of counting steps, swaying, dipping, turning, bowing and skipping that would have baffled the Ohio State marching band.

At the same time, mind you, the hero carried on a conversation that was provocative, suggestive, witty, and political — without missing a beat.

"Would you look at that!" I exclaimed to my husband. "Face it, Bunkie, you would never have hacked the Virginia Reel."

My husband took note of the dancer resplendent in cutaway coat, powdered wig, lace over the hands, satin vest and buckled shoes and observed, "Without his Suppohse, he'd be sitting it out like the rest of us."

What's in a name? Plenty

By RICHARD FLASTE
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — A couple might have no difficulty at all in deciding to have a child; it's the name that gives them the problem. They'll spend days, weeks, even years mulling over names, accepting then rejecting, sometimes right up until a child is born and after.

So difficult is this decision that children have been born without given names, and it is not unknown for parents to change a child's name a few weeks after the birth, because they are still having trouble with the sound of it.

Names do matter to people. And in recent years psychologists have been stirring up even more interest in them, with research indicating that undesirable names (in minds of classmates or teachers) may be a handicap, while desirable names may be helpful. Clairol asks, “What’s stopping you from improving the color of your hair?”

How can I ever find the right shade? I'm afraid I'll pick the wrong one.

Clairol® makes it easy. On all our haircoloring products you will find a color chart that tells you exactly what shade your natural hair color will go to. The best advice is to always choose a shade that will complement your own skin tones. Maybe you should start off with one of our many shampoo-in hair-colors, like Nice 'n Easy.® They're so simple to use.

I WOULD LOVE TO COLOR MY HAIR, BUT I'M WORRIED ABOUT HOW IT'LL AFFECT THE CONDITION OF MY HAIR.

All of our haircolorings have built-in conditioners so your hair feels thicker and looks shiny and is easy to manage. It's an extra plus you get when you improve the color of your hair with Clairol. (If you feel your hair is thin, you might like Balsam Color. It has an extra packet of special conditioners. Your hair will feel thicker than ever before.)

I've got a lot of gray and I don't really like my own natural hair color either. I don't know what to use.

What you need is Miss Clairol.® It covers all your gray and gives you a color that's very soft and flattering. (For a younger look choose a shade slightly lighter than your own natural color.)

Isn't haircoloring difficult? My life is busy enough, won't this take up too much of my time?

Most times the process can be done in less than half an hour. If you follow the instructions, you won't find coloring difficult. All our products are designed to be quick, easy and well worth the little time you set aside for them. You'll look and feel so much better about yourself.

I'd like to add excitement to my own hair. But I don't want to change every hair on my head.

Frost & Tip® is just what you want. It's great for frosting, tipping or streaking. And you can apply as much or as little as you want. The look is as individual as you are. Be very bold or very subtle. It's up to you.

Dear Abby

Men have behavior code, too

DEAR READERS: Last week I published my Ten Commandments for Wives. And now...

TEN COMMANDMENTS FOR HUSBANDS

1. Thou shalt put thy wife before thy mother, thy father, thy daughter, and thy son, for she is thy lifelong companion.
2. Abuse not the body either with excessive food, tobacco or drink, that thy days may be many and healthful in the presence of thy loved ones.
3. Permit neither thy business, nor thy hobby, to make of thee a stranger to thy children, for the precious gift a man giveth his family is his time.
4. Forget not the virtue of cleanliness.
5. Make not thy wife a beggar, but share willingly with her thy worldly goods.
6. Forget not to say, "I love you." For even though thy love be constant, thy wife doth yearn to hear the words.
7. Remember that the approval of thy wife is worth more than the admiring glances of a hundred strangers. Cleave unto her and forsake all others.

abigail van buren

8. Keep thy home in good repair, for out of it cometh the joy of thy old age.

9. Forgive with grace, for who among us does not need to be forgiven?

10. Honor the Lord thy God all the days of thy life, and thy children will rise up and call thee blessed.

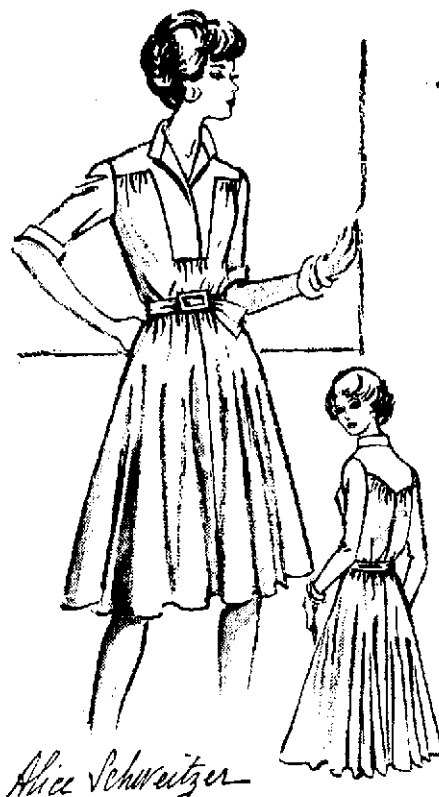

DEAR ABBY: I see where a lot of people have protested the advertising of various "unmentionable" products on TV, but as far as I'm concerned, there are worse things on television to complain about.

I refer to the content of some of the daytime programs. Some of the game shows I used to enjoy have gotten so dirty I have stopped watching them.

Also, whatever happened to that commandment about taking the name of the Lord in vain? I've heard "God," "Lord" and even "Jesus Christ" used that way, and I find it very offensive. (The "hells" and "damns" I've gotten accustomed to long ago, although I still feel it sets a bad example for our young people.)

Now, to whom shall we direct our complaints on the above? — OFFENDED IN CONN.

DEAR OFFENDED: Write your local TV station, and ask them to forward your complaint to the head of the network.

Dear Mr. Corn:
We muffed the chance to win the rubber with a vulnerable grand slam. West opened two clubs and rebid six clubs after East's positive two spades. Should East have gone on?

The hands:
West: A A K Q 7
East: K 10 7 5 3
J 7 4
A K 10 4
A K Q 8 7 1 3 9

Answer: West gets a ticket for speeding. Why rush and use valuable bidding space after a positive response? East might have bid again but that would be a pure gamble.

A better sequence would be:

West: 2A
East: 2A
West: 3A
East: 4A
West: 4NT
East: 3A

Actually seven clubs is not the best grand slam. Seven hearts is, but few would ever reach that spot. The club slam falls about 32 per cent of the time (4-1 and 5-0 club breaks) whereas the heart slam falls about 18 per cent of the time (6-0 or 5-1 heart breaks plus unmanageable club breaks).

Dear Mr. Corn:
Some 20 or 30 years ago I played in a club that used an artificial club opening with graded responses. A one diamond response showed six points or less, one heart showed 7-11 and one spade showed 12 or more points. I told some of my current group about this and they laughed. Can you verify this for me? — Needs Proof, Elbridge, N.Y.

Answer: The system you describe was probably an offshoot of the Vanderbilt club used in the early 30s. In this system, a one club opening showed a strong hand and a one diamond response was negative.

Later, Italian methods used responses to show points and controls (aces and kings). So, although your system was not exactly the same, it was similar in some respects and maybe you should get the last laugh.

Dear Mr. Corn:
Do duplicate players tend to form cliques or special groups which would make newcomers feel uncomfortable? I want to play but I'm afraid to take the big step. — Nervous Nell, Syracuse, N.Y.

Answer: In my opinion, not any more than any other groups. Certainly, the best players tend to group together (you wouldn't want to listen to their analyses anyway). However, there's plenty of fun for all so why not take the plunge?

If you're still undecided, listen to this partnership at the last Nationals reported in the ACBL Bulletin. Lisa Reppert of Canada, 11 years old and 12 master points, played with Ralph Webber of St. Louis — an 88-year-old with 1720 master points! They didn't win but they did have a wonderful time.

Dear Abby

Men have behavior code, too

DEAR READERS: Last week I published my Ten Commandments for Wives. And now...

TEN COMMANDMENTS FOR HUSBANDS

1. Thou shalt put thy wife before thy mother, thy father, thy daughter, and thy son, for she is thy lifelong companion.
2. Abuse not the body either with excessive food, tobacco or drink, that thy days may be many and healthful in the presence of thy loved ones.
3. Permit neither thy business, nor thy hobby, to make of thee a stranger to thy children, for the precious gift a man gives his family is his time.
4. Forget not the virtue of cleanliness.
5. Make not thy wife a beggar, but share willingly with her thy worldly goods.
6. Forget not to say, "I love you." For even though thy love be constant, thy wife doth yearn to hear the words.
7. Remember that the approval of thy wife is worth more than the admiring glances of a hundred strangers. Cleave unto her and forsake all others.

abigail van buren

8. Keep thy home in good repair, for out of its cometh the joy of thy old age.

9. Forgive with grace, for who among us does not need to be forgiven?

10. Honor the Lord thy God all the days of thy life, and thy children will rise up and call thee blessed.

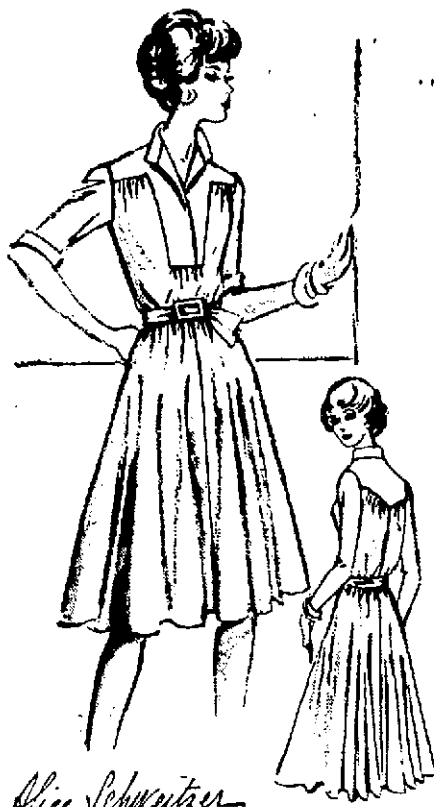

DEAR ABBY: I see where a lot of people have protested the advertising of various "unmentionable" products on TV, but as far as I'm concerned, there are worse things on television to complain about.

I refer to the content of some of the daytime programs. Some of the game shows I used to enjoy have gotten so dirty I have stopped watching them.

Also, whatever happened to that commandment about taking the name of the Lord in vain? I've heard "God," "Lord" and even "Jesus Christ" used that way, and I find it very offensive. (The "bells" and "damns" I've gotten accustomed to long ago, although I still feel it sets a bad example for our young people.)

Now, to whom shall we direct our complaints on the above? — OFFENDED IN CONN.

DEAR OFFENDED: Write your local TV station, and ask them to forward your complaint to the head of the network.

Alice Schweitzer

Designer Pattern

Fluid fabrics in for spring

Swirling softness is the newest look for day or dinner. Thanks to adroit designing by Alice Schweitzer, the effect is simple for you to achieve — elastic at the waist seam captures the fullness of the skirt beneath the more slenderly gathered bodice. In front and back, see how gentle gathers accent the smoothness of the band collar and graceful yoke shaping. Jersey, nylon knits, polyester crepe, sheer wool — any fluid fabric is ideal.

Printed Pattern M199 is available in misses' sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18. Size 12 (bust 34) requires 3 1/2 yards of 60-inch fabric.

Please send $1.50 for Printed Pattern M199 to Independent, Press-Telegram, Pattern Department, P.O. Box 58, Old Chelsea Station, New York, N.Y. 10011. (Add 35 cents for each pattern for first class mail and special handling.) Print plainly YOUR NAME, ADDRESS with ZIP, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Cameo glass designs gain popularity

Q. "We are seeking information on Galle' glass." — Mr. and Mrs. N. H., Galveston, Tex.

A. Emil Galle (1864-1904) was a brilliant glass craftsman noted for his technical advances in the areas of colored, engraved, enameled and cameo glass designs. He was a potent force behind the Art Nouveau movement and acknowledged leader of the Ecole de Nancy, a group of French artists who drew inspiration from Galle's techniques and style of decoration during the 1890s. Glass connoisseurs seek his magnificent cameo glass pieces displaying naturalistic or Oriental themes. The Galle name may be found on his productions. Tip: A star preceded the name from the time of his death through 1914. Value guide: cameo vase, orange florals, 3 inches tall, $185.

Q. "I buy and sell vintage clothing." — Don, Hot Springs, Ark.

A. Friends, please check the closets as you too may discover unexpected dollars in old duds. Value guide: black crepe evening gown, 1920s $30; black seal muff, $12; brown, two-piece dress, lace trim, 1890s, $35; cape, fur-lined, 1890s, $65; hoop skirt, 1890s, $22; Japanese kimono, 1920s, $27; raccoon coat, 1920s, $100; silk hat, folding type, $35.

Q. "I just purchased a small vase marked 'Owens, Utopian'." — Madge, Kutztown, Pa.

A. J. B. Owens operated a pottery at Zanesville, Ohio, from 1891, concentrating on art lines after 1896.

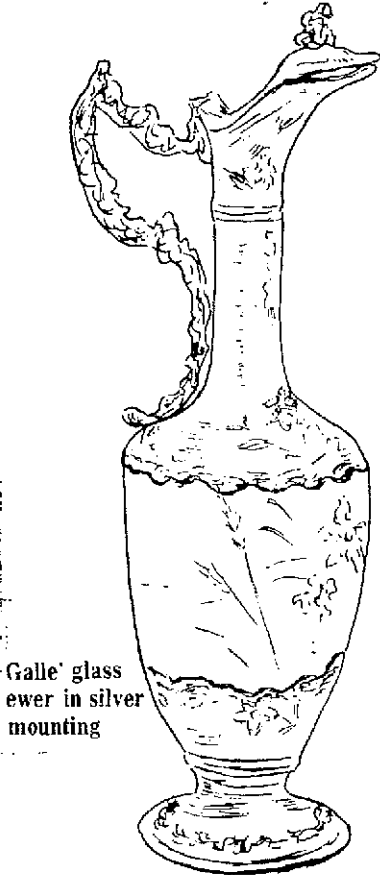

His "Utopian" wares, decorated with flowers, figures, animal and American Indian motifs, brought him into competition with Ohio's other greats, Weiler and Roseville. Many other lines were marketed by Owens, including Lotus, Alpine, Corona Animals and Cyranos. The firm ceased producing art lines in 1907, switching to tiles. Some wares bear the factory name, and/or the name of the line, and occasionally the work was artist signed. Art pottery devotees owe it to themselves to acquire a specimen from the Owens firm. Value guide: vase, daffodils, Utopian, 4 inches tall, $85.

Dear Mr. Corn: We muffed the chance to win the rubber with a vulnerable grand slam. West opened two clubs and rebid six clubs after East's positive two spades. Should East have gone on?

The hands:

West	East
♦ A K Q 7	♦ K 10 7 5 3
♥ A K Q 7	♥ J 7 4
♦ A K Q 7 4 3	♦ A K 10 4
♣ A K Q 7 4 3	♣ 9

Canyon Jumps, Oxford, Conn.

Answer: West gets a ticket for speeding. Why rush and use valuable bidding space after a positive response? East might have bid again but that would be a pure gamble.

A better sequence would be:

West	East
2♦	2♦
3♦	3♦
5♦	5♦

Actually seven clubs is not the best grand slam. Seven hearts is, but few would ever reach that spot. The club slam fails about 32 per cent of the time (4-1 and 5-0 club breaks) whereas the heart slam fails about 18 per cent of the time (4-0 or 5-1 heart breaks plus unmanageable club breaks).

Dear Mr. Corn: Some 20 or 30 years ago I played in a club that used an artificial club opening with graded responses. A one diamond response showed six points or less, one heart showed 7-11 and one spade showed 12 or more points. I told some of my current group about this and they laughed. Can you verify this for me? — Needs Proof, Elbridge, N.Y.

Answer: The system you describe was probably an offshoot of the Vanderbilt club used in the early 30s. In this system, a one club opening showed a strong hand and a one diamond response was negative.

Later, Italian methods used responses to show points and controls (aces and kings). So, although your system was not exactly the same, it was similar in some respects and maybe you should get the last laugh.

Dear Mr. Corn: Do duplicate players tend to form cliques or special groups which would make newcomers feel uncomfortable? I want to play but I'm afraid to take the big step. — Nervous Nell, Syracuse, N.Y.

Answer: In my opinion, not any more than any other groups. Certainly, the best players tend to group together (you wouldn't want to listen to their analyses anyway). However, there's plenty of fun for all so why not take the plunge?

If you're still undecided, listen to this partnership at the last Nationals reported in the ACBL Bulletin. Lisa Reppert of Canada, 11 years old and 12 master points, played with Ralph Webber of St. Louis — an 88-year-old with 1720 master points! They didn't win but they did have a wonderful time.

GENEVA BEANE
New general manager at Manhattan

I HAVE BEEN SCOLDED — politely but firmly — by one of Rod Rodriguez's loyal fans. In many articles about Francois Manhattan, I accidentally omitted Rod's name when mentioning its staff of unusually accomplished waiters and waitresses.

Rod is such a quiet, gracious man that he never protested. But one of his supersatisfied customers — a woman representing Rod's fan club — phoned me twice to correct my oversight. "We are quite disturbed about this," she said. "Rod is a wonderful man as well as a wonderful waiter."

Rod has worked at the Manhattan, 1909 E. Fourth St. near Cherry Avenue, for most of the past 19 years. At times he was absent while performing such duties as manager or maitre d' at other quality dinner houses in this area. Rod, who is of Spanish descent (but in no way looks it), now has a handsome, medium-sized mustache which is pure white.

The new general manager of the Manhattan is Geneva Beane, whose late husband, Jack, was one of the restaurant's co-owners. Geneva is a dedicated person who works long hours day and night to make certain the Manhattan maintains its top reputation for cuisine and service. She is very proud of the accomplishments of the staff headed by executive chef Charles Cutshaw and maitre d' Joe Shavitz.

Few restaurants anywhere have as fine a waiter staff as the Manhattan. Most of the waiters have been there for many years. The staff includes Al Hardy, Roy Gherr, Bob Ortiz, Tom Bass, Harry Blitz and Robert Parker. For an eon, Dora Paul and Ruth Owens were the leaders of the Manhattan's luncheon waitress staff. Dora recently retired after being on the staff 25 years. She was honored with a champagne party by her fellow employees. Now maitre d' Joe holds the record of being the employee who has worked at the Manhattan the longest. He joined the staff two weeks after Dora back in the early 1950s.

Ruth is now the Manhattan's only waitress. Joining her at lunch time are waiters Al and Tom, who also work nights. Closed Mondays, the Manhattan serves its wonderful continental-American luncheons Tuesdays through Fridays. No other restaurant in town has such a luncheon variety as the Manhattan. There are wondrous fruit or seafood salads, glorious omelets, steamed clams bordelaise, cracked chilled crab, baked oysters, fancy sandwiches (including the Monte Cristo) and nearly 20 hot entrees with soup or salad.

At night the choices range from epicurean flaming duckling and glorious chateaubriand to the 28 table d' hote dinners which start at $5. Each of the multiple-course table d' hote dinners is a gem.

PEOPLE OF THE LONG BEACH AREA are crazy about special family dinners. Ever since the Park Pantry restaurants introduced their new family specials last year, the staff has been amazed by the public's reaction.

People of all ages, sizes and backgrounds — ranging from millionaires to pensioners — come in for "the special." The public is more knowledgeable than ever before about restaurant values. Word has really gotten around that the Park Pantries' special dinner is a "best buy." It is served Sundays from noon to 9 p.m. and daily from 4 to 9.

Today is the last day for the current special, German pot roast with sweet-sour sauce made with raisins and carrots. It's $2.79 on a bountiful dinner including a generous bowl of soup or a large salad, potatoes, homemade roll with butter, coffee or tea, and choice of dessert. Among the desserts are fresh, luscious fruit or cream pies from the Park Pantries' own bakeries.

Starting Monday and continuing through next Sunday, the Pantries' $2.79 special will be Swiss steak. The steaks are braised in a cast-iron skillet. Old-fashioned gravy is made from the drippings. Mixed with onions and green peppers, the gravy is poured over the steaks. Then they are carefully baked. The result is a delectable, family-style masterpiece.

The Park Pantry restaurants, founded in Long Beach in 1956, are open from 6:30 a.m. to 11 p.m., serving breakfast, luncheon and dinner. They are at 2104 E. Broadway, 3900 Atlantic, 70 Atlantic, 16602 S. Paramount Blvd., Paramount; 11061 Los Alamitos Blvd., Los Alamitos; 11200 Beach Blvd., Stanton; 1245 Knott Ave., Anaheim; and 17511 S. Susana Road, adjacent to the Artesia Freeway. The same menu is also served at the company's Islander restaurant, 10509 S. Santa Gertrudes, Whittier.

The company's top executives — president Bob Sadler and general manager Ray Mullio — have been working overtime recently getting ready for the opening of their 10th restaurant. It's a Park Pantry on Willow Street at Pacific Avenue. It is scheduled to open this week. With seating for 115, it will have the same menu, prices and hours as the other Park Pantries.

The new restaurant will have a different decor. Included will be a nostalgia theme carried out with photos of Long Beach's early days dating back to 1897. The photos will include an autographed picture of Howard Hughes and another of Long Beach's pioneer airman, Earl Dougherty. In the 1920s, Earl often flew over the site of the new Park Pantry, then an open field. The rickety planes he piloted were based nearby at Chateau-Thierry Flying Field close to Long Beach Boulevard.

GENEVA BEANE
New general manager at Manhattan

I HAVE BEEN SCOLDED — politely but firmly — by one of Rod Rodriguez's loyal fans. In many articles about Francois Manhattan, I accidentally omitted Rod's name when mentioning its staff of unusually accomplished waiters and waitresses.

Rod is such a quiet, gracious man that he never protested. But one of his supersatisfied customers — a woman representing Rod's fan club — phoned me twice to correct my oversight. "We are quite disturbed about this," she said. "Rod is a wonderful man as well as a wonderful waiter."

Rod has worked at the Manhattan, 1909 E. Fourth St. near Cherry Avenue, for most of the past 19 years. At times he was absent while performing such duties as manager or maitre d' at other quality dinner houses in this area. Rod, who is of Spanish descent (but in no way looks it), now has a handsome, medium-sized mustache which is pure white.

The new general manager of the Manhattan is Geneva Beane, whose late husband, Jack, was one of the restaurant's co-owners. Geneva is a dedicated person who works long hours day and night to make certain the Manhattan maintains its top reputation for cuisine and service. She is very proud of the accomplishments of the staff headed by executive chef Charles Cutshaw and maitre d' Joe Shaevitz.

Few restaurants anywhere have as fine a waiter staff as the Manhattan. Most of the waiters have been there for many years. The staff includes Al Hardy, Roy Ghore, Bob Ortiz, Tom Bass, Harry Blitz and Robert Parker. For an eon, Dora Paul and Ruth Owens were the leaders of the Manhattan's luncheon waitress staff. Dora recently retired after being on the staff 25 years. She was honored with a champagne party by her fellow employees. Now maitre d' Joe holds the record of being the employee who has worked at the Manhattan the longest. He joined the staff two weeks after Dora back in the early 1950s.

Ruth is now the Manhattan's only waitress. Joining her at lunch time are waiters Al and Tom, who also work nights. Closed Mondays, the Manhattan serves its wonderful continental-American luncheons Tuesdays through Fridays. No other restaurant in town has such a luncheon variety as the Manhattan. There are wondrous fruit or seafood salads, glorious omelets, steamed clams bordelaise, cracked chilled crab, baked oysters, fancy sandwiches (including the Monte Cristo) and nearly 20 hot entrees with soup or salad.

At night the choices range from epicurean flaming duckling and glorious chateaubriand to the 28 table d' hote dinners which start at $5. Each of the multiple-course table d' hote dinners is a gem.

PEOPLE OF THE LONG BEACH AREA are crazy about special family dinners. Ever since the Park Pantry restaurants introduced their new family specials last year, the staff has been amazed by the public's reaction.

People of all ages, sizes and backgrounds — ranging from millionaires to pensioners — come in for "the special." The public is more knowledgeable than ever before about restaurant values. Word has really gotten around that the Park Pantries' special dinner is a "best buy." It is served Sundays from noon to 9 p.m. and daily from 4 to 9.

Today is the last day for the current special. German pot roast with sweet-sour sauce made with raisins and carrots. It's $2.79 on a bountiful dinner including a generous bowl of soup or a large salad, potatoes, homemade roll with butter, coffee or tea, and choice of dessert. Among the desserts are fresh, luscious fruit or cream pies from the Park Pantries' own bakeries.

Starting Monday and continuing through next Sunday, the Pantries' $2.79 special will be Swiss steak. The steaks are braised in a cast-iron skillet. Old-fashioned gravy is made from the drippings. Mixed with onions and green peppers, the gravy is poured over the steaks. Then they are carefully baked. The result is a delectable, family-style masterpiece.

The Park Pantry restaurants, founded in Long Beach in 1956, are open from 6:30 a.m. to 11 p.m., serving breakfast, luncheon and dinner. They are at 2104 E. Broadway, 3900 Atlantic, 70 Atlantic, 16602 S. Paramount Blvd., Paramount; 11061 Los Alamitos Blvd., Los Alamitos; 11200 Beach Blvd., Stanton; 1245 Knott Ave., Anaheim, and 17511 S. Susana Road, adjacent to the Artesia Freeway. The same menu is also served at the company's Islander restaurant, 10509 S. Santa Gertrudes, Whittier.

The company's top executives — president Bob Sadler and general manager Ray Mullio — have been working overtime recently getting ready for the opening of their 10th restaurant. It's a Park Pantry on Willow Street at Pacific Avenue. It is scheduled to open this week. With seating for 113, it will have the same menu, prices and hours as the other Park Pantries.

The new restaurant will have a different decor. Included will be a nostalgia theme carried out with photos of Long Beach's early days dating back to 1897. The photos will include an autographed picture of Howard Hughes and another of Long Beach's pioneer airman, Earl Daugherty. In the 1920s, Earl often flew over the site of the new Park Pantry, then an open field. The rickety planes he piloted were based nearby at Chateau-Thierry Flying Field close to Long Beach Boulevard.

Triangle fare equal to sum of two sides

Honolulu

A rummy maitai while watching the sun go down on the warm Pacific. The Honolulu travel agent said, "The Civil Aviation Board sets air fares and routes. Supposedly for the good of the public and the industry."

"But what happens is the actual NEED, the real DEMAND, creates the result."

"The guaranteed-pay-in-advance charters will be all over the rob the vault at Brink's, you could certainly confuse the FBI and spend very little on air fare."

"We've been told of so many low-cost air fares we hardly know where to start..."

The idea behind these special fares is to FILL THAT AIR-PLANE! You pay a month or so in advance. (That much advance money also brings the price down.)

There are so many of these multi-initial flights, I'd go through like ours. Cleopatras in Egypt. Seven Stars in Japan.

American cigarettes are sold duty-free on airplanes. Also in airports on departure. So if you keep moving, you'll keep supplied.

"You've mentioned before that the English serve breakfast toast cold. We were given hot, BUTTERED toast every day at the Dorchester."

Maybe you're The Last of the Big-Time Tipsters. I've been assured by Englishmen: "We PREFER our toast cold." (They said it in a voice chill enough to match the toast. (Show these ruddy Yanks a thing or two!"))

Peace offering: At this time of year, England serves delicious Colchester oysters. They do NOT run them by dipping them in a red ketchup. They serve them with stan delaplane

Pacific by next year. The differences in prices per miles flown now is ridiculous.

"You can fill a plane from the West Coast to Honolulu. So if you only HALF fill it Honolulu to Tahiti — same distance — you must double the price."

Triangle fares are becoming a big seller. The Honolulu agent mapped it on a cocktail napkin:

"I book you from San Francisco or Los Angeles to Honolulu. Round-trip. Say $300. For $10 more you can go by way of Alaska with a stopover in Anchorage. That's Western Airlines."

"NOW WESTERN has a new route: Los Angeles-Miami. You fly to Miami on a round trip ticket and you can fly back to the Coast through Mexico at no extra charge. With stopovers in Cancun, Merida and Mexico City."

He said: "It may not be the ONLY way to fly. But if you ever a travel agent. Not because the airline reservation girl doesn't know. But the travel agent knows the top-of-the line girl. The sharpest girl in the shop.

He calls her, makes the booking, verifies his figures. (And we hope sends her a Christmas present during the jolly season.)

"How many cigarettes can we take into Europe?"

Different rules. Most countries limit it to one carton. However, they rarely push it. "Are you bringing in any cigarettes?" "Just enough for the week I'm here. Inspector."

In French airports, there are two exits. Green sign: "Nothing to Declare." Red sign: "Something to Declare." Walk out the "Nothing" gate. Try to look nonchalant.

Local cigarettes aren't as bad as you may imagine. Try some. Carroll's No. 1 in Ireland. Sintras and Estorils in Portugal are much

My favorite is tarragon vinegar. Many English like the heartier malt vinegar which is the ONLY vinegar to use on fish-and-chips. Served out of a paper cone made of a roll of London Times. The ink has a better flavor.

Take time for Switzerland

By HERB SHANNON
I.P.T. Travel Editor

ZURICH, Switzerland — The famed gnomes who conduct the banking affairs of this world financial center have no reason to miss a business appointment. There is nothing gnomish about the clock face in the tower overlooking the narrow, twisting streets around St. Peter's Square in the heart of the old city. It is the largest in Europe and right on time, according to my new quartz-controlled watch, guaranteed to be accurate within one minute a year.

Timekeeping aids also are everywhere in the streets of modern Zurich. One digital display in the marble entry to the headquarters of a leading Swiss watch firm extends the readout of seconds to the fourth decimal. It is also exactly on time, as far as I can read the fast-tumbling electronic numbers to the right.

Everything in Switzerland's largest city seems to be controlled by some central computer pulse. Trains, trams and traffic flow smoothly and according to schedule. Double-header streetcars operate without conductors, depending on the honor of passengers to obtain tickets from coin machines at every station.

ONE EXCEPTION to the on-time rule is the international airport on the outskirts of the city. Neither Swiss ingenuity nor the expert pilots of Trans World Airlines jetliners serving Zurich daily from Los Angeles can overcome the morning fogs which plague the airport area at some times of the year.

There is also another escape from computerized clockwork regimentation in a pinnacled palace perched high on a hillside overlooking Zurich and the lake which generates the airport fogs. The Dolder Grand Hotel, built in 1899 as a summer resort aloof from the bustling city, preserves its turn-of-the-century calm in magnificent paneled drawing rooms and the tall ceilings of its sleeping chambers.

Newer additions to the original structure now provide facilities for civic events and international conferences. A huge ballroom is equipped with six concealed balcony booths for simultaneous translation in as many languages for events on the floor. This miniature United Nations setup was utilized by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger last fall for diplomatic meetings with Prime Minister Vorster of South Africa.

A funicular tram line to Zurich terminates in the midst of the Dolder Grand's recreational grounds, departing every 10 minutes for the six-minute, 30 cent ride into the city. The hotel now has 200 graciously appointed rooms with rates commensurate with the standard of service. A double room is $100.

AT THE opposite extreme in acceptable Zurich accommodations is the budget-priced Pension Tschannen, whose unique variant of an ancient Celtic name is on the third floor of an office building striding an archway over the Walchstrasse, two minutes from the central railroad station. The Tschannen offers ten neat rooms in the center of the city at a tenth of the cost of the Dolder Grand, including breakfast.

city an excellent base for touring the continent.

The Swiss National Tourist Office in cooperation with private agencies is promoting a new low-cost "Outour" plan for renting Alpine apartment headquarters for leisurely European excursions.

One of the recommended rental organizations is Idyll, Ltd., P.O. Box 405, Media, Pennsylvania. Idyll will find a Swiss apartment or chalet meeting the specified requirements and also make all the necessary reservations for excursions out of the country.

No short cut to Cuba

WASHINGTON — It's going to be a little easier for Americans to travel to Cuba, North Viet Nam, North Korea, and Cambodia, but not much.

President Carter has made it possible, effective Wednesday, for United States citizens to use their passports to travel to these countries. But it doesn't change a basic fact of life. You still must apply for formal permission and obtain a visa to enter these countries.

After you get a visa, you must find a way there. Cuba is relatively easy. You can go to Canada, Mexico City, or Kingston, Jamaica, then board a flight for Havana.

It's much more difficult for the other three. First, you must obtain a visa with a country which has diplomatic relations with North Korea, Cambodia, or Viet Nam — and they have been stingy granting them. Then you must find a flight there.

Viet Nam is the easiest of the three. The State Department says Air France flies out of Paris to Viet Nam. But getting into the other two requires much more patience.

TRAVEL agents list two ways to get into North Korea. First, get a flight to Moscow, then you can go to North Korea via Aeroflot, the Russian air line. Second, if you can get into Peking, CAAC, the Chinese airline, has flights into North Korea "on certain days of the year."

As for Cambodia, even the State Department can't figure out a way for an American to fly there. "I don't know of any way you can get in there" except to walk across the border, a spokesman said.

As for Cuba, you can apply for a visa at the Czechoslovakian embassy in Washington, or at Cuban embassies in Mexico or Kingston. A number of Americans have traveled to Cuba in recent months as the Havana regime has relaxed its travel restrictions.

Within a few weeks, the State Department will issue travel advisories which will give U.S. travelers details on how best to obtain visas and airline flights.

THE ADVISORIES also will contain a warning that the U.S. does not have diplomatic relations with these countries, so "there is no way to offer the usual protective kind of service," a spokesman said.

"In Cuba, we do have the Swiss embassy in Havana which looks after our interests, but only indirectly," he added.

The U.S. passport restrictions effectively barred Americans from traveling to Cuba until the Supreme Court ruled the government could not restrict U.S. citizens' right to travel. Carter's order is thus more of a diplomatic gesture. But it could open the way to easier travel in the future.

New Paris flight

National Airlines will offer travelers to the European continent a southern U.S. gateway when it inaugurates non-stop McDonnell Douglas DC10 service between Miami and Paris on June 22.

The new route was authorized by the Civil Aviation Board last week, extending through the summer season until Sept. 22. National, which provides daily nonstop and direct service to Miami from Los Angeles, has been flying the Atlantic to London for several years.

L. B. (Bud) Maytag, board chairman and chief executive officer of the airline, said the London service will continue as scheduled, allowing travelers to fly directly to England or France without funneling through an intermediate airport.

Maytag pointed out that Paris is the second most popular destination point in Europe from all traffic generated over National's southern tier routes extending to California. Until now, he said, most of this traffic has not had a choice of U.S. carriers.

The new flight, National 4, will leave Miami at 6:05 p.m. Florida time four times a week and arrive at Charles De Gaulle Airport in Paris at 8:17 a.m. local time the next day.

It will return as National Flight 3, leaving

Paris at 12:50 p.m. and arriving in Miami at 3:52 p.m. the same day.

Miami departure days will be Sunday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, with Paris returns on Monday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Reservations for the new flights are now being taken by the airline and accredited agents.

The Tschannen offers ten neat rooms in the center of the city at a tenth of the cost of the Dolder Grand, including breakfast.

Aside from natural beauty, one of Switzerland's recognized assets for American tourists is its central location in Europe. Efficient transportation facilities make any Swiss city an excellent base for touring the continent.

The Swiss National Tourist Office in cooperation with private agencies is promoting a new low-cost "Untour" plan for renting Alpine apartment headquarters for leisurely European excursions.

One of the recommended rental organizations is Idyll, Ltd., P.O. Box 405, Media, Pennsylvania. Idyll will find a Swiss apartment or chalet meeting the specified requirements and also make all the necessary reservations for excursions out of the country.

No short cut to Cuba

WASHINGTON — It's going to be a little easier for Americans to travel to Cuba, North Viet Nam, North Korea, and Cambodia, but not much.

President Carter has made it possible, effective Wednesday, for United States citizens to use their passports to travel to these countries. But it doesn't change a basic fact of life. You still must apply for formal permission and obtain a visa to enter these countries.

After you get a visa, you must find a way there. Cuba is relatively easy. You can go to Canada, Mexico City, or Kingston, Jamaica, then board a flight for Havana.

It's much more difficult for the other three. First, you must obtain a visa with a country which has diplomatic relations with North Korea, Cambodia, or Viet Nam — and they have been stingy granting them. Then you must find a flight there.

Viet Nam is the easiest of the three. The State Department says Air France flies out of Paris to Viet Nam. But getting into the other two requires much more patience.

TRAVEL agents list two ways to get into North Korea. First, get a flight to Moscow, then you can go to North Korea via Aeroflot, the Russian air line. Second, if you can get into Peking, CAAC, the Chinese airline, has flights into North Korea "on certain days of the year."

As for Cambodia, even the State Department can't figure out a way for an American to fly there. "I don't know of any way you can get in there" except to walk across the border, a spokesman said.

As for Cuba, you can apply for a visa at the Czechoslovakian embassy in Washington, or at Cuban embassies in Mexico or Kingston. A number of Americans have traveled to Cuba in recent months as the Havana regime has relaxed its travel restrictions.

Within a few weeks, the State Department will issue travel advisories which will give U.S. travelers details on how best to obtain visas and airline flights.

THE ADVISORIES also will contain a warning that the U.S. does not have diplomatic relations with these countries, so "there is no way to offer the usual protective kind of service," a spokesman said. "In Cuba, we do have the Swiss embassy in Havana which looks after our interests, but only indirectly," he added.

The U.S. passport restrictions effectively barred Americans from traveling to Cuba until the Supreme Court ruled the government could not restrict U.S. citizens' right to travel. Carter's order is thus more of a diplomatic gesture. But it could open the way to easier travel in the future.

New Paris flight

National Airlines will offer travelers to the European continent a southern U.S. gateway when it inaugurates non-stop McDonnell Douglas DC10 service between Miami and Paris on June 22.

The new route was authorized by the Civil Aviation Board last week, extending through the summer season until Sept. 22. National, which provides daily nonstop and direct service to Miami from Los Angeles, has been flying the Atlantic to London for several years. L. B. (Bud) Maytag, board chairman and chief executive officer of the airline, said the London service will continue as scheduled, allowing travelers to fly directly to England or France without funneling through an intermediate airport.

Maytag pointed out that Paris is the second most popular destination point in Europe from all traffic generated over National's southern tier routes extending to California. Until now, he said, most of this traffic has not had a choice of U.S. carriers.

The new flight, National 4, will leave Miami at 6:05 p.m. Florida time four times a week and arrive at Charles De Gaulle Airport in Paris at 8:17 a.m. local time the next day.

It will return as National Flight 3, leaving

Paris at 12:50 p.m. and arriving in Miami at 3:52 p.m. the same day.

Miami departure days will be Sunday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, with Paris returns on Monday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Reservations for the new flights are now being taken by the airline and accredited agents.

Hula hands tell the story of Hawaiian culture

GAL-IVANTING

HAWAII — One of the charms of the Pacific Island state is the native culture. In spite of highrises and skies laced with jet contrails, any visitor agile enough to bend knees and revolve hips is convinced that enough of the old culture remains to make these islands "no place like home."

Each time you awaken to the scent of last night's pikake lei hanging from your bedpost, you are indulging in a bit of native culture. When you let-it-all-hang-choral

out under a muu muu with a rum-filled coconut shell in your hand, you are experiencing a bit of acculturation, anthropological lingo for cultural intermingling.

Culture, in an anthropological sense, is defined as a form of behavior passed on from generation to generation. The reason that islanders are more successful at maintaining cultural traditions than some mainland peoples is due to the very nature of culture itself. Traditions often arise because of necessity.

WITH THEIR nearest neighbors separated by vast bodies of water, the Hawaiians naturally developed water craft and advanced navigational skills. Hence the outrigger canoe that you still can hitch a ride in from Waikiki Beach near the Royal Hawaiian hotel.

Hotels, churches and service organizations often sponsor public luaus, another remnant of Hawaiian culture. This gastronomical event features an eviscerated wild pig seasoned with ginger leaves, stuffed with hot stones, wrapped in wet banana leaves, covered over with burlap and buried over coals under a mound of sand on the beach. It takes most of the day to roast.

When festivities begin, torches are lighted and the succulent pig is stripped of its coverings. Using arrow-shaped taro leaves for plates and fingers for utensils, guests then help themselves to a lavish array of roast pork accompanied with fish baked in seaweed, poi and tropical fruits.

THE EATING of poi, a pasty substance made from fermented taro root, is traditionally negotiated by swirling it around the index and middle finger in a circular motion, then slurping it through the lips with polite sounds of satisfaction.

As important to the luau as food is the dance. In the old days, all lovely hula hands belonged to men. The dance then was a male religious rite of postures and rhythms, with training begun in the temples at the age of three or four. When men became too occupied with warfare, women were trained to carry on the tradition.

Today it is often said that every Hawaiian is born with a talent for dancing and singing. This is not exactly true.

What is true is that Island people have only themselves to depend upon for entertainment. Thus, each child is thrust before the visiting public by doting parents from the time it first balances on two legs. Perhaps the best way to survive this ennui is by considering that child performers might be the most effective defense against the current "acculturation" of Hawaiian Rock.

WHILE THE Islands are rampant with primitive archaeological ruins, we are concerned here only with cultural aspects experienced by visitors today. Human sacrifice, powerful native monarchs and tabus are gone. Hawaii's beautiful language of love, however, remains.

Aloha today has been adopted by people throughout the world. It is used to express many things — hello, goodbye, I love you. When accompanied by a lei of flowers, it has a special significance. With the lei, comes a kiss.

So no matter how many calamities befall beautiful Hawaii — wars, crowds, commercialism — when the red-swathed sun bathes skinny palms in a ruddy glow and the eerie whine of conch shells greets the night, Hawaii's culture of love and friendship lingers on.

OUTRIGGER canoes are still useful relics of Hawaii's Polynesian past.

Roundup in the sky on hot air power

By Jay Clarke
Knight News Wire

Link Z. Baum is a Colorado rancher, but he has a "herd" like no other. The creatures he tends each day are not cattle or sheep, but balloons, the kind you ride in. Baum owns and operates the only balloon ranch in the country.

Appropriately, it's called The Balloon Ranch, and it caters to people who've always wanted to go up in a balloon and never had the nerve before. Baum opened it last August in the San Luis Valley near Del Norte.

"There has never been a place before where people could get a taste of ballooning," Baum said. "Here they can get as little involved or as much involved as they want."

Surprisingly, Baum says, most of the people who come to his balloon ranch have never been in a balloon before, and most are from out of state. "They're mostly professional people looking for adventure, people who spend all day in offices. When they go on vacation, they don't want a static vacation. They want something that's going to charge their batteries for a while."

NOR ARE the balloonists extraordinarily young. Most of his clientele are between the ages of 35 and 55.

Ballooning isn't the only diversion at Baum's ranch, however. A typical day starts very early, with guests taking a continental breakfast and then helping to inflate the hot-air balloons. "The guests are actually our students," Baum said. "They actually fly the balloons along with our instructor." After an early morning flight, a chase truck brings the guests back for a bigger breakfast and other activities, or more ballooning.

Baum offers fishing, rafting, hiking, horse and trail bike riding in summer and cross-country and alpine skiing, skating, snowmobiling and curling in winter. Ballooning, of course, is available in either season, though Baum admits it's harder to introduce people to winter ballooning, even though the colder air makes for better flying winds and more stability.

AT THE ranch, he has four balloons, two full-time instructors and one who works part time. The ranch accommodates 24 persons and also operates a restaurant.

Ballooning is not a cheap sport. While lodging (all meals included) for two nights runs a reasonable $70 per person, balloon rides cost $35 per person with a minimum of two persons on a flight. Private lessons are $190 per hour and the complete certification course (10 hours of flight instruction) costs $800.

Baum's Balloon Ranch operates nine months of the year, closing from Feb. 15 to May 15, when melting snows produce strong winds which make ballooning impossible.

Not all the pyramids are along the Nile.

Our apologies to the Pharaohs of Egypt. But the ancient Mayan civilization built literally hundreds of pyramids 2000 years ago in northern Guatemala.

Now we don't expect this to deter you from visiting the "real" pyramids.

But if Guatemala's spring climate doesn't send you, or you don't find her Indian markets, like Chichicastenango, intriguing, or if you can call your life complete without seeing volcano-ringed Lake Atitlan, maybe Guatemala's pyramids alone are enough to attract you.

And if the Mayan pyramids, or the modern hotels, or the thousands of quiet lakes aren't enough, we've got one last good reason for you to visit Guatemala.

8 DAYS IN GUATEMALA, $619.

This vacation includes a 3-day tour to Chichicastenango (to coincide with Mayan market day), Lake Atitlan (with boat ride), and the city of Antigua with a professional tour escort. Plus sightseeing tours of the Mayan ruins in Tikal and Guatemala City.

Besides, of course, round trip GIT economy air fare on a Pan Am 747. First class hotel accommodations for a total of 7 nights (in Guatemala City, Flores, Chichicastenango, and Antigua) with private bath or shower. Hotel service charges and taxes. Transfers between hotels and airport. Tips to porters and round trip air transportation from Guatemala City to Tikal and from Flores back to Guatemala City. Plus a Pan Am's World Representative and Bonus Features.

As well as all meals during the 3-day tour outside of Guatemala City.

Ask your travel agent for Pan Am's The Complete Guatemala tour. PAH 082.

Because if you just ask for the pyramids, you might get sent to the wrong ones.

PAN AM
America's airline to the world.

Guatemala 8 day tour is based on round trip GIT economy air fare for groups of 10 or more leaving on selected departure dates. We help you join a group. If a group is not formed we try to arrange an alternate date. Tickets must be purchased at least 15 days in advance. U.S. and Guatemala airport departure taxes are included. Hotels are based on double occupancy.

If you've been looking for the perfect chance to take off for Mexico, this is it. Because we just came up with the best tours going. Including a top-notch hotel, round-trip airfare, discounts on fishing and restaurants and lots of extras. All at the best prices going. And when you compare these tours to all the charter flights to Mexico and Hawaii, they look even better. Because unlike the charters, there's no down payment with us. Link Z. Baum is a Colorado rancher, but he has a "herd" like no other. The creatures he tends each day are not cattle or sheep, but balloons, the kind you ride in. Baum owns and operates the only balloon ranch in the country.

Appropriately, it's called The Balloon Ranch, and it caters to people who've always wanted to go up in a balloon and never had the nerve before. Baum opened it last August in the San Luis Valley near Del Norte.

"There has never been

Surprisingly, Baum says, most of the people who come to his balloon ranch have never been in a balloon before, and most are from out of state. "They're mostly professional people looking for adventure, people who spend all day in offices. When they go on vacation, they don't want a static vacation. They want something that's going to charge their batteries for a while."

NOR ARE the balloonists extraordinarily young. Most of his clientele are between the ages of 35 and 55.

Ballooning isn't the only diversion at Baum's ranch, however. A typical day starts very early, with guests taking a continental breakfast and then helping to inflate the hot-air balloons. "The guests are actually our students," Baum said. "They actually fly the balloons along with our instructor." After an early morning flight, a chase truck brings the guests back for a bigger breakfast and other activities, or more ballooning.

Baum offers fishing, rafting, hiking, horse and trail bike riding in summer and cross-country and alpine skiing, skating, snowmobiling and curling in winter. Ballooning, of course, is available in either season, though Baum admits it's harder to introduce people to winter ballooning, even though the colder air makes for better flying winds and more stability.

AT THE ranch, he has four balloons, two full-time instructors and one who works part time. The ranch accommodates 24 persons and also operates a restaurant.

Ballooning is not a cheap sport. While lodging (all meals included) for two nights runs a reasonable $70 per person, balloon rides cost $35 per person with a minimum of two persons on a flight. Private lessons are $190 per hour and the complete certification course (10 hours of flight instruction) costs $800.

Baum's Balloon Ranch operates nine months of the year, closing from Feb. 15 to May 15, when melting snows produce strong winds which make ballooning impossible.

Not all the pyramids are along the Nile.

Our apologies to the Pharaohs of Egypt. But the ancient Mayan civilization built literally hundreds of pyramids 2000 years ago in northern Guatemala.

Now we don't expect this to deter you from visiting the "real" pyramids.

But if Guatemala's spring climate doesn't send you, or you don't find her Indian markets, like Chichicastenango, intriguing, or if you can call your life complete without seeing volcano-ringed Lake Atitlan, maybe Guatemala's pyramids alone are enough to attract you.

And if the Mayan pyramids, or the modern hotels, or the thousands of quiet lakes aren't enough, we've got one last good reason for you to visit Guatemala.

8 DAYS IN GUATEMALA, $619.

This vacation includes a 3-day tour to Chichicastenango (to coincide with Mayan market day), Lake Atitlan (with boat ride), and the city of Antigua with a professional tour escort. Plus sightseeing tours of the Mayan ruins in Tikal and Guatemala City.

Besides, of course, round trip GIT economy air fare on a Pan Am 747. First class hotel accommodations for a total of 7 nights (in Guatemala City, Flores, Chichicastenango, and Antigua) with private bath or shower. Hotel service charges and taxes. Transfers between hotels and airport. Tips to porters and round trip air transportation from Guatemala City to Tikal and from Flores back to Guatemala City. Plus a Pan Am's World Representative and Bonus Features.

As well as all meals during the 3-day tour outside of Guatemala City.

Ask your travel agent for Pan Am's The Complete Guatemala tour. PAH 082.

Because if you just ask for the pyramids, you might get sent to the wrong ones.

PAN AM
America's airline to the world.

Guatemala 8-day tour is based on round trip GIT economy air fare for groups of 10 or more leaving on selected departure dates. We help you join a group. If a group is not formed we try to arrange an alternate date. Tickets must be purchased at least 15 days in advance. U.S. and Guatemala airport departure taxes are included. Hotels are based on double occupancy.

See your travel agent.

Puerto Vallarta

8 days/7 nights, hotel and airfare included, from

If you've been looking for the perfect chance to take off for Mexico, this is it. Because we just came up with the best tours going. Including a top-notch hotel, round-trip airfare, discounts on fishing and restaurants and lots of extras. All at the best prices going. And when you compare these tours to all the charter flights to Mexico and Hawaii, they look even better. Because unlike the charters, there's no down payment with us. And no month-long waiting period till you can take off. So see your travel agent. And get going yourself.

Look away down south in the land of peanuts

WISDOM-TRAVELER

Georgia on your mind? These days you'd almost have to be buried alive to escape it. However, it does deserve thought as a travel destination and not just peanuts, Billy and Miss Lillian. Its trump card is variety with a capital V — everything from the state's golf tournament and spectacular whitewater river rafting (as shown by Burt Reynolds in the movie "Deliverance") to "hawg-boats" at mountain fairs and an old-fashioned Renaissance-style mansion with a secret room.

For little spenders, there is an attraction, a generous supply of good buys at close to purse-snatching prices. For instance:

"Family-style" restaurants are a big deal for big and little eaters. And some of them could have even a Francophile's mind. The all-you-can-eat spread at Dillard's House just outside of Clayton, N.C., is famous for freshness. Most of what's served, from fried chicken and country ham to southern-style vegetables, is raised on the premises.

CHAMPION diners say the rewards are also belly-rubbing good. Smith House in Dahlonega, Ga., Wilke's in Savannah and La Grapes Fishing Camp at Lake Burton. And, they add, only a 24-karat misses the barbecue at Ralph's in Atlanta.

That's only the good news. The st news concerns prices: about $2 $2.50 for groaning board breakfasts (where served), $3.50 for lunch and $5 for dinner.

Contentment for some travelers is a room at a Days Inn, one of the country's biggest budget motel chains. The chain's headquarters is in Atlanta and about 39 inns are spread around Georgia. All rooms have two double beds, wall-to-wall shag carpeting, color TV, a full bath, individually controlled heating and air conditioning.

There are also a swimming pool, restaurant and gas station on the premises of each inn, but no fancy lobby, room service, bellhops or meeting rooms. The result is what's called "budget luxury" and the price per room is $9.88 to $12.88 for occupancy by one person plus $3 for each additional adult or $1 for each child under 18.

FREE DIRECTORIES are available from Days Inn, 2751 Buford Highway N.E., Atlanta 30324. There is a toll-free "800" number for out-of-state reservations. Also ask about their discount club for guests over 55 and Days Lodges, suites with kitchens at a slightly higher price.

Of course, if you'd prefer a furnished cottage in often-stunning surroundings, make contact with the Georgia Department of Natural Resources Information and Education Office, 270 Washington St., Atlanta 30334. They're the ones who can tell you about the facilities in state parks, where the draws include Indian relics and trails, fishing, boating, swimming, climbing and other sports.

It probably hasn't hurt business that the cottages rent for all of $10 a night for one-bedroom units (two persons), $14 for two bedrooms (two persons), $22 for three bedrooms (six persons) and even lower weekly rates.

Drive through the mountainous northeast region and look for quilt-covered clotheslines. They signal sales, not washdays, with handmade coverlets going for around $30 to $250 these days.

GET LKING to the locals and you can also find your way to makers and sellers of homemade foods and preserves. Clever planners also beat a path to the Georgia Mountain Crafts Co-op at the old depot in Tallulah Falls and to the Georgia Mountain Fair, in Hiawassee, which this year is set for Aug. 5-13.

If you can do anything Burt Reynolds can do, okay, ride the foamy waters of the Chattooga River. The Georgia Bureau of Industry and Trade, Tourist Division, PO Box 1776, Atlanta 30301, can provide details on when and how. Cost of a one-day excursion, including lunch, guides boats and other equipment, is about $25 per person.

For tougher types? Well, they trained men for duty in Vietnam by sending them through the Okefenokee Swamp, a Spanish moss-covered half-world of alligators, strange fish and birds. A less-than-hairy visit, though, can be had by signing up for an all-day guided boat trip (about $50 for two) or a two-hour look ($3 per person). Admission to the swamp, which is a wildlife refuge, is $3.

TO FOLLOW in the footsteps of Presidents, you have a choice of places. Plains, of course, but don't forget Warm Springs, where Franklin D. Roosevelt "took the waters" (the Little White House and a museum are on display), and St. Simons island, the retreat Jimmy Carter favors.

the saddest thing about watching the irony of success from so close instead of so far away is the maddening spectacle of real artists who trash their lives so willingly. Brooke Hayward is the daughter of legendary producer-agent Leland Hayward and that luminous, radiantly haunting actress Margaret Sullivan. He was married five times. She was married four.

From an MGM fantasy of a childhood populated by cooks, butlers, chauffeurs, nurses, tutors and sycophants. Brooke Hayward grew to hate the parents who wasted their own lives and wrecked those of their children.

This is an honest ruthlessly self-deprecating book about how it all went wrong. At the end of the book, you still don't know why Margaret Sullivan committed suicide, why Brooke's sister Bridget committed suicide, or why brother Bill went insane.

And you don't know how the tortured author will turn out, either. But she's been meticulous about getting it all out in the open. Maybe she doesn't understand herself.

The book is like analysis. Ms. Hayward is the survivor, and she lays what she's discovered out on a sterile table, like malignant tissue. Whatever the prognosis, she's not likely to accept it. But she's survived the operation.

The writing is clear-visioned, astonishingly candid, impeccably structured. If you've ever wondered what it's like to grow up famous and envied without knowing you're slowly being poisoned by the people who love you, this revealing self-portrait is the last word on the subject.

"Haywire" is a blazing revelation of the American Dream as Teutonic nightmare, and one of the reading "musts" of the season.

FROM THE Delray Training Center in Florida, a letter just arrived that made me smile. Arnold N. Winick, a horse breeder who has trained several thoroughbreds over the last 30 years, writes that he purchased a yearling in the 1975 Keeneland Summer Sale for $57,000.

"Due to the fact that we enjoy your interpretations about things," he writes, "we named this colt REED 'N WEEP. I hope you don't mind. The colt is presently running at Gulfstream Race Track in Florida."

"HAYWIRE," new book by Brooke Hayward, is introspective look at her life as the daughter of actress Margaret Sullivan, left, who committed suicide, and legendary producer, Leland Hayward.

Pasadena denies Poly back-to-back titles

By KEN PIVERNETZ
Staff Writer

The toughest high school basketball league in the CIF didn't come up with the one prize it coveted most of all Saturday night at the Long Beach Arena.

The 4-A championship went to Pasadena, 56-49, over Poly, denying the Jackrabbits their second successive title and dimming what otherwise had been a banner season for the Moore League.

Poly, Compton and Millikan had comprised three-fourths of the weekend tournament field, and both the Rams and Jackrabbits failed in chances to beat a Pasadena team most people considered the favorite.

Although it was not a classic

CIF final game, a turnout of 8,207 did witness a contest that was in doubt for more than three quarters, some excellent defense by both teams and ferocious rebounding.

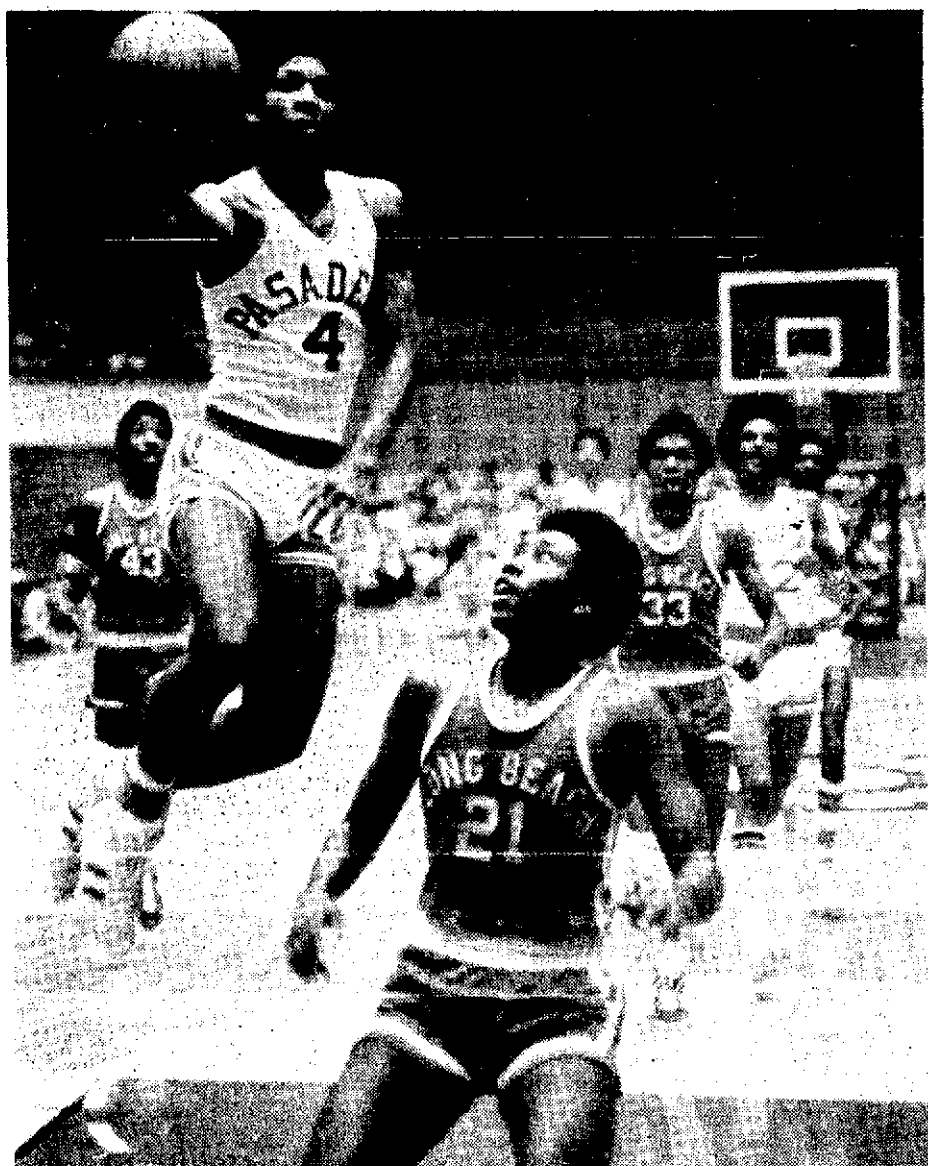

The only player on either side to hit his shots with any consistency was 6-6 Bulldog guard Barry Brooks, who was 7 of 8 from the field and scored a game-high 20 points.

Brooks was selected the MVP of the two evening games, but exited only 1:17 into the fourth quarter with his fifth foul.

It should have provided a spark for Poly which was down only 38-34 at the time.

Holland UCLA's secret weapon

POCATELLO, Ida. — Gene Bartow was in an unusually generous frame of mind.

"The band was super, so were the song girls and the cheerleaders," praised Bartow, "and the bear was great."

Then, pausing, Bartow added, "and so was Brad Holland."

Brad Holland...didn't he used to play basketball at UCLA?

He still does, or at least he did Saturday, coming off the bench to score 18 crucial second-half points as UCLA rallied to pin an 87-79 defeat on Louisville's Doctors of Dunk (22-6) in an NCAA first-round contest in Idaho State's Minidome.

The triumph put the Bruins (24-4) in the Western Regionals for the 11th consecutive year. Their next opponent is Idaho State Thursday night at Brigham Young University.

It is quite possible the Bruins wouldn't be making the trip to Provo, Utah, had it not been for Holland's nationally-televised heroics Saturday afternoon.

"I can't give enough credit to a guy like Brad," said Bartow. "It's a team game, but Brad really turned things around for us."

The Bruins were training, 55-51, and seemed to lack direction in their attempts to attack Louisville's 3-2 zone when Bartow called on Holland with 13:50 to play.

Although the 6-2 sophomore guard was the 10th player UCLA had used in the game and many of the 10,887 probably felt he was trying to draw to an inside straight, Bartow didn't feel the move was a high-risk gamble.

"I think Brad's a very good basketball player," explained Bartow. "He's our best 18- to 20-foot shooter. We've gone to him many times against the zone and he's contributed to many of our 24 victories."

None of the contributions were any larger than the one he made to No. 24.

Holland hit six of his first seven shots and three times put the Bruins in front, at 62-61, 64-63 and 66-65.

The Bruins eventually went ahead for good on a pair of goaltending calls against Louisville on layups by guard Jimmy Spillane.

LBSU ambushed; UCLA advances 49ers manhandled in NCAA playoffs

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

POCATELLO, Ida. — It was like turning a kid—a very big kid—loose in a candy store.

"That's the first time anyone has played a regular 'man-to-man' defense against us in a long, long time," Steve Hayes confessed with a grin after scoring 29 points—23 in the second half—as Idaho State dismantled Long Beach State, 83-72, in an NCAA first-round game Saturday.

That triumph, witnessed by 10,887 partisans in ISU's Minidome, qualified the seven-foot Hayes and his Bengal teammates for a Thursday night meeting with UCLA at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah.

The defeat ended the season for Long Beach State, which finished 21-8.

Matched against the 49er front line of 6-8 Clarence Ruffen, 6-8 Michael Wiley and 6-5 Lloyd McMillan, Hayes and his baseline cronies, 6-10 Jeff Cook and 6-7 Greg Griffin, mauled Long Beach for a collective 61 points and 42 rebounds.

"WE HAVEN'T played against a defense like that since we went into conference (Big Sky)," reported Hayes. "Teams in our league never played us straight, they'd use all kinds of gimmicks, collapsing zones and things like that."

"But," he added, "maybe they knew us better than Long Beach did."

Long Beach State coach Dwight Jones declined to plead ignorance. "We knew playing man-to-man was a calculated gamble," said Jones, "but we did it because we wanted to get the tempo up."

The plan didn't work. "We never got our 'speed' game going," said Jones with a sigh, "because we weren't getting the defensive rebounds."

Particularly after the 49ers began to wear down.

Trailing only, 33-30 at halftime and 35-34 two minutes into the second half, the 49ers were victimized by five tip-in baskets and other assorted close-in shots by the Bengals.

In Jones' mind the strategy nearly worked.

"Tactically, I don't know if there's anything we could have done differently," Jones said, "but we could have executed better, especially in our free throw shooting and rebounding."

The 49ers made only 6 of 14 first-half free throws and then missed two more that could have given them the lead, 36-35, early in the final period.

"If we'd have ever gotten the lead, we would have held the ball," Jones said, "and made them play some man-to-man defense. Then it would have been a little more interesting."

BUT THE 49ers never led, and subsequently were never able to pull the Bengals out of their two-three zone.

"Was it a good zone?" responded Jones. "Any zone that has a 7-0, 6-10, 6-7 front line is a good zone, primarily because we got very few second shots."

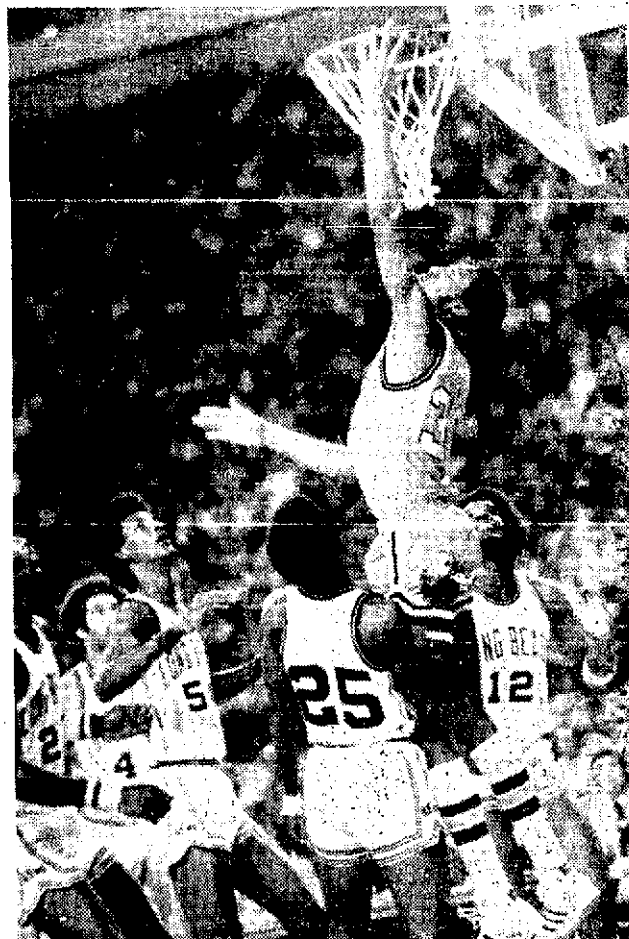

That was a key in Jim Killingworth's game plan.

"Before the game I told my kids that if they could keep Long Beach off the offensive boards we'd win the game," the ISU coach said. "Long Beach is one of the best offensive rebounding teams I've seen."

Saturday, the Bengals were one of the best offensive rebounding teams Long Beach had seen.

"I thought the kids played hard defensively, they tried to do a good job," said Jones, "and they did a good job, too, on first-pass and first-shot defense, but we broke down when the ball was shot because we couldn't contain them physically."

The 'other' tournament: Bartow vs. Crum

POCATELLO, Ida. — This was supposed to have been a contest for supremacy between the Doctors of Dunk from Louisville and the Surgeons of Slam from UCLA.

But there were only three slam-dunks, two by Louisville, during the course of UCLA's 87-79 victory in the first round of the NCAA basketball tournament Saturday.

The guys who were cutting each other up were the coaches, Denny Crum of Louisville and Gene Bartow of UCLA.

This War Between the Coaches had its beginnings when both were in the Missouri Valley Conference, Bartow at Memphis State and Crum at his present location.

It erupted into flames two years ago when Bartow was hired to replace John Wooden and become the new Wizard of Westwood.

Crum had thought he had earned the right to succeed Wooden after serving an apprenticeship at UCLA and taking Louisville to the NCAA's Round of Four twice in four years.

This past week, Crum had suggested Bartow had the best personnel in the country and said his record with Bartow stood at 3-3.

After pointing out he had a 4-3 edge over Crum, Bartow told newsmen en route to Pocatello: "I think Louisville has had the best talent in the country the last five years. I don't know how they could have lost 14 games in the last two seasons."

Crum one-upped the one-uppers twice this past week.

He slipped into Pocatello on Wednesday and sent his team through two extra days of practice at Idaho State's Minidome, apparently in violation of NCAA tournament rules.

Then, prior to the start of the game Saturday, he sent his team onto the floor in breach of agreement with NBC television.

NBC wanted the Bruins to come onto the court first, and had their cameras zoomed on Kelly James and the UCLA band.

But Louisville slipped onto the scene a few seconds early, the host Idaho State band drowning out James and his horn-tooters with Louisville's fight song.

All of this had press observers falling out of their chairs with laughter.

But when the game had ended, Crum, for one, wasn't in a laughing mood.

He stalked the Louisville dressing room as his players sat with their heads downcast.

Suddenly, he tried to kick a field goal with a locker and damn near caved the thing in.

"We had our chances and didn't capitalize on them," Crum told his players. "You have to take advantage of those things."

Then, as though finally realizing nothing more could be done, he said: "Keep your chins up. Be proud of yourselves and the team."

Down the hall, Bartow was explaining that he had never told his team about the controversy over Louisville's extra workouts, a situation that had upset the UCLA coach so much on Friday that he wanted the contest moved.

"I got together with my assistants, Lee Hunt and Larry Farmer," said Bartow, "and we decided to forget it."

"We figured if we win, we win, and if we lose, it's history. I really feel that's the way I would have handled it if we had lost."

But Bartow had a parting shot for Crum.

"This was a big win for us in a lot of ways," said the Bruin coach. "And, gentlemen, the record is now 5-3."

Louisville's steady senior guard, Phil Bond, said the Bruins should do well as NCAA action moves on to Provo, Utah, for the Western Regionals.

Holland UCLA's secret weapon

POCATELLO, Ida. — Gene Bartow was in an unusually generous frame of mind.

"The band was super, so were the song girls and the cheerleaders," praised Bartow, "and the bear was great."

Then, pausing, Bartow added, "and so was Brad Holland."

Brad Holland...didn't he used to play basketball at UCLA?

He still does, or at least he did Saturday, coming off the bench to score 16 crucial second-half points as UCLA rallied to pin an 87-79 defeat on Louisville's Doctors of Dunk (22-6) in an NCAA first-round contest in Idaho State's Minidome.

The triumph put the Bruins (24-4) in the Western Regionals for the 11th consecutive year. Their next opponent is Idaho State Thursday night at Brigham Young University.

It is quite possible the Bruins wouldn't be making the trip to Provo, Utah, had it not been for Holland's nationally-televised heroics Saturday afternoon.

"I can't give enough credit to a guy like Brad," said Bartow. "It's a team game, but Brad really turned things around for us."

The Bruins were training, 55-51, and seemed to lack direction in their attempts to attack Louisville's 3-2 zone when Bartow called on Holland with 13:50 to play.

Although the 6-2 sophomore guard was the 10th player UCLA had used in the game and many of the 10,887 probably felt he was trying to draw to an inside straight, Bartow didn't feel the move was a high-risk gamble.

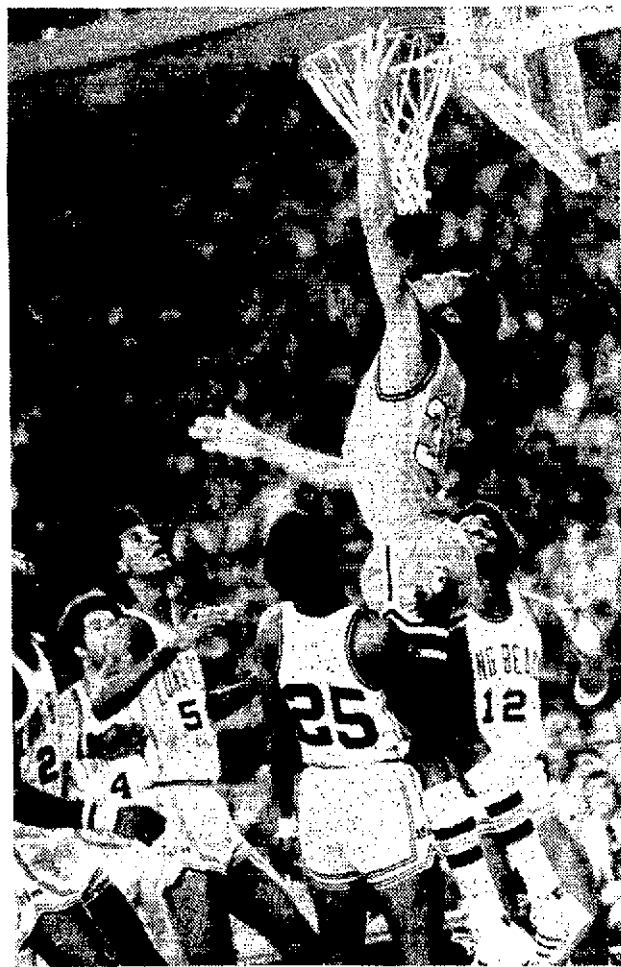

"I think Brad's a very good basketball player," explained Bartow. "He's our best 18- to 20-foot shooter. We've gone to him many times against the zone and he's contributed to many of our 24 victories."

None of the contributions were any larger than the one he made to No. 24.

Holland hit six of his first seven shots and three times put the Bruins in front, at 62-61, 64-63 and 66-65.

The Bruins eventually went ahead for good on a pair of goal-tending calls against Louisville on layups by guard Jimmy Spillane.

The 'other' tournament: Bartow vs. Crum

POCATELLO, Ida. — This was supposed to have been a contest for supremacy between the Doctors of Dunk from Louisville and the Surgeons of Slam from UCLA.

But there were only three slam-dunks, two by Louisville, during the course of UCLA's 87-79 victory in the first round of the NCAA basketball tournament Saturday.

The guys who were cutting each other up were the coaches, Denny Crum of Louisville and Gene Bartow of UCLA.

This War Between the Coaches had its beginnings when both were in the Missouri Valley Conference, Bartow at Memphis State and Crum at his present location.

It erupted into flames two years ago when Bartow was hired to replace John Wooden and become the new Wizard of Westwood.

Crum had thought he had earned the right to succeed Wooden after serving an apprenticeship at UCLA and taking Louisville to the NCAA's Round of Four twice in four years.

This past week, Crum had suggested Bartow had the best personnel in the country and said his record with Bartow stood at 3-3.

After pointing out he had a 4-3 edge over Crum, Bartow told newsmen en route to Pocatello: "I think Louisville has had the best talent in the country the last five years. I don't know how they could have lost 14 games in the last two seasons."

Crum one-upped the one-uppers twice this past week.

He slipped into Pocatello on Wednesday and sent his team through two extra days of practice at Idaho State's Minidome, apparently in violation of NCAA tournament rules.

Then, prior to the start of the game Saturday, he sent his team onto the floor in breach of agreement with NBC television.

NBC wanted the Bruins to come onto the court first, and had their cameras zoomed on Kelly James and the UCLA band.

But Louisville slipped onto the scene a few seconds early, the host Idaho State band drowning out James and his horn-tooters with Louisville's fight song.

All of this had press observers falling out of their chairs with laughter.

But when the game had ended, Crum, for one, wasn't in a laughing mood.

He stalked the Louisville dressing room as his players sat with their heads downcast.

Suddenly, he tried to kick a field goal with a locker and damn near caved the thing in.

"We had our chances and didn't capitalize on them," Crum told his players. "You have to take advantage of those things."

Then, as though finally realizing nothing more could be done, he said: "Keep your chins up. Be proud of yourselves and the team."

Down the hall, Bartow was explaining that he had never told his team about the controversy over Louisville's extra workouts, a situation that had upset the UCLA coach so much on Friday that he wanted the contest moved.

"I got together with my assistants, Lee Hunt and Larry Farmer," said Bartow, "and we decided to forget it."

"We figured if we win, we win, and if we lose, it's history. I really feel that's the way I would have handled it if we had lost."

But Bartow had a parting shot for Crum.

"This was a big win for us in a lot of ways," said the Bruin coach. "And, gentlemen, the record is now 5-3."

Louisville's steady senior guard, Phil Bond, said the Bruins should do well as NCAA action moves on to Provo, Utah, for the Western Regionals.

Bonington totally absorbed in challenge, high adventure

Harrowing Everest climb a way of life

Having expanded to the colonies, that fine old British financial firm of Barclays Bank was casting about for greater heights to conquer, so it made a deal with Chris Bonington, the noted mountaineer. Barclays would put up $250,000 for a British assault on Mt. Everest, reap the publicity and collect the royalties from a book Bonington would write about it. All Chris had to do was climb it.

To him, it was a fantastic deal, which says something about mountain climbers. "You'll never get rich leading expeditions," he says, while suggesting that it still beats working for a living.

The book Bonington wrote about the climb of 18 months ago is called Everest The Hard Way (Random House, $12.95).

"Of 10 people who have played a formative part in my climbing life, seven are dead, and that is frightening. I worry about it in the context of my responsibility to my wife and my family—but I couldn't possibly give up."

because that's how he did it, all the way up the Southwest Face, which is tougher than getting into Pasadena on New Year's Day. Nobody had ever done it.

Bonington, on a lecture tour of the U.S., will tell about the feat Monday night at 7 at the REI sporting goods store, 405 W. Torrance Blvd., in Carson.

CHRIS HAD a little help—some 17 other climbers and 60 Sherpa porters—but the irony is that he never stood on the 29,028-foot-high summit himself. The logistics of leaping team members from one camp to another didn't work out for him before the weather turned bad, a circumstance that brings him little disappointment.

"None whatsoever," he insists. "When it's a massive, structured expedition and you're the leader, you're the person that chooses who goes to the summit. There's no way you can choose yourself, because the acceptance of your authority by the team is based entirely on their trust and respect."

"It's very easy to be unselfish if you're the leader because you've placed your ego into the expedition as a whole. If you're a climbing member of the team, obviously the satisfaction is reaching the top of the mountain."

The non-climber may not understand this concept, nor did the 8-year-old son of Nick Estcourt, one of Bonington's closest friends, when they returned to England.

"Matthew came up to me with ferocity on his face and said, 'Why didn't you let my daddy go to the summit?' What could I reply? How could I explain?"

YET WHEN the first two members of the team, Doug Scott and Dougal Haston, radioed back to a lower camp that they had made it, Bonington broke down in tears of joy.

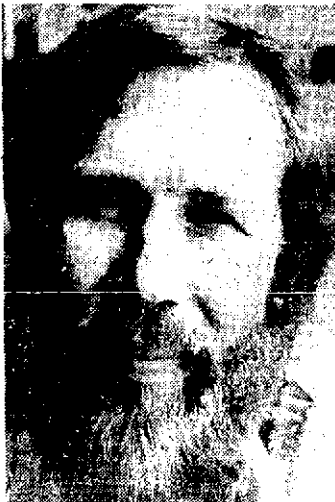

"I felt as intense a wave of emotion at their success as I would have if I had stood there myself," he says.

Six previous attempts on the Southwest Face of the world's highest mountain had failed, including one by Bonington in 1972. This time four of his team succeeded—probably five.

The fifth would have been Mick Burke, who was last seen forging ahead alone as a storm enveloped the summit.

"He took a sound calculation," Chris says. "He was playing the odds out quite fine, but that's what climbing's all about—and Chris! When you're only about twelve hundred feet away . . ."

The second pair to ascend the top,

CHRIS BONINGTON
'I can't give it up'

Peter Boardman and Portemba, the Sherpa leader or "Sirdar," passed Burke on their way down. Bonington speculates that the nearsighted Burke's glasses became useless in the driving snow, he became disoriented in the "white-out" conditions and simply "stepped over the edge" to oblivion.

THE OTHER climbers mourned for their companion but accepted his loss as an understood risk.

"On Mt. Everest," Chris says, "just about every other expedition has a fatal accident. That's high odds against you. But another factor that I find even more frightening is that of 10 people who have played a formative part in my climbing life, seven are dead—and that's frightening."

Haston died in an avalanche five weeks ago while skiing in Switzerland.

"I worry about it in the context of my responsibility to my wife and my family," Bonington says, "but I couldn't possibly give it up."

IT WAS THE duty of Chris's wife Wendy to brk the news to Burke's wife Beth.

"The people that are under stress are the climbers' wives," Chris says. "They know the score. They know the odds on Everest. When I'm away, Wendy hates the telephone. Every time it rings it could be bad news. We got the news of Mick's death back in 24 hours. Every wife of the team was very shaken."

Bonington admits that it can get lonely on a major mountaineering expedition. For Everest, he was away four months and actively climbing the mountain for 33 days.

"I certainly get pretty homesick at times," he says. "I do think quite a lot of my wife and children. This is common with all the team. Your home relationship is a solid anchor that you need, although your mental drive is undoubtedly on the mountain."

That's about as far as one's thoughts stray.

"My sexual urges certainly go down with the altitude," Chris says, laughing. "At 26,000 feet, you're very pushed to get aroused."

"There have been women going up high in the mountains, however, and it was rumored lightheartedly when a husband and wife went on the international expedition that one of their aims was to get the record of the highest . . . well, you know."

CLIMBING MOUNTAINS or writing and lecturing about it is all Bonington, 42, has done since 1962. But he has a high regard for the ordinary working stiff.

"Well, he's a very important fellow, because it would be a pretty disastrous world if we all wanted to do what I do."

Bonington, who lives in the Lake District of England, has received the Commander of the Order of the British Empire (CBE) award for his considerable achievements in mountaineering, which include the first ascents of Annapurna,

RICH ROBERTS

Nuptse and Changabang, all formidable peaks.

He attended Sandhurst, Britain's version of West Point, and was an armored commander for three years, then taught mountaineering to soldiers for two.

"Then I felt the army had had enough of me," he says.

For nine months he was a management trainee for a large multi-national company, an experience he describes as confining and, in a word, "appalling."

THE BEAUTY of his life is that, despite the conquest of Everest, there is always another mountain to climb, or at least another way to do it.

He will try K2, the world's second highest mountain, with only six men in 1978.

"I'm constantly trying to find new challenges in my life," he says, "new complex mountaineering problems, and then using my experience and intelligence to solve these problems."

He is a rarity among men, totally absorbed in a life of constant challenge and high adventure.

"I wouldn't change it," he says.

A few horse laughs along the backstretch

Some of us were sitting around chewing the sinew about humor in sports.

Bill Shoemaker inserted a word on behalf of horse racing. It was the uncluttered view of The Shoe that the sport of kings lends itself best to a chuckle.

"Not just because I'm involved," Shoe said.

Of course not.

"Really," Shoemaker said. "Racing is best because you have so many elements. There are the men and the horses who do the racing and the horse players who keep the game alive."

"All of them keep the game funny."

The humorists of other pastimes will disagree, of course, but it must be admitted The Shoe has a point. The following examples are set forth only with the assurance of equal time for representatives of other games.

DURING the parade to the post, a horse who had yet to break his maiden walked past a veteran horse player standing at the rail.

"Pst," the horse said to the player, "get a wager down on me. There is no way any of these bums can handle me in this race."

The horse player dropped his form and his binoculars and stood with his mouth open, staring wide-eyed at the talking animal.

"What's the matter," the beast asked. "You surprised a horse can talk?"

"No," the player replied. "I'm surprised you think you can win."

JUST BEFORE the big race, the Duke of Bedford strolled down to paddock just in time to see his trainer feeding something to his horse. Rushing up to the trainer, the Duke demanded to know what the horse was being fed so close to post time.

"Just a lump of sugar," the trainer replied. "Look, I'll take one myself and here's one for you."

Whereupon the Duke sampled the lump and was satisfied it was ordinary sugar.

A few minutes later, the jockey asked the trainer for his instructions on how to ride the race.

"I know you will be leading at the top of the stretch," the trainer said. "If anything passes you, don't worry about it."

"It will either be me or the Duke of Bedford."

A COUPLE of very senior citizens were at the race track one afternoon, sitting quietly in the grandstand area. Suddenly, one of the old gentleman keeled over and slumped to the floor.

Rushing to the scene, a paramedic asked breathlessly, "is he still alive?"

"Only," the other old fellow replied, "in the daily double."

THE OWNER of a horse, who couldn't win for losing, became very suspicious at his trainer writing something in a notebook after every race and finally demanded to know what it was all about. "Well," the trainer explained, "as you know, we beat one, sometimes two, horses in every race. I am keeping track of the ones we beat in this little notebook."

"One of these days, we're going to be in a race where there is nothing but the names in my book and I'm going to make the biggest damn bet you ever saw."

AND Bill Shoemaker's favorite:

A horse player was at the track with his bookie and betting with both hands on every race. After the first six races, he had yet to select a winner.

"I got a cinch in the seventh," the player said to the book. "Give me a grand on the nine horse."

"You already owe me six big ones," the book replied. "You just ran out of credit."

"You gotta give me a chance to get even," the player pleaded, and finally wore down the bookie.

"Okay," he said, "but that's the last of day, if you lose on the nine."

The field hit the top of the stretch with the nine horse leading by two lengths and the five making a great run at him.

Snapping his fingers and jumping up and down, the horse player was yelling, "C'mon with that five. C'mon with that five."

"Are you nuts?" the bookie asked. "You got a grand with me on the nine horse."

"I know," replied the player, "but I two dollars cash on the five."

Saga of a 'pot-bellied' catcher

Steve Yeager: A 'big' future?

by GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

VERO BEACH — Steve Yeager. . . a pot-bellied catcher.

That's the way one metropolitan newspaper chose to describe the Dodger receiver, possibly because he is. . . well, let's say, slightly overweight.

"Where's the (bleeping) guy who wrote that?" says Yeager. "What's he know? Pop-bellied? Bull feathers!"

Yeager then struck something of a pose, like a weightlifter might do.

"I wanted to gain some weight," he said, sucking in his middle slightly. "I was up to 220 over the winter but I've lost about 10 pounds. I want to weigh 210. The Dodgers want me to weigh 195. Man, that's skinny. I can't play skinny."

"I feel much stronger weighing what I do right now—210."

Then, as if to prove a point, Yeager waived three home runs in three intra-squad games, flexing his biceps for the benefit of manager Tom Lasorda after the third one.

It is Yeager's sixth season with the Dodgers, fourth as their regular catcher.

Over the winter the Dodgers went out and obtained Johnny Oates, a lefthanded-hitting catcher.

A starter at Philadelphia last year until he was injured—in the first game of the season—Oates was to be Yeager's backup, right?

"I'm going to spring training with the idea of becoming the Dodgers' starting catcher," Oates said on a Southern California radio show not too long ago. "If I do that,

STEVE YEAGER
Proves his point

Steve Yeager is going to have to work."

Asked to respond, Yeager, a confident yet sensitive sort, said, "My answer to that is this: Are you telling me Joe Ferguson wasn't a good catcher? You're darned right he was. And he played behind me for three years."

You begin to get the idea. He's 29 now, still brash and cocky, but he isn't making any more of those foolish "I'm-better-than-Johnny-Bench" statements.

For a time last year, he was.

He breezed into the month of July batting .285 and ranked second on the club in home runs with 11. Then came his violent, locomotive-like collision with Houston's Cesar Cedeno.

Cedeno came barreling toward the plate, knees high, and leveled Yeager.

It ruined his season, right then and there, not to mention his noggin. He was hauled off the field with a concussion. When he came to, he charged Cedeno with a cheap shot, saying, "He'll get his one of these days."

Now, nearly a year later, he's saying the same thing.

"I've got pictures of that play before, during and after," he said. "He came in with his knees flying high. I'm telling you, if he does it again and I've got the ball . . ."

But, concussion and all, Yeager was back in the lineup three days later, a dismal mistake as time would tell.

He wasn't ready. He admits that now, but explains: "My attitude is to play. They asked me if I was ready and I said sure."

Hockey's a sitting duck; everyone taking potshots

By HAL BOCK
NEW YORK (AP) — Like the bobbing duck in a carnival shooting gallery, there is hockey, sitting out there, waiting to be fired at.

And the entertainment industry is doing its share of shooting.

First Hollywood took its swing with Slap Shot, a feature film starring Paul Newman. This week it's television's turn with CBS showing a two-hour TV film, The Deadliest Season.

Both movies deal with violence in hockey. Slap Shot offers it with a smile. The Deadliest Season takes a legalistic view.

But because of their preoccupation with violence, these films have missed the essence of ice hockey.

Certainly, acts of violence occur in the game. But the game is not constructed around that ingredient. And, after all, violence occurs in all games.

Is hockey any more violent than baseball, where a pitcher last season admitted deliberately throwing at a batter, intending to hit him? Is it any more violent than football, where, after all, the object of the game is for one team to advance the ball downfield by physically moving another team out of the way? Is it any more violent than boxing, where the winner of a bout is the man who does a more complete job of beating up another man?

Certainly not.

Hockey is not a high stick or a butt end. It is a slap shot and a kick save. Hockey is not blood and fists. It is a breakaway and a clean check.

The Deadliest Season is not an anti-hockey show," said Robert Buzz Berger, co-producer of the show. "Quite the opposite. It's pro hockey. It shows that hockey can be a marvelous entertainment without extraordinary violence."

"At the same time, there is a tremendous appetite for violence these days—in movies, in TV, in sports. And the people who satisfy that appetite should take a look at what they are breeding."

Then Berger should be taking that look because his film is sold on violence.

Should the sport and the

The .285 batting average soon dwindled and by the time the season ended he was hitting just .214. The 11 home runs were still 11.

"I learned my lesson," he insists. If it happens again, a bad hand, for example, where I can't grip the bat or make a good throw, I'm getting out of there.

"Last year by coming back too soon it hurt me and it hurt the team."

What hurt even more was the night he was speared in the left side of the neck by a broken bat, a freaky, one-in-a-million accident that had one physician saying, "He's lucky to be alive."

The sear remains but is protected by a special device on his catchers mask.

In all, it was the strangest of seasons for the Dodger catcher—but not all bad.

He was married, to the former Gloria Galone, and the best man was Los Angeles mayor Tom Bradley.

He also had the rare distinction of stealing home, something no Dodger catcher had done in more than two decades.

Reflecting on that moment, Yeager smiled and said, sarcastically, "Not bad for a pot-bellied catcher."

Twenty-five years ago, when Bobby Thomson's home run won the pennant for the New York Giants, he circled the bases in triumph arriving to a joyful reception at home plate. Last October, when Chris Chambliss did the same thing for the New York Yankees, he wound up running for his life as fans streamed over Yankee Stadium, using the pennant-clinching as an excuse for marauding.

So perhaps, instead of zeroing in on hockey, Slap Shot and The Deadliest Season should have dealt with the psyche of the paying customers, who use their ticket stubs as licenses to urge and commit their own brand of mayhem.

Whereupon the Duke sampled the lump and was satisfied it was ordinary sugar.

A few minutes later, the jockey asked the trainer for his instructions on how to ride the race.

"I know you will be leading at the top of the stretch," the trainer said. "If anything passes you, don't worry about it."

"It will either be me or the Duke of Bedford."

A COUPLE of very senior citizens were at the race track one afternoon, sitting quietly in the grandstand area. Suddenly, one of the old gentleman keeled over and slumped to the floor.

Rushing to the scene, a paramedic asked breathlessly, "Is he still alive?"

"Only," the other old fellow replied, "in the daily double."

THE OWNER of a horse, who couldn't win for losing, became very suspicious at his trainer writing something in a notebook after every race and finally demanded to know what it was all about.

"Well," the trainer explained, "as you know, we beat one, sometimes two, horses in every race. I am keeping track of the ones we beat in this little notebook."

"One of these days, we're going to be in a race where there is nothing but the names in my book and I'm going to make the biggest damn bet you ever saw."

AND Bill Shoemaker's favorite:

A horse player was at the track with his bookie and betting with both hands on every race. After the first six races, he had yet to select a winner.

"I got a cinch in the seventh," the player said to the bookie. "Give me a grand on the nine horse."

"You already owe me six big ones," the bookie replied. "You just ran out of credit."

"You gotta give me a chance to get even," the player pleaded, and finally wore down the bookie.

"Okay," he said, "but that's the last of day, if you lose on the nine."

The field hit the top of the stretch with the nine horse leading by two lengths and the five making a great run at him.

Snapping his fingers and jumping up and down, the horse player was yelling, "C'mon with that five. C'mon with that five."

"Are you nuts?" the bookie asked. "You got a grand with me on the nine horse."

"I know," replied the player, "but I two dollars cash on the five."

Saga of a 'pot-bellied' catcher

Steve Yeager: A 'big' future?

by GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

VERO BEACH — Steve Yeager, a pot-bellied catcher.

That's the way one metropolitan newspaper chose to describe the Dodger receiver, possibly because he is . . . well, let's say, slightly overweight.

"Where's the (bleeping) guy who wrote that?" says Yeager. "What's he know? Pot-bellied? Bull feathers!"

Yeager then struck something of a pose, like a weightlifter might do.

"I wanted to gain some weight," he said, sucking in his middle slightly. "I was up to 220 over the winter but I've lost about 10 pounds. I want to weigh 210. The Dodgers want me to weigh 195. Man, that's skinny. I can't play skinny."

"I feel much stronger weighing what I do right now—210."

Then, as if to prove a point, Yeager waived three home runs in three intra-squad games, flexing his biceps for the benefit of manager Tom Lasorda after the third one.

It is Yeager's sixth season with the Dodgers, fourth as their regular catcher.

Over the winter the Dodgers went out and obtained Johnny Oates, a lefthanded-hitting catcher.

A starter at Philadelphia last year until he was injured—in the first game of the season—Oates was to be Yeager's backup, right?

"I'm going to spring training with the idea of becoming the Dodgers' starting catcher," Oates said on a Southern California radio show not too long ago. "If I do that,

STEVE YEAGER
Proves his point

Steve Yeager is going to have to work."

Asked to respond, Yeager, a confident yet sensitive sort, said, "My answer to that is: Are you telling me Joe Ferguson wasn't a good catcher? You're darned right he was. And he played behind me for three years."

You begin to get the idea. He's 29 now, still brash and cocky, but he isn't making any more of those foolish "I'm-better-than-Johnny-Bench" statements.

For a time last year, he was.

He breezed into the month of July batting .285 and ranked second on the club in home runs with 11. Then came his violent, locomotive-like collision with Houston's Cesar Cedeno.

Cedeno came barreling toward the plate, knees high, and leveled Yeager.

It ruined his season, right then and there, not to mention his noggin. He was hauled off the field with a concussion. When he came to, he charged Cedeno with a cheap shot, saying, "He'll get his one of these days."

Now, nearly a year later, he's saying the same thing.

"I've got pictures of that play before, during and after," he said. "He came in with his knees flying high. I'm telling you, if he does it again and I've got the ball . . ."

But, concussion and all, Yeager was back in the lineup three days later, a dismal mistake as time would tell.

He wasn't ready. He admits that now, but explains: "My attitude is to play. They asked me if I was ready and I said sure."

The .285 batting average soon dwindled and by the time the season ended he was hitting just .214. The 11 home runs were still 11.

"I learned my lesson," he insists. If it happens again, a bad hand, for example, where I can't grip the bat or make a good throw, I'm getting out of there.

"Last year by coming back too soon it hurt me and it hurt the team."

What hurt even more was the night he was speared in the left side of the neck by a broken bat, a freaky, one-in-a-million accident that had one physician saying, "He's lucky to be alive."

The scar remains but is protected by a special device on his catchers mask.

In all, it was the strangest of seasons for the Dodger catcher—but not all bad.

He was married, to the former Gloria Gaione, and the best man was Los Angeles mayor Tom Bradley.

He also had the rare distinction of stealing home, something no Dodger catcher had done in more than two decades.

Reflecting on that moment, Yeager smiled and said, sarcastically, "Not bad for a pot-bellied catcher."

Hockey's a sitting duck; everyone taking potshots

By HAL BOCK
NEW YORK (AP) — Like the bobbing duck in a carnival shooting gallery, there is hockey, sitting out there, waiting to be fired at.

And the entertainment industry is doing its share of shooting.

First Hollywood took its swing with Slap Shot, a feature film starring Paul Newman. This week it's television's turn with CBS' shooting a two-hour TV film, The Deadliest Season.

Both movies deal with violence in hockey. Slap Shot offers it with a smile. The Deadliest Season takes a legalistic view.

But because of their preoccupation with violence, these films have missed the essence of ice hockey.

Certainly, acts of violence occur in the game. But the game is not constructed around that ingredient. And, after all, violence occurs in all games.

Is hockey any more violent than baseball, where a pitcher last season admitted deliberately throwing at a batter, intending to hit him? Is it any more violent than football, where, after all, the object of the game is for one team to advance the ball downfield by physically moving another team out of the way? Is it any more violent than boxing, where the winner of a bout is the man who does a more complete job of beating up another man?

Certainly not.

Hockey is not a high stick or a butt end. It is a slap shot and a kick save. Hockey is not blood and fists. It is a breakaway and a clean check.

The Deadliest Season is not an anti-hockey show," said Robert Buzz Berger, co-producer of the show. "Quite the opposite. It's pro hockey. It shows that hockey can be a marvelous entertainment without extraordinary violence."

"At the same time, there is a tremendous appetite for violence these days—in movies, in TV, in sports. And the people who satisfy that appetite should take a look at what they are breeding."

Then Berger should be taking that look because his film is sold on violence.

Should the sport and the players be indicted or should the spotlight be turned instead on the fans, who scream for blood and sometimes supply it themselves. There have been as many and perhaps more instances of out-of-control fans in the last few years than there have been in any sport. If it's violence you want, you can find plenty in the stands.

Twenty-five years ago, when Bobby Thomson's home run won the pennant for the New York Giants, he circled the bases in triumph arriving to a joyful reception at home plate. Last October, when Chris Chambliss did the same thing for the New York Yankees, he wound up running for his life as fans streamed over Yankee Stadium, using the pennant-clinching as an excuse for marauding.

So perhaps, instead of zeroing in on hockey, Slap Shot and The Deadliest Season should have dealt with the psyche of the paying customers, who use their ticket stubs as licenses to urge and commit their own brand of mayhem.

Schrader's Pocatello Observations

"This UCLA team is as good as — or maybe better than — the one we lost to (75-74 in overtime) in the semifinals of the championship tourney two years ago," said Bond.

Forward Wesley Cox, who plays at the same altitude as UCLA's college player of the year, Marques Johnson, thought the Cardinals hadn't protected the corners well enough.

"We held Johnson pretty much in check in the second half (4 points, 4 rebounds), but we let UCLA get off shots from the corners without anyone bothering them."

Although the Cardinals came close to knocking UCLA out of the Western Regionals for the first time since 1968, they now go to the sidelines.

SO DOES Long Beach State, which was playing in its first NCAA tournament since going on probation three years ago.

But the 49ers' 83-72 loss to Idaho State doesn't mean the season wasn't one of accomplishment for them.

There are more than 200 Division I basketball teams, and Long Beach State was one of 32 good enough to qualify for NCAA tournament competition.

"You know, we're really spoiled in Southern California," said Johnny Arndt, former Loyola coach, whose stepson, Jimmy Spillane, plays for UCLA. "We've had such great teams in our area—UCLA, Long Beach State, Pepperdine, USC—that if a team doesn't win a national championship, we think it's a disgrace."

"But, by gosh, you have to be good to get this far, and people shouldn't forget that."

Long Beach State couldn't see the trees for the forest.

Idaho State sent 7-foot, 235-pound Steve Hayes and 6-10, 215-pound Jeff Cook under the hoop and they were too much for the 49ers to cope with.

Long Beach State had to match up 6-7 Clarence Ruffen against Hayes and 6-8 Michael Wiley against Cook.

The 49ers were still in the game, trailing only by eight, when Ruffen drew his fifth personal foul with 12:52 remaining.

"We just didn't have anyone who could match up with Hayes after that," said 49er coach Dwight Jones. "Michael Wiley is a super freshman, but when we had to put him on Hayes, he had to give away too much height and weight."

Idaho State coach Jim Killingsworth thought Ruffen's departure was important for his team.

"Ruffen was playing Hayes tough and denying him the ball," said Killingsworth, who was a highly successful coach at Cerritos College before going to Idaho State. "After that, we sort of overpowered them."

"I think we beat a really good basketball team. Heck, if we played again tomorrow night, Long Beach State would probably win."

Jones noted that the 49ers had reached the four goals he had established for them when the season began.

"We wanted to win 20 games, the Pacific Coast Athletic Association championship, the PCAA tourney and play in the NCAA tournament."

"Well, we won 21 games and did the other three things. That's not bad."

Indeed, it isn't. And there will be more NCAA tournaments for the 49ers in the future, too.

LBSU SEASON ENDS—

For all their problems, the 49ers were still very much in the game until Hayes collected successive tip-in baskets and Cook intercepted a pass, raced down the court and slam-dunked the ball as he put his foot into the chest of 6-4 49er guard Dale Dillon for a 46-36 ISU lead.

"It changed the game when Greg got the dunk," said Killingsworth. It was discouraging to Long Beach to see him do that and it hurt them that Dillon had to go out of the game with his fourth foul.

It hurt even more moments later when the gallant Ruffen retired for the afternoon after fouling Hayes for the fifth time.

"I did what I could," Ruffen said quietly. "I just wished I could have had 10 fouls. That's about what I needed to guard him. The officials kept telling me to keep my hands off him, but he did mostly anything he wanted to do."

"He had his elbows and arms in my throat and face most of the game."

THE 49ERS were within two, 24-22, in rebounding at halftime, but faded under the power barrage in the second half, losing the backboard battle, 64-48.

"We got tired," said Ruffen. "Trying to get around those guys, trying to board, getting into the offense, really wore us out."

Fatigue was a factor, playing in their gym, the altitude, everything was a factor," said Jones, "but those are not excuses. They were better than we were today."

The Bengals also played a timely game.

Each time Long Beach made a move the Bengals would get some type of second-effort basket that would dampen the 49ers' comeback hopes.

The last came at 5:12 after McMillian, Long Beach's leading scorer with 20 points, had single-handedly led a five-point mini-spurt to get the 49ers within 13, 69-56.

Griffin smashed that flurry with a tip-in and Idaho State built leads as high as 19 before 49er reserves trimmed the margin to the final total of 11.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Cincinnati's Pete Rose, finding his salary demands unmet by his employers of 17 years, told the Reds' management, "I'm going to prove to you that I'm worth what I'm asking."

The Reds captain and veteran third baseman, an all-star many times, is reportedly seeking $400,000 a year, more than double his 1976 salary.

Rose's announcement was prompted by the club's renewal of his contract as well as those of Dave Concepcion, Rawly Eastwick, Gary Nolan and Pat Darcy. Those who don't sign by October will become free agents.

Pressure gets to Orr

Michigan heads into today's first-round NCAA Play-off game vs. Holy Cross with a good shot at the national title. If the top-ranked Wolverines win it, coach Johnny Orr may step down.

Orr, in his ninth year at Ann Arbor, cites the pressure he puts on himself, not any administered by alumni or media.

"The pressure comes from yourself, the fact that you want to do so well—the self-pride—when you're rated up there and people think highly of you. Being on national television, that's the pressure."

Dolphin friend convicted

Jay Lance Cooper, who associated with coach Don Shula and some Miami Dolphins, was sentenced to two years probation and a $1500 fine for gambling-related offenses.

Earlier, the National Football League absolved Shula or any of the Dolphins of illegal relations with Cooper.

Player sentenced—to college

John Sheffield will be able to attend North Carolina Central University on a football scholarship next fall—thanks to a reduced sentence on an armed robbery conviction.

Sherfield, a linebacker and tight end in high school, could have received up to ten years for the crime, but Roanoke (Va.) Circuit Court Judge Jack Coulter shortened the sentence on the condition that Sheffield give talks to football teams at local high schools and junior highs.

Is Cuba ready for Finley?

Charlie Finley's controversy of the week revolves around a proposed journey by his A's to Cuba.

The insolent owner says that someone, rumored to be businessman Donald Saldini of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., has approached him about sending the Oakland team into Fidel Castro country for games April 2-3.

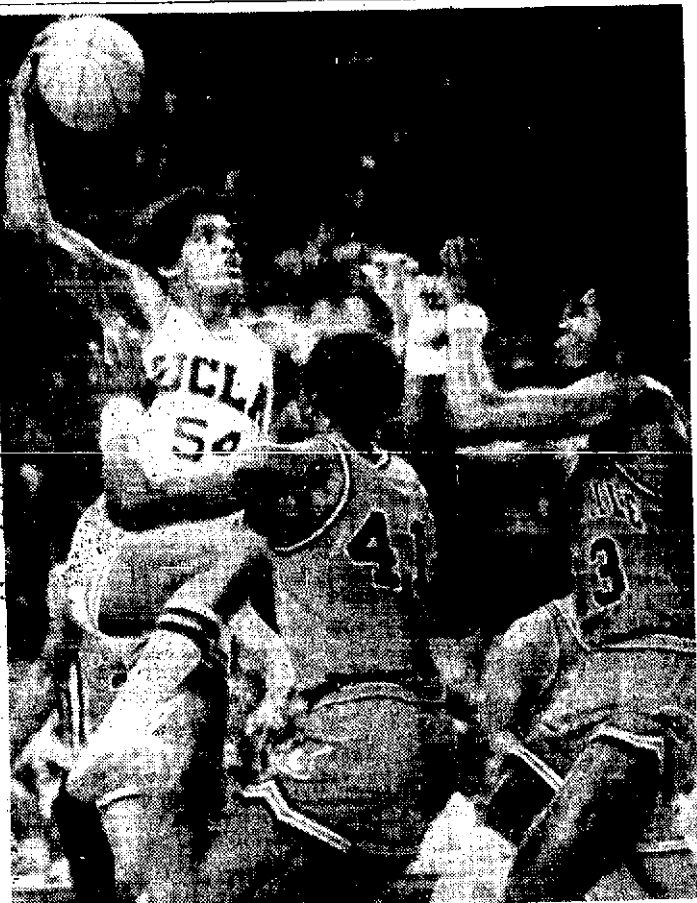

"I don't think Bowie Kuhn has the right to stop me," added Charlie O. of his sparring partner who doubles as the baseball commissioner. Kuhn prefers to send an all-star team to Cuba.

Motor sports briefs

DAYTONA BEACH—The race format for today's 30th running of the Daytona 200 motorcycle road race has been altered, at the request of riders and tire companies, in the interest of safety. Instead of 200 miles of non-stop racing, the $102,800 event will be run in two 100-mile legs with a one-hour recess in between. The switch was necessitated by an increase in horsepower among the leading teams. Riders like pole-sitter Steve Baker of Bellingham, Wash., are experiencing tire spin through fourth gear when they exit the turns on the road course.

On Saturday, Baker won the 100-mile 250cc lightweight combined race on a Yamaha, beating Japan's Takazumi Katayama by 25 seconds. He averaged 99.890 mph. Last year's winner, Kenny Roberts of Modesto, retired when his Yamaha's rear suspension broke.

ROCKINGHAM, N.C.—Donnie Allison in a Chevrolet and Richard Petty in a Dodge hold the front row starting positions for today's Carolina 500 Grand National stock car race. The $146,000 event is a make-up of the race postponed by rain last week.

Holland then broke Louisville's spirit by scoring on a layin off a long pass from freshman Kiki Vandeweghe as he was being fouled. Holland also made the free throw for a 79-73 UCLA lead with 3:21 remaining.

Louisville managed to get within four, 81-77, with 1:46 left, but Spillane hit a pair of free throws at 0:52 and Holland scored from underneath at 0:28 to secure the victory.

Holland was surprised he played.

"I really didn't expect to play," he said. "I hadn't played in the first half, and I had a cold and a headache and I didn't think I'd get in the game."

BARTOW'S instructions were simple.

"He told me to play good defense and take my shot if I had it."

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Cincinnati's Pete Rose, finding his salary demands unmet by his employers of 17 years, told the Reds' management, "I'm going to prove to you that I'm worth what I'm asking."

The Reds captain and veteran third baseman, an all-star many times, is reportedly seeking $400,000 a year, more than double his 1976 salary.

Rose's announcement was prompted by the club's renewal of his contract as well as those of Dave Concepcion, Rawly Eastwick, Gary Nolan and Pat Darcy. Those who don't sign by October will become free agents.

Pressure gets to Orr

Michigan heads into today's first-round NCAA Playoff game vs. Holy Cross with a good shot at the national title. If the top-ranked Wolverines win it, coach Johnny Orr may step down.

Orr, in his ninth year at Ann Arbor, cites the pressure he puts on himself, not any administered by alumni or media.

"The pressure comes from yourself, the fact that you want to do so well—the self-pride—when you're rated up there and people think highly of you. Being on national television, that's the pressure."

Dolphin friend convicted

Jay Lance Cooper, who associated with coach Don Shula and some Miami Dolphins, was sentenced to two years probation and a $1500 fine for gambling-related offenses.

Earlier, the National Football League absolved Shula or any of the Dolphins of illegal relations with Cooper.

Player sentenced—to college

John Sherfield will be able to attend North Carolina Central University on a football scholarship next fall—thanks to a reduced sentence on an armed robbery conviction.

Sherfield, a linebacker and tight end in high school, could have received up to ten years for the crime, but Roanoke (Va.) Circuit Court Judge Jack Coulter shortened the sentence on the condition that Sherfield give talks to football teams at local high schools and junior highs.

Is Cuba ready for Finley?

Charlie Finley's controversy of the week revolves around a proposed journey by his A's to Cuba.

The insolent owner says that someone, rumored to be businessman Donald Saldini of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., has approached him about sending the Oakland team into Fidel Castro country for games April 2-3.

"I don't think Bowie Kuhn has the right to stop me," added Charlie O. of his sparring partner who doubles as the baseball commissioner. Kuhn prefers to send an all-star team to Cuba.

Motor sports briefs

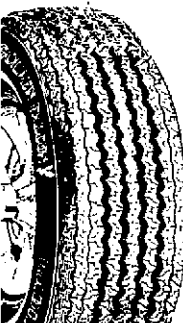

DAYTONA BEACH—The race format for today's 36th running of the Daytona 200 motorcycle road race has been altered, at the request of riders and tire companies, in the interest of safety. Instead of 200 miles of non-stop racing, the $102,800 event will be run in two 100-mile legs with a one-hour recess in between. The switch was necessitated by an increase in horsepower among the leading teams. Riders like pole-sitter Steve Baker of Bellingham, Wash., are experiencing tire spin through fourth gear when they exit the turns on the road course.

On Saturday, Baker won the 100-mile 250cc lightweight combined race on a Yamaha, beating Japan's Takazumi Katayama by 25 seconds. He averaged 98.890 mph. Last year's winner, Kenney Roberts of Modesto, retired when his Yamaha's rear suspension broke.

ROCKINGHAM, N.C.—Donnie Allison in a Chevrolet and Richard Petty in a Dodge hold the front row starting positions for today's Carolina 500 Grand National stock car race. The $140,000 event is a make-up of the race postponed by rain last week.

Samoa's sultan of swat Solaita eyes spot in Angel arsenal

By TRACY RINGOLSBY
Staff Writer

PALM SPRINGS—For more than a year, Angel general manager Harry Dalton tried to swing a deal with the Kansas City Royals to obtain Tony Solaita.

Try as he might, Dalton kept coming up empty handed. The Royals, even though Solaita was riding the bench behind John Mayberry, were unwilling to part with the Samoan Strongboy.

Last summer, however, the Royals were in a jam. Their pitching corps was depleted and they needed to find a starting pitcher. Royals' manager Whitey Herzog knew Andy Hassler had been struggling with the Angels but felt Hassler had the potential to be a major league winner if given the proper support.

The Royals approached the Angels about the possibility of acquiring Hassler but the trading deadline had passed. Finally the Angels agreed to put the lefthanded Texan on waivers with the remainder that they would expect a favor in return—Solaita. The Royals obliged by putting the powerful lefthander on waivers.

"I guess they figured Solaita wasn't in their plans for the future and they had to make room for Andy," said Dalton, careful to make sure he doesn't get into any trouble by referring to the waiver transaction as a trade. "We had been trying to get him for awhile. We liked him because of his power and we always figured he might be available because he was buried behind Mayberry."

The Angels were happy about the deal but no one was as excited as Solaita. He knew the trade would give him a chance to play and, even more important, he was anxious to return to the West Coast. The cold and humid days of Kansas City were not what he had grown accustomed to growing up in Samoa and Hawaii.

"Nothing could have been more perfect for me," said Solaita. "I got a chance to go out every day and prove I could play in the major leagues and I also was close to my family."

Solaita played in only 63 games for the Angels but during that time hit .270 and had nine home runs—second on the club to Bobby Bonds, who had 10 before being injured and missing the final 63 games of the year.

With a full season as an Angel ahead of him, manager Norm Sherry feels the 6-0, 215-pounder can provide the Angels with more than 20 home runs. The biggest obstacle fac-

Rich Rivera pitched five and one-third innings of two-hit relief to pace Long Beach City College to an 8-5 triumph over host Valley Saturday.

A three-run rally in the ninth inning gave Rivera his first Metropolitan Conference win and improved the Vikings' marks to 5-1 and 12-2 overall.

In the final frame, Pat Estes collected his fourth hit to lead off and went to third on a single by Dan Gausephol. Three walks by Valley forced across a pair of runs before a wild pitch allowed the eighth tally.

ing Solaita is lefthanded pitching. With the Angels last year all nine of Solaita's home runs came against righthanders and his average was less than .200 off southpaw pitchers. Solaita says his problem was a simple matter of not getting a chance to hit against lefthanders in his three seasons with the Royals.

At Kansas City he was solely a designated hitter and pinch-hitter, almost exclusively against right-handed pitching.

"After sitting around three years and not getting a chance to play against lefthanders it was rough," said Solaita. "It was a completely different situation."

To alleviate the problem, Solaita packed his bags and headed for Puerto Rico the past winter. The work evidently paid off. He hit 11 home runs during the winter and seven came against lefthanders, including two off Mike Cuellar and one off Luis Quintana, teammates of his with the Angels.

Felding is one thing Solaita has no concern about. His has quickness and mobility unmatched by most men his size.

"He has good hands and makes plays most first basemen don't even look at," said Sherry. "On a bunt, he's not afraid to come up throwing to second base while other guys just go for the easy one." So far this spring, Solaita has not been overly impressive at the plate. He has only one hit in eight at bats but he's not concerned.

"All I want to do this spring is get in shape and be ready by the opener in Seattle," said Solaita.

ANGEL ANGLES: The Angels won their second straight spring game Saturday, 6-2 over Milwaukee with the Brewers only runs coming on a two-run home run by Sal Bando in the sixth. After giving up three runs in three innings his first time out this year Angels' lefthander Frank Tanana showed his old form Saturday. He allowed just one hit in three innings. Jerry Remy continued to swing the bat well. Remy, who has hit safely in all five spring games, had two hits including a double in four at bats. Bobby Bonds and Joe Rudi had a pair of hits too. The injury bug continues to plague the Angels. Bobby Grich was to have been in camp Saturday but his appearance was delayed a week. He was released from St. Joseph's Hospital in Orange Saturday but will undergo a conditioning program at his Long Beach home this week while the Angels are in Arizona. He will join the team in Palm Springs next weekend. Righthander Paul Hartzell, considered the team's No. 3 starter, was lost for five to seven days Saturday when he strained a ligament in his right shoulder. Sid Monge is penciled in as the second pitcher today (Nolan Ryan will start against the Brewers) but his status is in doubt. He went home to San Diego Saturday to be with his mother, who suffered a heart attack.

Dodgers held to two singles, but win, 1-0

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — After blasting four home runs to beat the Boston Red Sox Friday, the Dodgers were restricted to two singles Saturday by the Atlanta Braves — yet still won their second successive exhibition game, 1-0.

Playing primarily rookies, the Dodgers were held hitless for seven innings by the Braves' Frank LaCorte and Mike Beard. They got the game's only run in the eighth on a walk to Joe Simpson, hit-and-run single by Pedro Guerrero and an infield out by Randy Rogers.

Tommy John and two rookie righthanders, Rick Sutcliffe and Rex Hudson, permitted only four Atlanta hits, all singles. John turned an ankle in the second inning chasing an infield single by Jeff Burroughs. He remained in the game for three innings, then soaked the ankle.

John allowed just two hits, Sutcliffe and Hudson one each. But Hudson had to survive threats in the eighth and ninth innings.

Dave Lopes and Dusty Baker were the only regulars besides John to make the trip and only Lopes got into the game.

The Dodgers and Braves meet again today at Dodgerstown (Channel 11, 10:30 a.m.) with Don Sutton starting against Atlanta's Jamie Easterly.

Dodgers held to two singles, but win, 1-0

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla.—After blasting four home runs to beat the Boston Red Sox Friday, the Dodgers were restricted to two singles Saturday by the Atlanta Braves—yet still won their second successive exhibition game, 1-0.

Playing primarily rookies, the Dodgers were held hitless for seven innings by the Braves' Frank LaCorte and Mike Beard. They got the game's only run in the eighth on a walk to Joe Simpson, hit-and-run single by Pedro Guerrero and an infield out by Randy Rogers.

Tommy John and two rookie righthanders, Rick Sutcliffe and Rex Hudson, permitted only four Atlanta hits, all singles.

The second inning chasing an infield single by Jeff Burroughs. He remained in the game for three innings, then soaked the ankle.

John allowed just two hits, Sutcliffe and Hudson one each. But Hudson had to survive threats in the eighth and ninth innings.

Dave Lopes and Dusty Baker were the only regulars besides John to make the trip and only Lopes got into the game.

The Dodgers and Braves meet again today at Dodgertown (Channel 11, 10:30 a.m.) with Don Sutton starting against Atlanta's Jamie Easterly.

L.B. Junior Tennis lures 1,132

By BOB MARTIN
Staff Writer

From all over Southern California they came — and even from Texas (one girl), Mexico (two boys) and Las Vegas (eight boys and girls).

And they brought their rackets with them, for they were in town Saturday for the start of the annual Long Beach Junior Tennis Championships.

The survivors of first-round matches will be in action again today, as competition continues from 7:45 a.m. to dusk at the Lakewood Country Club Tennis Center, Long Beach City College, El Dorado Park in Long Beach and the county's regional park in La Mirada.

There were a record 1,132 entries, even though doubles was dropped this year for the first time in the 21-year history of the tournament because the meet is growing so large.

Ben Cariaga, who is directing the meet for the County Department of Parks and Recreation, announced that it will be extended to three weekends from the scheduled two. Saturday, 676 matches were run off, with 587 scheduled today.

Among the entries are some of the brightest young net stars in America. Fourteen-year-old Tracy Austin of Rolling Hills, the most widely publicized young girl player since Chris Evert, is entered in the 18-and-under division, where she is seeded second behind Lea Antonopolis of Glendora.

Play in the Girls 18s doesn't start until today and, since Tracy drew a first-round bye, she isn't scheduled to play until next Saturday.

Robert Van't Hof of Downey, a U.S. Junior Davis Cup player, heads the seedings in the Boys 18-and-under event.

Two Long Beach youngsters — Carol Heynen and Brad Ackerman — are seeded second in their respective divisions. Carol, though eligible for the 12s, is competing in the Girls 14s, and Brad is in the Boys 12s.

Ritger wins 18th bowling crown

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. (AP) — Top-seeded Dick Ritger of River Falls, Wis., defeated Pete Couture of Windsor, Conn., 227-196 Saturday in the championship match of the $100,000 Pro Classic bowling tournament at Garden City Bowl.

Ritger earned $14,000 for his 18th Professional Bowlers Association title in 13 years on the tour.

Connors wins; U.S. clinches World Cup

HARTFORD (AP) — Jimmy Connors won his second straight-sets victory in as many days with a spectacular come from behind effort Saturday, defeating Australian Tony Roche, 6-4, 7-5, and clinching the World Cup Tennis trophy for the United States.

Connors, ranked second for the event, broke Roche's serve twice in the first set and lost his serve to Roche once as each player remained almost exclusively at the base lines trading long volleys.

The victory gave America a 4-0 lead in the best-of-seven contest. It is the third time in eight years America has won the cup. Connors made his World Cup debut last year when he won both of his matches, including the one that gave the United States its first victory since 1971.

Connors had put the United States ahead 2-0 Friday night by defeating Aussie John Alexander. Brian Gottfried made it 3-0 with a singles victory over Ross Case. In a battle of the top seeds from each country on Thursday night, Dick Stockton won the first point for America by defeating Roche.

Connors, ranked second for the event, broke Roche's serve twice in the first set and lost his serve to Roche once as each player remained almost exclusively at the base lines trading long volleys.

The victory gave America a 4-0 lead in the best-of-seven contest. It is

From all over Southern California they came — and even from Texas (one girl), Mexico (two boys) and Las Vegas (eight boys and girls).

And they brought their rackets with them, for they were in town Saturday for the start of the annual Long Beach Junior Tennis Championships.

The survivors of first-round matches will be in action again today, as competition continues from 7:45 a.m. to dusk at the Lakewood Country

Club Tennis Center, Long Beach City College, El Dorado Park in Long Beach and the county's regional park in La Mirada.

There were a record 1,132 entries, even though doubles was dropped this year for the first time in the 21-year history of the tournament because the meet is growing so large.

Ben Carliaga, who is directing the meet for the County Department of Parks and Recreation, announced that it will be extended to three weekends from the scheduled two. Saturday, 676 matches were run off, with 567 scheduled today.

Among the entries are some of the brightest young net stars in America. Fourteen-year-old Tracy Austin of Rolling Hills, the most widely publicized young girl player since Chris Evert, is entered in the 18-and-under division, where she is seeded second behind Lea Antonopolis of Glendora.

Play in the Girls 18s doesn't start until today and, since Tracy drew a first-round bye, she isn't scheduled to play until next Saturday.

Robert Van't Hof of Downey, a U.S. Junior Davis Cup player, heads the seedings in the Boys 18-and-under event.

Two Long Beach youngsters — Carl Heynen and Brad Ackerman — are seeded second in their respective divisions. Carl, though eligible for the 12s, is competing in the Girls 14s, and Brad is in the Boys 12s.

Connors wins; U.S. clinches World Cup

HARTFORD (AP) — Jimmy Connors won his second straight-sets victory in as many days with a spectacular come from behind effort Saturday, defeating Australian Tony Roche, 6-4, 7-5, and clinching the World Cup Tennis trophy for the United States.

Connors, ranked second for the event, broke Roche's serve twice in the first set and lost his serve to Roche once as each player remained almost exclusively at the base lines trading long volleys.

The victory gave America a 4-0 lead in the best-of-seven contest. It is the third time in eight years America has won the cup. Connors made his World Cup debut last year when he won both of his matches, including the one that gave the United States its first victory since 1971.

Connors had put the United States ahead 2-0 Friday night by defeating Aussie John Alexander. Brian Gottfried made it 3-0 with a singles victory over Ross Case. In a battle of the top seeds from each country on Thursday night, Dick Stockton won the first point for America by defeating Roche.

LBCC gymnasts enter AIWA Regionals in Reno

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

Long Beach City College gymnastics team will leave Wednesday for the AIWA Regionals at the University of Nevada-Reno. Coached by Peggy Stoll, Long Beach is the only community college team to reach the mark of 124.00 needed to qualify for competition.

The Vikings earned a score of 125.5 at the recent league finals where they retained the championship for the eighth consecutive year. "Everybody did a good job for us," said Peggy, whose team was recovering from the flu and injuries.

A stunning performance by Jean Teisser set two LBCC records. Jean took first in all-around with a record 35.2 and won on the balance beam with 8.3, on the bars (9.2, her other record) and vault (9.05). She was second in floor exercise.

Susie Rapp was third on the beam with 7.8, and Gaye Wilson placed third in all-around with 32.5 and on the vault with 8.5.

"We are aiming for the top five at the regionals," said Peggy. The LBCC coach expects Fullerton State to win the meet and capture the bid to the nationals, followed by USC, UCLA and San Diego State.

Jean hopes to be among the top 24 girls to qualify in the all-around for nationals. "A score of 34.00 is needed," said Peggy, "and she's been over that all year."

THIS HAS been a year of firsts for the Lakewood High School basketball team. New to CIF competition, the Lancers also have a new coach, Cathy Allars, who was at Jefferson Junior High last year.

WOMEN IN SPORTS

"There is quite a bit of interest in basketball here," said Cathy, who had approximately 35 students turn out for the sport this winter. Finishing at the bottom of the Eaton League last year, Lakewood hopes to move up in the Moore League. Lack of experience is the biggest problem facing the Lancers, said Cathy.

Carol Heaton, a 5-10 junior center, is the one holdover from the 1976 squad. "She is one of the best players on the team and the leading rebounder," added Cathy.

Former JVs are two senior guards, Karen McVicar and Melinda Pritchard, the leading scorers, averaging 13 points a game. Newcomers on the roster are Nancy Hogan, 5-9 forward and "one of the best rebounders on the team," Sheila Kalman, "an excellent shooter," and Julie Herrera, a backup center who is showing improvement off the boards. Others are Bridget Babi, a sophomore guard who has promising shooting ability; Elena Berumen and Karen Plunkett, both at the guard position, and Deana Johnson and Michelle Mazure, forwards.

BACK AND swimming better than ever is Mary Hammond, the LBCC athlete who wrote several records in the Viking book last year. Mary won the three events she entered in the opening meet against Fullerton Thursday with times that bettered or were close to her best last season. Mary finished the 50-butterfly in 27.6; 50-free in 26.7 and the 100-butterfly in 106.9. A freshman, Peggy Lewis from Poly High "looks good," said coach Marti Gunning. She only entered one event Thursday, the 500-free style and beat the second-place finisher by 10 seconds with a 6:28.8. Marti has a good turnout for the team this year, with about half participating in competition for the first time. She reported that Mary was selected all-America in several events among California Community College swimmers last year.

LONG BEACH City College road volleyball team swept by Rio Hondo Monday and Glendale Wednesday. The Vikings double A's took three games to win the Rio Hondo match, 15-5, 13-15, 15-8. The single A's did it in two, 15-8, 15-12. Glendale's double A's fell, 15-2, 15-5, and single A's, 15-12, 15-12. Coach Marilyn Tom selected Floyd Jones as the outstanding offensive player for the double A's and Joanne Litter as the outstanding single A player against Glendale.

CHAFFEY edged the LBCC softball team, 1-0, Monday with the Vikings showing fine defensive play. Pitcher Kathy Kellis fanned seven with Joan McLean going two for three and providing the only hits of the day. Dawn Wiley stole two bases and saved a run with a fine throw to the plate. Offensively the Vikings were stronger against the tough Golden West team Wednesday but errors cost them a 11-3 loss. Joan was two for three with one RBI. She is leading the team in batting with .300. Toni Bell, who was one for three, had an RBI and played her best defensive game at third base, said Dunn.

Barbara Reinalda hurled a one-hitter, the Falcons stole 11 bases as a team and the opposition issued 11 walks as the Cerritos softball team rolled to an easy 8-0 victory over San Bernardino Valley in the Coast League opener. Reinalda, boasting a perfect 3-0 record on the year, faced 19 San Bernardino batters, yielding only one single, no walks and earning nine strikeouts.

Kings take on Boston in TV contest

BOSTON (Special)—The Kings will have a tough time topping John Ferguson's act when they battle the Boston Bruins today in a NHL match that Channel 5 will televise at 4:30.

Ferguson scored without trying. The trouble is Ferguson is the hockey coach of the New York Rangers, not a player, and instead of putting the puck in the net, he bounced a plastic water bottle off a game official's head.

Ferguson admitted he threw the bottle that hit linesman Swede Knox during Thursday's game at Boston, "but I wasn't aiming at him."

However, the misdirected bottle did not get Ferguson in as much trouble as a remark which hit its target. The coach called referee Bob Myers "rabbit ears," and he was sent to the dressing room, where he was joined later by his players who were trounced 10-3 by the Bruins.

Boston has won six successive games and is within one point of first-place Buffalo in the Adams Division.

But the Kings have been on fire, too.
Coach Bob Pulford's skaters are 8-1-2 in their last 11 starts and are engaged in a torrid battle with Pittsburgh for second spot in the Norris Division.

L.B. Junior Tennis lures 1,132

By BOB MARTIN
Staff Writer

From all over Southern California they came — and even from Texas (one girl), Mexico (two boys) and Las Vegas (eight boys and girls).

And they brought their rackets with them, for they were in town Saturday for the start of the annual Long Beach Junior Tennis Championships.

The survivors of first-round matches will be in action again today, as competition continues from 7:45 a.m. to dusk at the Lakewood Country

Club Tennis Center, Long Beach City College, El Dorado Park in Long Beach and the county's regional park in La Mirada.

There were a record 1,132 entries, even though doubles was dropped this year for the first time in the 21-year history of the tournament because the meet is growing so large.

Ben Cariaga, who is directing the meet for the County Department of Parks and Recreation, announced that it will be extended to three weekends from the scheduled two. Saturday, 676 matches were run off, with 567 scheduled today.

Among the entries are some of the brightest young net stars in America. Fourteen-year-old Tracy Austin of Rolling Hills, the most widely publicized young girl player since Chris Evert, is entered in the 18-and-under division, where she is seeded second behind Lea Antonopolis of Glendora.

Play in the Girls 18s doesn't start until today and, since Tracy drew a first-round bye, she isn't scheduled to play until next Saturday.

Robert Van't Hof of Downey, a U.S. Junior Davis Cup player, heads the seedings in the Boys 18-and-under event.

Two Long Beach youngsters — Carol Heynen and Brad Ackerman — are seeded second in their respective divisions. Carol, though eligible for the 12s, is competing in the Girls 14s, and Brad is in the Boys 12s.

Ritger wins 18th bowling crown

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. (AP) — Top-seeded Dick Ritger of River Falls, Wis., defeated Pete Couture of Windsor, Conn., 227-196 Saturday in the championship match of the $100,000 Pro Classic bowling tournament at Garden City Bowl.

Ritger earned $14,000 for his 18th Professional Bowlers Association title in 13 years on the tour.

Connors wins; U.S. clinches World Cup

HARTFORD (AP) — Jimmy Connors won his second straight-sets victory in as many days with a spectacular come from behind effort Saturday, defeating Australian Tony Roche, 6-1, 7-5, and clinching the World Cup Tennis trophy for the United States.

Connors, ranked second for the event, broke Roche's serve twice in the first set and lost his serve to Roche once as each player remained almost exclusively at the base lines trading long volleys.

The victory gave America a 4-0 lead in the best-of-seven contest. It is the third time in eight years America has won the cup. Connors made his World Cup debut last year when he won both of his matches, including the one that gave the United States its first victory since 1971.

Connors had put the United States ahead 2-0 Friday night by defeating Aussie John Alexander. Brian Gottfried made it 3-0 with a singles victory over Ross Case. In a battle of the top seeds from each country on Thursday night, Dick Stockton won the first point for America by defeating Roche.

LBCC gymnasts enter AIWA Regionals in Reno

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

Long Beach City College gymnastics team will leave Wednesday for the AIWA Regionals at the University of Nevada-Reno. Coached by Peggy Stoll, Long Beach is the only only community college team to reach the mark of 124.00 needed to qualify for competition.

The Vikings earned a score of 125.5 at the recent league finals where they retained the championship for the eighth consecutive year. "Everybody did a good job for us," said Peggy, whose team was recovering from the flu and injuries.

A stunning performance by Jean Teissere set two LBCC records. Jean took first in all-around with a record 35.2 and won on the balance beam with 8.3, on the bars (9.2, her other record) and vault (9.05). She was second in floor exercise.

Susie Rapp was third on the beam with 7.8, and Gaye Wilson placed third in all-around with 32.5 and on the vault with 8.5.

"We are aiming for the top five at the regionals," said Peggy. The LBCC coach expects Fullerton State to win the meet and capture the bid to the nationals, followed by USC, UCLA and San Diego State.

Jean hopes to be among the top 24 girls to qualify in the all-around for nationals. "A score of 34.00

Kings take on Boston in TV contest

BOSTON (Special)—The Kings will have a tough time topping John Ferguson's act when they battle the Boston Bruins today in a NHL match that Channel 5 will televise at 4:30.

Ferguson scored without trying. The trouble is Ferguson is the hockey coach of the New York Rangers, not a player...and instead of putting the puck in the net, he bounced a plastic water bottle off a game official's head.

Ferguson admitted he threw the bottle that hit linesman Swede Knox during Thursday's game at Boston, "but I wasn't aiming at him."

However, the misdirected bottle did not get Ferguson in as much trouble as a remark which hit its target. The coach called referee Bob Myers "rabbit ears," and he was sent to the dressing room, where he was joined later by his players who were trounced 10-3 by the Bruins.

Boston has won six successive games and is within one point of first-place Buffalo in the Adams Division.

But the Kings have been on fire, too.

Coach Bob Pulford's skaters are 8-1-2 in their last 11 starts and are engaged in a torrid battle with Pittsburgh for second spot in the Norris Division.

team, New to CIF competition, the Lancers also have a new coach, Cathy Allars, who was at Jefferson Junior High last year.

"There is quite a bit of interest in basketball here," said Cathy, who had approximately 35 students turn out for the sport this winter. Finishing at the bottom of the Eaton League last year, Lakewood hopes to move up in the Moore League.

Lack of experience is the biggest problem facing the Lancers, said Cathy.

Carol Heaton, a 5-10 junior center, is the one holdover from the 1976 squad. "She is one of the best players on the team and the leading rebounder," added Cathy.

Former JV's are two senior guards, Karen McVicar and Melody Pritchard, the leading scorers, averaging 13 points a game...Newcomers on the roster are Nancy Hogan, 5-9 forward and "one of the best rebounders on the team," Shirla Kalman, "an excellent shooter," and Julie Herrera, a backup center who is showing improvement off the boards...Others are Bridget Babl, a sophomore guard who has promising shooting ability; Elena Berumen and Karen Phunkett, both at the guard position, and Deza Johnson and Michelle Mazure, forwards.

BACK AND swimming better than ever is Mary Hammond, the LBCC athlete who wrote several records in the Viking book last year. Mary won the three events she entered in the opening meet against Fullerton Thursday with times that bettered or were close to her best last season...Mary finished the 50-butterfly in 27.5; 50-free in 26.7 and the 100-butterfly in 1:00.9...A freshman, Peggy Lewis from Poly High "looks good," said coach Marti Gunning. She only entered one event Thursday, the 500-free-style and beat the second-place finisher by 10 seconds with a 6:28.8...Marti has a good turnout for the team this year, with about half participating in competition for the first time...She reported that Mary was selected all-America in several events among California Community College swimmers last year.

LONG BEACH City College coed volleyball team swept by Rio Hondo Monday and Glendale Wednesday. The Vikings double A's took three games to win the Rio Hondo match, 15-5, 13-15, 15-8. The single A's did it in two, 15-8, 15-8...Glendale's double A's fell, 15-2, 15-3, and single A's, 15-12, 15-12. Coach Marilyn Tom selected Floyd Jones as the outstanding offensive player for the double A's and Jeannine Limer as the outstanding single A player against Glendale.

CHAFFEY edged the LBCC softball team, 1-0, Monday with the Vikings showing fine defensive play. Pitcher Kathy Kellis fanned seven with Joan McLean going two for three and providing the only hits of the day. Dana Wiley stole two bases and saved a run

Star Ball Santa Anita winner

Star Ball made a sharp left turn as she headed for home, grabbed the rail and rallied boldly to win the $57,650 Santa Anita Handicap at Santa Anita Park, thrilling a Saturday crowd of 33,272 with a $14.20 win payoff.

The 5-year-old daughter of Snow Ball was running only fifth in the field of 12 when she began to make the final turn for home. Suddenly, jockey Fernando Toro spotted a hole along the rail and he asked his mount to respond.

She did, taking command as the pace-setting Winter Solstice began to drift out and fade.

In the final furlong, Star Ball pulled ahead of Swingtime and won by better than two lengths to collect the first prize of $35,150.

The Argentine-bred Star Ball, carrying 118 pounds, raced 1 1/4 miles in 1:46 1/2 and paid $6 to place and $4.00 to show. Favored Swingtime, with Bill Shoemaker in the saddle, paid $3.20 and $2.40. Charger's Star paid $3.60 to show.

"I was in no hurry with her," said Toro, who only 24 hours earlier suffered abdominal pains in a spill. X rays proved negative, however, and he was back riding Saturday.

"I just followed Shoemaker through to the top of the stretch. I knew the filly on the lead (Winter Solstice) would probably drift out, so I waited for the rail to open up."

It was at that same moment, when the rail opened for Star Ball, that Shoemaker was forced wide by the drifting Winter Solstice, "and that made the difference," said Shoemaker.

Winter Solstice ran fifth, two positions ahead of Bastonera II, second best mare in the United States in national polling last year.

TEXT heads a field of five stakes winners in today's final major prep for the rich Santa Anita Derby, the $55,350 San Felipe Handicap. Crystal Water, last year's winner of the 1-1/16 mile San Felipe, last weekend captured the Santa Anita Handicap in track record time.

Text, a Kentucky-bred son of Speak John, first gained national prominence when he finished second in a division of the Arch Ward Stakes, steppingstone to the prestigious Arlington-Washington Futurity. Following a runnerup finish to stablemate Replant in the Los Feliz Stakes at Santa Anita Park in January, he captured the Santa Catalina Stakes a month later under today's impost of 118 pounds. Don Pierce will again ride the chestnut colt.

Heading the opposition is Habington, hero of the $100,000 Norfolk Stakes last fall. In his only outing since that impressive score, the Irish-bred finished fourth in the 7-furlong San Vicente Stakes.

Star Ball Santa Anita winner

Star Ball made a sharp left turn as she headed for home, grabbed the rail and rallied boldly to win the $55,500 Santa Gertrudes Handicap at Santa Anita Park, thrilling a Saturday crowd of 33,272 with a $14.20 win payoff.

The 5-year-old daughter of Snow Ball was running only fifth in the field of 12 when she began to make the final turn for home. Suddenly, jockey Fernando Toro spotted a hole along the rail and he asked his mount to respond.

She did, taking command as the pace-setting Winter Solstice began to drift out and fade.

In the final furlong, Star Ball pulled ahead of Swingtime and won by better than two lengths to collect the first prize of $55,500.

The Argentine-bred Star Ball, carrying 118 pounds, raced 1 1/4 miles in 1:46 1/2 and paid $6 to place and $10 to show. Favored Swingtime, with Bill Shoemaker in the saddle, paid $3.20 and $2.40. Charge's Star paid $3.60 to show.

"I was in no hurry with her," said Toro, who only 24 hours earlier suffered abdominal pains in a spill. X rays proved negative, however, and he was back riding Saturday.

"I just followed Shoemaker through to the top of the stretch. I knew the filly on the lead (Winter Solstice) would probably drift out, so I waited for the rail to open up."

It was at that same moment, when the rail opened for Star Ball, that Shoemaker was forced wide by the drifting Winter Solstice, "and that made the difference," said Shoemaker.

Winter Solstice ran fifth, two positions ahead of Bastonera II, second best mare in the United States in national polling last year.

TEXT heads a field of five stakes winners in today's final major prep for the rich Santa Anita Derby, the $55,350 San Felipe Handicap. Crystal Water, last year's winner of the 1-1/16 mile San Felipe, last weekend captured the Santa Anita Handicap in track record time.

Text, a Kentucky-bred son of Speak John, first gained national prominence when he finished second in a division of the Arch Ward Stakes, steppingstone to the prestigious Arlington-Washington Futurity. Following a runnerup finish to stablemate Replant in the Los Feliz Stakes at Santa Anita Park in January, he captured the Santa Catalina Stakes a month later under today's impost of 118 pounds. Don Pierce will again ride the chestnut colt.

Heading the opposition is Habitony, hero of the $100,000 Norfolk Stakes last fall. In his only outing since that impressive score, the Irish-bred finished fourth in the 7-furlong San Vicente Stakes.

Klammer finishes 5th in downhill; U.S. girl hurt

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE (AP) — Austrian teammate Josef Walcher won the men's downhill ski race Saturday at Heavenly Valley ski resort while Olympic gold medalist Franz Klammer saw his chances of moving into the World Cup lead dashed when he finished a disappointing fifth.

U.S. race roundup

HALEAH — Strike Me Lucky got the lead on the first turn and held it to win the $60,000 Seminole Handicap by 1 1/2 lengths over Get Permission and 3 1/2 lengths over Yamania. Strike Me Lucky ran the 1 1/4 miles in 1:47 1/2. The 3-2 betting favorite among 16,706 fans, he paid $5, $3.40 and $2.60. Get Permission returned $2.20 and $2.80 and 8-5 second pick Yamania paid $2.20. Strike Me Lucky was running claiming races at Calder last year until he finished third, beaten less than a length, in the Jan. 14 Silverman Handicap. After winning an allowance race at Gulfstream, he was supplemented to the $100,000-added Gulfstream Handicap Feb. 26 and scored an upset victory at 11-1. He earned $46,015 in 1976 and has banked $138,385 in four starts this year.

AQUEDUCT — Hunch turned the $3,850 Swift Stakes into a sure thing about halfway through the race, galloping home a four-length winner in the first of New York's four Kentucky Derby preps. Only two Derby nominees were in the field of seven 3-year-olds and Hunch was not one of them. Silk Heriz was second, one length ahead of Derby nominee Catalan. Hunch was timed in 1:09 1/5 and paid $4, $3.60 and $2.60.

Klammer, with tears in his eyes, admitted that he had no chance to catch defending champion Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden. It was the worst downhill finish of the year for Klammer, who had won six of the eight previous downhill races this season.

The women's race was marred by critical head injuries to American skier Sheila McKinney. The 18-year-old from Squaw Valley was transferred by snow cat and ambulance to Barton Memorial Hospital. A hospital spokesman said her condition was such that "it could go either way," but he said surgery was not immediately planned.

McKinney was going about 55 mph when her skis released on some S-curves and she hurtled into hay bales lining the course. The hospital said she sustained a severe concussion and cerebral contusions and remained unconscious two hours after the incident. Her vital signs were said to be stable.

WOMEN'S DOWNHILL — 1. Brigitte Habersatter (Austria), 1 minute, 11.00 seconds; 2. Evi Mittermaier (West Germany), 1:11.55; 3. Doris Goss (Switzerland), 1:12.40; 4. Aqueduct longest fishway in world

In this year of the great California drought, fresh-water anglers may be forgetting that the state has the longest fishing hole in the world—the California Aqueduct, a 343-mile stretch of man-made river in a concrete channel. It starts at the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta, flows southward along the west side of San Joaquin Valley, takes a leap over the Tehachapi Mountains into Southern California and splits into two branches at the southern end of the mountains to form the east and west channels.

Because of the drought, the west branch already has been cut off, which means that no water will be flowing into Pyramid and Castaic Lakes. The eastern fork, however, curves through Antelope Valley and ends at the San Bernardino Mountain foothills, where the channel becomes a pipeline to Silverwood Lake. There is no plan at present to stop that flow.

Unknown to many fishermen, there is excellent fishing in the Aqueduct from Pearblossom to Quail Lake, about six miles north of Pyramid Lake. Ken Aasen, Department of Fish and Game biologist who works with the California Water Project, says angler access presents little or no problem. The State Wildlife Conservation Board, which provides capital funds for conservation and recreational use of fish and wildlife resources, has constructed a series of angler access sites along the Aqueduct.

THERE ARE 15 SUCH projects and each has a fishing platform, parking area, stairs, rails and fencing, sanitary facilities and trash receptacles. Thirteen of the access areas are in San Joaquin Valley; two are in Antelope Valley of Los Angeles County: the 77th Street East Fishing Site and the Longview Road Fishing Site, both just east of Palmdale. Three additional sites are being planned.

Anglers may obtain a map showing the exact location of all fishing access sites along the Aqueduct by requesting a free brochure, Fishing Along the State Water Project, from the Department of Water Resources, 1416 Ninth St., Sacramento 95814. Also available from the same agency is another free brochure, California Aqueduct Bikeway, which includes a map showing the location of paved roadways that parallel the Aqueduct and provide access to bicycle riders, hikers and fishermen.

Anglers may enter the bikeway from a series of parking areas or from any road which crosses the Aqueduct. The bikeway, open every day, features rest stops at 10-mile intervals with drinking water, sanitary facilities, picnic tables and shade areas. Motor vehicles are not permitted on the bikeway, but there are ample parking areas from which anglers may walk to the canal and fish.

Aasen says fishing in the Aqueduct can be great sport, but it also can be very dangerous.

AASEN WARNS that the concrete sides of the Aqueduct are steep and slippery because of algae. The water can be still one minute and flowing rapidly the next. Suction spots occur, often around water gates. Without help, it is almost impossible to climb out of the Aqueduct except by using safety ladders that are spaced 500 feet apart on alternate sides of the canal.

For safety's sake, anglers should stay close to the road or on fishing platforms; never enter the water for any reason. Fish with a buddy if possible; never climb over fences and keep a watchful eye on children and pets.

You may be wondering what fish you can take out of the Aqueduct. Well, there are striped bass, channel and white catfish; bluegills, green sunfish and redears. One angler even reported catching a starry flounder, a salt-water fish, in the area around San Luis Reservoir and O'Neill Forebay in Merced County.

South of the Tehachapis, the major catches have been striped bass, bluegills and channel catfish, with some of the other panfish in lesser numbers. There have been many catfish in the 10-pound range in the eastern branch of the Aqueduct flowing toward Silverwood Lake. Aasen attributes their growth to large numbers of freshwater clams that have become well established throughout the entire Aqueduct.

AASEN IS NO NOVICE in the Aqueduct fishery. He is constantly on the move, covering territory from the southern part of the Tehachapi Range to all the lakes and waterways. With the west canal to Pyramid and

FISHIN' FACTS

BELMONT PIER—50 anglers on 1 boat caught 280 bonito, 148 mackerel, 1 sand bass, 1 calico bass, 112 whitefish, 50 blue bass, 5 sculpin.

QUEEN'S WHARF—150 anglers on 5 boats caught 4 calico bass, 70 rock fish, 1,292 rock cod, 2 cow cod, 3 sculpin, 7 whitefish, 5 sole, 10 sheepshead, 30 mackerel.

SEAL BEACH—154 anglers on 3 boats caught 1,400 rock cod, 2 cow cod, 90 sculpin, 25 white fish, 2 bonita.

PORTS O' CALL—100 anglers on 3 boats caught 1,175 rock cod, 3 ling cod, 26 cow cod.

Castaic Lakes cut, there is going to be a tremendous drop in water levels, all of which may have a severe effect on the lakes and the canal, but which won't stop fishing in Pyramid, Castaic and the Castaic Downstream Pool.

Looking again at the Aqueduct that flows to Silverwood, Aasen advises anglers to fish at the downstream end of a siphon or where the canal bends. The change in the direction and speed of flow creates eddies, which attract fish, in those areas. It is also a good idea to cast under bridges, he says.

Best baits for striped bass are anchovies or sardines (salted, if you can find any), but it is well to try artificial lures. Remember that nightcrawlers, shrimp, fresh-water clams and pieces of cut mackerel and bonito are excellent bait for catfish.

Aasen says that an angler should have his bait, lures and fishing outfits ready for action when he arrives at one of the designated access areas. There are no bait or tackle stores and no restaurants, so prepare your own lunch. One last thought: If you are 16 years of age or older, you must have a state fishing license. DFG regulations apply along the Aqueduct and the lakes that it serves.

Rocks to Rocks Run on tap today

More than 30 runners will take off this morning at 8 in the first Rocks to Rocks Run. The run will begin on the sand at the jetties across from Alamitos Bay Yacht Club and follow a course extending along the sand to the Alamitos exit of the Queens highway in front of the Villa Riviera and back to starting point.

The eight-mile run is sponsored by the Seal Beach Seaside and Chowder Society and has drawn entries from men and women of all ages. Each entrant receives an official T-shirt and there will be trophies for winners in each of four age categories.

She read Classified Ads when little Billy's mother was a baby ... just as her daughter reads Independent, Press-Telegram Classified Ads today. That's because now, as it was in the past, there's no better place to find good buys in things baby needs ... cribs, strollers, chests, play pens, high chairs, baby scales, toys, diaper service — and, even a baby sitter when Grandmother is busy.

Turn to today's Classified Ads and see how many items and services you find to make life happier and easier for you and your baby.

TUNED WITH THE MOST MODERN ULTRAVIOLET DIAGNOSTIC EQUIP-MENT AND MEETS ALL FEDERAL and STATE STANDARDS

FREE 10 DAY TRIAL EXCHANGE

Pick any used car and drive it 10 days. Make sure it is the car you want. If you don't like the car for any reason, bring it back and exchange it for any other car of equal value or receive full credit toward the purchase of a later model car or even a new car. You won't lose a dime.

Ask About Our Preferred Used Car Warranty

1 YEAR
12,000
MILES

If you purchase a used car and our preferred warranty, you get a one year, or 12,000 mile warranty on the entire power train including engine, transmission, differential, etc. If anything goes wrong with the power train, return the car to the Worthington store you purchased it at — We'll fix it and it doesn't cost you one dime.

All cars subject to prior sale

EVERY USED CAR WE SELL HAS BEEN SAFETY CHECKED DRIVE WITH CONFIDENCE

Includes: Tires, brakes, lights, windshield wipers, seat belts, steering, etc.

DON'T

FREE 10 DAY TRIAL EXCHANGE

Pick any used car and drive it 10 days. Make sure it is the car you want. If you don't like the car for any reason, bring it back and exchange it for any other car of equal value or receive full credit toward the purchase of a later model car or even a new car. You won't lose a dime.

Ask About Our Preferred Used Car Warranty

1 YEAR
12,000
MILES

If you purchase a used car and our preferred warranty, you get a one year, or 12,000 mile warranty on the entire power train including engine, transmission, differential, etc. If anything goes wrong with the power train, return the car to the Worthington store you purchased it at — We'll fix it and it doesn't cost you one dime.

All cars subject to prior sale

EVERY USED CAR WE SELL HAS BEEN SAFETY CHECKED DRIVE WITH CONFIDENCE

Includes: Tires, brakes, lights, windshield wipers, seat belts, steering, etc.

DON'T WORRY ABOUT THE DOWN PAYMENT

If your credit is OK — we'll show you how to finance the down payment with low, low monthly installments.

BECAUSE OF UNCONTROLLED LUMBERING AND RUTHLESS HUNTING, THE MONKEY-EATING EAGLE OF THE PHILIPPINES MAY BE EXTINCT BY 1980

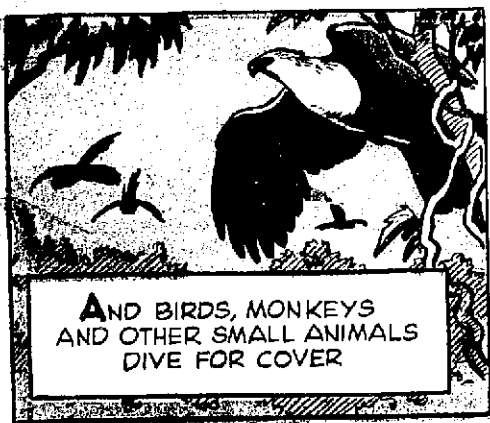

LESS THAN 100 BIRDS REMAIN AND ARE CONFINED TO THE ISLAND OF MINDANAO

THE HUGE MONKEY-EATING EAGLE IS FEARED BY MANY CREATURES OF THE PHILIPPINE JUNGLES

WHEN THE SHADOW OF ITS MIGHTY WINGS SWEEPS OVER THE TREETOPS PANDEMONIUM BREAKS LOOSE...

AND BIRDS, MONKEYS AND OTHER SMALL ANIMALS DIVE FOR COVER

ONLY THE HORNBILLS FACE THE TERROR AND MAY TURN THE TABLES...

the AMAZING SPIDER-MAN

By Stan Lee and John Romita

HIS NAME WAS OTTO OCTAVIUS, ONE OF THE WORLD'S MOST BRILLIANT NUCLEAR RESEARCHERS, UNTIL--

AN ATOMIC ACCIDENT! A SUDDEN BLAST OF UN-CONTROLLED RADIATION! AND THEN--

HIS METAL "TENTACLES" WERE ACTUALLY FUSED TO HIS BODY, AND THE DEADLY DR. OCTOPUS WAS BORN!

THE SAME DR. OCTOPUS WHOM WE NOW FIND DELICATELY SIPPING TEA WITH PETER PARKER'S TRUSTING AUNT MAY...

IT'S SO GOOD TO SEE YOU AGAIN, OTTO.

I HAD TO COME, MY LOVELY, WHEN I HEARD SPIDER-MAN HAD BEEN SEEN NEARBY!

I COULDN'T BEAR THE THOUGHT OF YOU ALONE, AND UNPROTECTED!

BUT MY NEPHEW PETER COMES TO VISIT...

LISTEN, MARY JANE. AUNT MAY MUST HAVE COMPANY!

FAR OUT, TIGER! THEN SHE WON'T NEED US!

LET'S YOU'N ME EASE ON OVER TO PJ'S AND--

HOLD IT!

MY SPIDER-SENSE-- IT'S TINGLING! THERE'S DANGER-- AND AUNT MAY'S IN THERE!

PETEE! WHAT'S WRONG?

THUMP!

DOC OCK! WHAT'S HE DOING HERE?

PETER! HAVE YOU GONE MAD?

HER BLASTED NEPHEW! IF HE SUSPECTS MY PLAN-- HE MUST DIE!

the AMAZING SPIDER-MAN

By Stan Lee and John Romita

HIS NAME WAS OTTO OCTAVIUS, ONE OF THE WORLD'S MOST BRILLIANT NUCLEAR RESEARCHERS, UNTIL--

AN ATOMIC ACCIDENT! A SUDDEN BLAST OF UN-CONTROLLED RADIATION! AND THEN--

HIS METAL "TENTACLES" WERE ACTUALLY FUSED TO HIS BODY, AND THE DEADLY DR. OCTOPUS WAS BORN!

THE SAME DR. OCTOPUS WHOM WE NOW FIND DELICATELY SIPPING TEA WITH PETER PARKER'S TRUSTING AUNT MAY...

IT'S SO GOOD TO SEE YOU AGAIN, OTTO.

I HAD TO COME, MY LOVELY, WHEN I HEARD SPIDER-MAN HAD BEEN SEEN NEARBY!

I COULDN'T BEAR THE THOUGHT OF YOU ALONE, AND UNPROTECTED!

BUT MY NEPHEW PETER COMES TO VISIT...

LISTEN, MARY JANE. AUNT MAY MUST HAVE COMPANY!

FAR OUT, TIGER! THEN SHE WON'T NEED US!

LET'S YOU'N ME EASE ON OVER TO PJ'S AND--

HOLD IT!

MY SPIDER-SENSE-- IT'S TINGLING! THERE'S DANGER-- AND AUNT MAY'S IN THERE!

PETEY! WHAT'S WRONG?

THUMP!

DOC OCK! WHAT'S HE DOING HERE?

PETER! HAVE YOU GONE MAD?

HER BLASTED NEPHEW! IF HE SUSPECTS MY PLAN-- HE MUST DIE!

STAN LEE & JOHN ROMITA 3-13

NEXT: CAUGHT IN THE WEB!

INSIDE WOODY ALLEN

"WHEN 'PLAY IT AGAIN, SAM' WAS TRYING OUT IN PHILADELPHIA, THE THIRD ACT WASN'T GETTING ENOUGH LAUGHS.

HERE'S LOOKIN' AT YOU, KID.

"I'M UP ONE NIGHT REWRITING SCENES WHEN THE DEVIL APPEARS.

I'LL FIX THE LAST ACT IN RETURN FOR YOUR SOUL.

WHAT ELSE HAVE YOU DONE?

MAME, FIDDLER ON THE ROOF, AND HELLO DOLLY.

"WE SIGN THE DEAL. I SPLIT FOR MIAMI. I GET A CALL FROM PHILADELPHIA. THE DEVIL IS IN TROUBLE.

"I FLY UP IMMEDIATELY. THE PLOT IS WEAK! THE CHARACTERIZATIONS ARE FLIMSY!

"WE HAVE A FIGHT AND SUE EACH OTHER.

ARGGH!

"HE SELLS MY SOUL TO A SYNDICATE THAT OWNS HOTELS IN LAS VEGAS AND HE GETS OUT WITH CASH."

PIPER CARDLEY TO SEE MR. BUMBLE!

BUMBLE & CO.

CARDLEY! IS THAT YOU?

IS HE REALLY GOING IN TO SEE THE BOSS DRESSED LIKE THAT?

OF COURSE. HE'S GOING TO TRY TO GET THE DAY OFF!

HOW DO YOU KNOW?

A LITTLE BIRDIE TOLD ME. DIDN'T YOU NOTICE THE DUCK BUMPS ON HIS KNEES?

MS. GRINDSTONE

NO! BUT BOSS! YOU LET ME HAVE THE DAY OFF LAST YEAR TO MARCH IN THE ST. PATRICK'S DAY PARADE...

OF COURSE! LAST YEAR IT WAS MY PATRIOTIC DUTY!

SO HOW COME IT'S NOT THIS YEAR?

BECAUSE THE BICENTENNIAL IS OVER! NOW GET BACK TO WORK!

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM

Mitzi zings into spring with annual special

By BOB MARTIN, TV-Radio Editor

There she was — Mitzi Gaynor, star of screen, stage, nightclubs and television. And what was she doing? Why, she was making like a salmon. Yes, I said a salmon. And she was nowhere near the water.

She was, in fact, having lunch at the Bistro in Beverly Hills, a spot where the beautiful people of the entertainment world like to come to dine and, perhaps, wet their whistles. Mitzi had, however, imbibed no more than a Virgin Mary.

So why was the distinguished entertainer impersonating a salmon? Let me explain.

Miss Gaynor recently completed taping a television special, "Mitzi...Zings Into Spring," which will air on CBS Tuesday night, March 29. She was telling me about the show and mentioned that one of the numbers she does with her guest stars, Roy Clark and Wayne Rogers, takes place at a singles bar for animals. Mitzi, it seems, portrays a giraffe — "Madame Giraffe" — and a chimp and a salmon.

"How," I asked, "do you go about being a salmon?"

For the answer, she provided a demonstration. "Just look," she said, and she screwed her face up and started moving her lips like a fish making bubbles in the water.

Mitzi is such a good mimic and her salmon looked so cute that I started having guilt feelings about what I'd ordered for lunch. By pure coincidence, I had ordered — you guessed it — salmon. But, then, so had Mitzi, and I decided that if she could go through with the meal, after her realistic portrayal, I could, too.

AS TO HER upcoming program on the tube, let it be said that there are television specials and then there are television specials, but when Mitzi Gaynor does a show it is, indeed, something special.

The multit talented singer-dancer-actress-comedienne is not a person to let herself get excessive exposure on the tube. "I have never appeared on a weekly TV show," she pointed out. And she rarely appears on a talk show ("I've been on Johnny Carson's a few times and Merv Griffin's once"), and almost never guests on anyone else's special (the last time was with Perry Como a few years ago).

Why doesn't she like to do guest shots?

"Because every time I appear on television I want it to be an event," replied the versatile star, who has a reputation as a perfectionist.

Miss Gaynor's own TV specials have been coming at the rate of just once a year, starting in 1973 (she had done a couple before that, the first in 1968). And they've all drawn large audiences, as well as critical raves.

"Mitzi...Zings Into Spring" is her fifth musical-variety special for CBS. You probably recall the earlier ones: "Mitzi...the First Time" in 1973, "Mitzi...a Tribute to the American Housewife" in 1974, "Mitzi and a Hundred Guys" in 1975 and "Mitzi...Roarin' in the '20s" in 1976. All have aired in March except the "Housewife" one, and it was in February.

EACH OF HER specials is built around a central theme, and the one on March 29 will be a salute to the earth's season of renewal. After more than two decades as a star, the vivacious blonde who played nurse Nellie Forbush in the movie "South Pacific" still feels "Younger Than Springtime" herself.

Mitzi is joined by Clark and Rogers in a tribute to the season in the number "Spring, Spring, Spring," and, along with a chorus of dancers, in an ethnic, "melting pot" medley. She also serves up a spring medley of ballads, including "Isn't It Romantic?" and "Spring Time Cometh."

"It's a beautiful show — the sets are so beautiful," said Mitzi, who noted that the taping was done in four days after three weeks of rehearsals — and considerable planning.

The executive producer of the show — as of her earlier ones — is her husband of 22 years, Jack Bean, and Mitzi remarked that they have a fine working, as well as personal, relationship.

The special was directed and choreographed by Emmy Award-winning Tony Charmoli, with a script by Jerry Mayer, sets designed by Bob Kelly and special musical material by Marvin Laird. Bob Mackie designed Mitzi's gowns.

MISS GAYNOR combines her talents as a singer, dancer and clown — she loves to do dialects and imitations — with an attractive face and figure and a delightful personality to be one of the standout entertainers of our time.

She has been wowing nightclub audiences in Las Vegas, Reno and Lake Tahoe for years, and she also spends about seven months a year kicking up her heels, belting out songs and clowning around on theater stages across the nation. She delights in performing before an audience, and says: "When I do a TV show, I look into the eye of the camera and see millions of people there."

Some of the numbers she incorporates into her TV specials have already been tested on theater and nightclub audiences, she said.

In the 1950s, Mitzi starred in such movies as "Golden Girl" with Dale Robertson and Dennis Day (it was her first starring role and her favorite); "Anything Goes" with Bing Crosby, Donald O'Connor and Jeanne Crain; "The Joker Is Wild" with Frank Sinatra and Jeanne Crain; "South Pacific" with Rossano Brazzi, and "Surprise Package" with Yul Brynner.

"South Pacific" (in 1958) was the biggest," said Mitzi. "If it hadn't been for it, I might not be sitting here talking to you now."

She said she has no desire to do movies these days. "In 1960, we could see that movies were changing, and Jack set about to steer my career toward that of an entertainer rather than an actress," she pointed out.

The slender star, who exercises each weekday in her own gym when she's at home in Beverly Hills, got pointed in the direction of show business at an early age. Her mother was a dancer and her father a musical director when she was born in Chicago, and she started taking dance lessons as a tot. The family moved from Chicago to Detroit and then to Los Angeles, and Mitzi made her professional debut at age 13 as a featured dancer in a Los Angeles Civic Light Opera Company production. She performed in a number of stage musicals before being signed to a movie contract with 20th Century-Fox. She sang and danced in most of the films she did.

She is still singing and dancing, though not in movies. And she's still displaying as great a zest for life as she did two decades ago. As the song in "South Pacific" goes, "There Is Nothing Like a Dame." This dame, anyway.

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM

Mitzi zings into spring with annual special

By BOB MARTIN, TV-Radio Editor

There she was — Mitzi Gaynor, star of screen, stage, nightclubs and television. And what was she doing? Why, she was making like a salmon. Yes, I said a salmon. And she was nowhere near the water.

She was, in fact, having lunch at the Bistro in Beverly Hills, a spot where the beautiful people of the entertainment world like to come to dine and, perhaps, wet their whistles. Mitzi had, however, imbibed no more than a Virgin Mary.

So why was the distinguished entertainer impersonating a salmon? Let me explain.

Miss Gaynor recently completed taping a television special, "Mitzi...Zings Into Spring," which will air on CBS Tuesday night, March 29. She was telling me about the show and mentioned that one of the numbers she does with her guest stars, Roy Clark and Wayne Rogers, takes place at a singles bar for animals. Mitzi, it seems, portrays a giraffe — "Madame Giraffe" — and a chimp and a salmon.

"How," I asked, "do you go about being a salmon?"

For the answer, she provided a demonstration. "Just look," she said, and she screwed her face up and started moving her lips like a fish making bubbles in the water.

Mitzi is such a good mimic and her salmon looked so cute that I started having guilt feelings about what I'd ordered for lunch. By pure coincidence, I had ordered — you guessed it — salmon. But, then, so had Mitzi, and I decided that if she could go through with the meal, after her realistic portrayal, I could, too.

AS TO HER upcoming program on the tube, let it be said that there are television specials and then there are television specials, but when Mitzi Gaynor does a show it is, indeed, something special.

The multitasking singer-dancer-actress-comedienne is not a person to let herself get excessive exposure on the tube. "I have never appeared on a weekly TV show," she pointed out. And she rarely appears on a talk show ("I've been on Johnny Carson's a few times and Merv Griffin's once"), and almost never guests on anyone else's special (the last time was with Perry Como a few years ago).

Why doesn't she like to do guest shots?

"Because every time I appear on television I want it to be an event," replied the versatile star, who has a reputation as a perfectionist.

Miss Gaynor's own TV specials have been coming at the rate of just once a year, starting in 1973 (she had done a couple before that, the first in 1968). And they've all drawn large audiences, as well as critical raves.

"Mitzi...Zings Into Spring" is her fifth musical-variety special for CBS. You probably recall the earlier ones: "Mitzi...the First Time" in 1973, "Mitzi...a Tribute to the American Housewife" in 1974, "Mitzi and a Hundred Guys" in 1975 and "Mitzi...Roarin' in the '20s" in 1976. All have aired in March except the "Housewife" one, and it was in February.

EACH OF HER specials is built around a central theme, and the one on March 29 will be a salute to the earth's season of renewal. After more than two decades as a star, the vivacious blonde who played nurse Nellie Forbush in the movie "South Pacific" still feels "Younger Than Springtime" herself.

Mitzi is joined by Clark and Rogers in a tribute to the season in the number "Spring, Spring, Spring," and, along with a chorus of dancers, in an ethnic, "melting pot" medley. She also serves up a spring medley of ballads, including "Isn't It Romantic?" and "Spring Time Cometh."

"It's a beautiful show — the sets are so beautiful," said Mitzi, who noted that the taping was done in four days after three weeks of rehearsals — and considerable planning.

The executive producer of the show — as of her earlier ones — is her husband of 22 years, Jack Bean, and Mitzi remarked that they have a fine working, as well as personal, relationship.

The special was directed and choreographed by Emmy Award-winning Tony Charmoli, with a script by Jerry Mayer, sets designed by Bob Kelly and special musical material by Marvin Laird. Bob Mackie designed Mitzi's gowns.

MISS GAYNOR combines her talents as a singer, dancer and clown — she loves to do dialects and imitations — with an attractive face and figure and a delightful personality to be one of the

'Eleanor & Franklin' sequel on tonight

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
"Eleanor and Franklin: The White House Years" is an intimate, dramatized glimpse into the private lives of the Roosevelts during FDR's turbulent years as President.

The three-hour ABC presentation, which picks up where the first program a year ago ended, focuses on their strained marriage and the widening chasm between them as Roosevelt becomes absorbed in fighting the Depression.

The original "Eleanor and Franklin" won 11 Emmy awards, and this continuation is a rich, absorbing drama. James Costigan, working from Joseph Lash's Pulitzer Prize-winning biography, and director Daniel Petrie breathe life and fire into every scene. It will be aired at 8 tonight on ABC Channel 7 locally.

JANE ALEXANDER and Edward Herrmann return in the title roles, with Walter McGinn as Louis Howe, Rosemary Murphy as Sara Delano Roosevelt, Priscilla Pointer as Missy LeHand and Blair Brown as Anna Roosevelt.

The ebullient, outgoing Roosevelt is a role that could easily slip in caricature, but Herrmann's energetic portrayal keeps it firmly under hand.

Miss Alexander's Eleanor is, of course, more restrained, as she guards her emotions so zealously that she cries only in the bathroom with the water running. She is marvelous as a woman who throws herself into good causes to mask her alienation over her husband's affair with Lucy Mercer and feelings of being left out as Roosevelt tackles his presidential duties.

IN A SCENE with Howe she confesses her feelings, then says — almost enviously — that he is Roosevelt's best friend. Howe, long Roosevelt's political adviser, replies, "Franklin doesn't have any friends. He has admirers, confidants, cronies and companions. But no friends. And he doesn't have a wife — only a Mrs."

The drama has many revealing, humanizing scenes, which director Petrie says were meticulously researched by Lash or from other sources.

"We say at the beginning this is a dramatization based on fact, and the important thing is that it's a dramatization," said Petrie, who won an Emmy for his direction of the first "Eleanor and Franklin."

"OUR PURPOSE was to take a real look, to see how it was with them, as best we could divine from all the material written by them and about them. If they had been romantic with each other, it would have come out romantic."

"It seems to be the truth after the Lucy Mercer incident that there was never a conjugal bed shared by the Roosevelts. We don't go as far as saying that, but we do have her repeating a conversation to Louie Howe. 'All right, if you're not in love with me, I'm not in love with you either. If we go on for the sake of the children or your career... we will never be lovers again."

"ELEANOR AND FRANKLIN: THE WHITE HOUSE YEARS" airs from 8 to 11 tonight on Ch. 7, with Jane Alexander as Eleanor Roosevelt and Edward Herrmann as FDR.

The drama is played out against a backdrop of the Depression, the New Deal, rising Nazism and finally World War II. The White House sets are impressive, and some exterior scenes were filmed outside the executive mansion.

"WE HAD a good deal more political footage than we actually used," said Petrie. "When I put it together the first time it ran to more than three hours. My feeling was it was all terribly important.

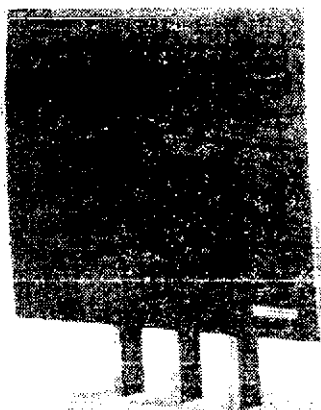

"But we had to make some cuts and the first thing that went was Roosevelt's repeating of a joke about him and Eleanor. Finally I put it back in. I began to notice I was not nearly as interested in the major events of the day as the people and how they were affected by these monumental happenings. The tendency from that day on was to stay with the personal story."

ALTHOUGH raised in Canada, Petrie said he was long an admirer of Roosevelt. "I grew up in Nova Scotia and remember in college sitting up with a professor listening to the late election returns in the race with Willkie. I remember the deafening cheers around me when Roosevelt won."

Petrie said his work on "Eleanor and Franklin" has resulted in offers of directorial assignments for major feature films. He previously directed two small features, "Life-guard" and "Buster and Billy," and this summer will direct a big-budget film, "The Betsy." Laurence Olivier will be in the cast, playing the patriarch of an automobile empire in this adaptation of Harold Robbins' book.

Carolyn can't shake ghoulish Morticia

By CHRISTINE WINTER
Chicago Tribune

Even though her name has been included in the credits of some highly rated television specials recently — "Roots" and "Little Ladies of the Night" — Carolyn Jones still is the ghoulish Morticia of the short-lived "The Addams Family" to many young fans.

Although the show ran only in the 1964 and 1965 seasons, it has played in syndication ever since, and the memory of her rotting black gown and characters Lurch, Thing and Cousin Fester follow her like the plague.

But to the morbid Morticia, the plague was no curse, and, to Carolyn Jones, being typecast as the femme fatale of the monster world isn't all that bad, either.

"IF PEOPLE still remember me as Morticia, that means I played the role right," she said with a delighted laugh as two young fans interrupted her lunch to reminisce about the gory old days.

"If they'd done that show in color, we would still be running in prime time," she added.

Miss Jones is much tinier than she seems on television, with very un-Morticialike short black hair. Now that she is in her 40s — and uncharacteristically closed-mouth about her age — she is getting a lot of "mother" roles. They've ranged from the pitiful mother of a teen-age prostitute in "Little Ladies" to — and this one makes her laugh just to talk about it — Wonder Woman's mother in that television series.

"I LOVE IT," she said with a giggle. "I absolutely love it."

"In fact, I've had some terrific parts lately," she said, though she described her age bracket as a phase of the modern woman's life that is completely ignored by writers. "I expect that when I get older I'll find more parts around than I can now."

Carolyn's recent flurry of roles has come after a self-imposed seven-year retirement.

"There wasn't that much to do, so I moved to Palm Springs and did some writing until I got stir-crazy," she said.

"Then we moved back to Los Angeles and I started getting involved in dinner theater productions."

SINCE THEN, she admitted, activity has

CAROLYN JONES ... as Morticia

bred activity, and she is busier than she'd hoped.

One part she wants now is one she wrote herself in a script being considered for a television series. It's based on a book she and husband Herbert Green, the music producer, wrote called "Diary of a Food Addict." The addict is her husband, she said.

She confessed a little disappointment with the television production of "Roots."

"I THINK the series pandered to prejudices and was too emotional and one-sided. The totally harsh treatment by the slave owners seemed to me to be a misrepresentation of Haley's book."

"But from the point of view of a TV milestone and a sociological breakthrough, I think it was a great first step." She said she is glad it has spurred young people to study their family heritages.

Her character — Mrs. Moore, the wife of a slave owner — made her realize that women were only one step above slaves during that period, she said. And though she suspects some of the white actors might get angry reactions to their evil roles, her own character was too "dingy" to elicit anything but pity, she said.

But there are rumors that it could put her name in the running for an Emmy.

Carolyn can't shake ghoulish Morticia

By CHRISTINE WINTER
Chicago Tribune

Even though her name has been included in the credits of some highly rated television specials recently — "Roots" and "Little Ladies of the Night" — Carolyn Jones still is the ghoulish Morticia of the short-lived "The Addams Family" to many young fans.

Although the show ran only in the 1964 and 1965 seasons, it has played in syndication ever since, and the memory of her rotting black gown and characters Lurch, Thing and Cousin Fester follow her like the plague.

But to the morbid Morticia, the plague was no curse, and, to Carolyn Jones, being typecast as the femme fatale of the monster world isn't all that bad, either.

Role of Fiddler in 'Roots' boosts Gossett's career

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

"How has 'Roots' affected my career? It has stepped up my schedule 1,000 per cent. In fact, my schedule reads like 'Roots' itself."

Lou Gossett is one of the many cast members of television's instant classic whose fortunes have been accelerated. Not that Lou was doing badly; he has been one of Hollywood's busiest black actors. Now he has an even wider choice of roles, and between films he is in demand to lecture before university students and other audiences.

Gossett, who played the rich and varied role of the Fiddler in "Roots," commented, "I figured the show would be successful, but I could never foresee the extent of its impact. I can feel it wherever I go.

"MY FAVORITE reaction was from my grandfather, Lacey Gossett, who lives in my home area of Brooklyn. He is 97-years old, 6-feet-5 and straight as a ramrod, and he still has an eye for the women."

"He asked me, 'Where'd you learn to talk like that?' I told him, 'From you, Grandpa.' And it's true. Fiddler is a copy of my grandfather."

Lou Gossett can trace his own roots back to Watkinsville County, Ga., in the late 1700s; beyond that he can find no records. His great-grandmother married a Cherokee, and Lou can see traces of the Indian heritage in the visage of his son, 4. Because of his own renewed sense of identity, the actor has decided to resume his billing as Lou Gossett Jr.

"WHEN I started out as an actor, I used the 'Junior' because my father was still alive," he said. "After he died, I decided to drop it; I was glad to get away from 'Junior' after being called that all my life. Now I think I'll use it again, as a kind of remembrance of my father and my family."

At 40 Gossett finds himself at the peak of his career. Besides "Roots," he is associated with two other best-sellers. He recently completed the role of the murderous Haitian in Columbia Pictures' "The Deep," for which he learned scuba diving. Next he'll star in "The Choir Boys," Lorimar Productions' film of the Joseph Wambaugh cop novel.

ABBY MANN is preparing a potential TV series for Gossett about a real-life Alabama black minister who became a small-town sheriff. "He works without a gun," the actor explained, "and that takes a lot of guts. I believe in the philosophy of passive resistance and a nonviolent role."

Lou Gossett has been working at the acting trade for almost a quarter century. He was picked out of high school to play a rebellious teen-ager in the off-Broadway play "Take a Giant Step," in 1953.

During his lean years, Gossett earned money between acting jobs by playing guitar and singing in night spots. No need for that now. His films have included "The Skin Game," "Travels With My Aunt," "White Dawn," "The Landlord," "The Laughing Policeman" and "The River Niger."

Role of Fiddler in 'Roots' boosts Gossett's career

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

"How has 'Roots' affected my career? It has stepped up my schedule 1,000 per cent. In fact, my schedule reads like 'Roots' itself."

Lou Gossett is one of the many cast members of television's instant classic whose fortunes have been accelerated. Not that Lou was doing badly; he has been one of Hollywood's busiest black actors. Now he has an even wider choice of roles, and between films he is in demand to lecture before university students and other audiences.

Gossett, who played the rich and varied role of the Fiddler in "Roots," commented, "I figured the show would be successful, but I could never foresee the extent of its impact. I can feel it wherever I go.

"MY FAVORITE reaction was from my grandfather, Lacey Gossett, who lives in my home area of Brooklyn. He is 97-years old, 6-feet-5 and straight as a ramrod, and he still has an eye for the women.

"He asked me, 'Where'd you learn to talk like that?' I told him, 'From you, Grandpa.' And it's true. Fiddler is a copy of my grandfather."

Lou Gossett can trace his own roots back to Watkinsville County, Ga., in the late 1700s; beyond that he can find no records. His great-grandmother married a Cherokee, and Lou can see traces of the Indian heritage in the visage of his son, 4. Because of his own renewed sense of identity, the actor has decided to resume his billing as Lou Gossett Jr.

"WHEN I started out as an actor, I used the 'Junior' because my father was still alive," he said.

"After he died, I decided to drop it; I was glad to get away from 'Junior' after being called that all my life. Now I think I'll use it again, as a kind of remembrance of my father and my family."

At 40 Gossett finds himself at the peak of his career. Besides "Roots," he is associated with two other best-sellers. He recently completed the role of the murderous Haitian in Columbia Pictures' "The Deep," for which he learned scuba diving. Next he'll star in "The Choir Boys," Lorimar Productions' film of the Joseph Wambaugh cop novel.

ABBY MANN is preparing a potential TV series for Gossett about a real-life Alabama black minister who became a small-town sheriff. "He works without a gun," the actor explained, "and that takes a lot of guts. I believe in the philosophy of passive resistance and a nonviolent role."

Lou Gossett has been working at the acting trade for almost a quarter century. He was picked out of high school to play a rebellious teen-ager in the off-Broadway play "Take a Giant Step," in 1953.

During his lean years, Gossett earned money between acting jobs by playing guitar and singing in night spots. No need for that now. His films have included "The Skin Game," "Travels With My Aunt," "White Dawn," "The Landlord," "The Laughing Policeman" and "The River Niger."

THE BIBLE Says

J. T. SMITH

THE INCOMPARABLE BOOK # 4

We should understand as we read the Bible that this is the only book that God has given man by which he is to be guided. There are, in fact, a number of passages that tell us that we may gain everything we need to know to be saved and live the Christian life from the Word of God—The Bible. Also, there are warnings not to accept anything other than the Bible. Here are a few of them. In 2 Tim. 3:16-17 we read, "All scripture given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." In 2 Peter 1:3 Peter said by inspiration, "According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us unto glory and virtue."

Also, there are a number of warnings in the Bible against teaching any thing other than that which is recorded in it. "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel: which is not another; but there be some that trouble you and would prevent the gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed" (Gal. 1:6-9). We are then to rely on the Bible and only on the Bible. For John said in 2 John 1:9-10, "Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, the same hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any unto you and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed; for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds." It ought, therefore, to be the desire of every person to know what the Bible teaches, do it, and warn those who go beyond it about what God has said about them in the verses in 1 John just cited.

Last year, the story of their early years won 11 Emmys. Tonight, see them in their White House years.

One of the most celebrated events on television last year was the story of Eleanor and Franklin Roosevelt in their early years. Now, Jane Alexander and Edward Herrmann in the title roles continue their portrayals of the Roosevelts through the Depression and World War II in "Eleanor and Franklin: The White House Years." It's a moving and important story. Don't miss it.

SPECIAL

THE MIRACLE MONTHS (2), 8:00 p.m. — A unique and dramatic informational special program dealing with the science of human conception, gestation and birth.

THE DEADLIEST SEASON (2), 9:00 p.m. — Stars Michael Moriarty and Kevin Conway, about a professional athlete whose personality and principles are brutalized by his hunger for success at any cost.

MOVIE (4), 9:30 p.m. — "The Owl and the Pussycat." Barbra Streisand and George Segal play two highly incompatible city dwellers — a meek bookworm and an unsuccessful go-go dancer — who learn to get along in spite of their differences.

You'll really save if you select a beautiful Blue Haven pool or health spa now -- during these winter months. We want to keep our construction crews busy during this slow season so we're making very special offers on very special Blue Haven pools and health spas.

Call us now. Let's talk about saving you money. But shhh! Keep this news-to yourself. If too many people hear about it, our slow season may end up as fast as our fast season. You can imagine how we'd feel if that happened.

San Diego station to be NBC affiliate

KCST-TV, San Diego, will become affiliated with the NBC Television Network June 27, it was announced by Donald J. Mercer, vice president, station relations, NBC, and Terry Lee, executive vice president of Storer Broadcasting Co.

KCST-TV, which has been operating since November 1963, was acquired by the Storer Broadcasting Co. in September 1974.

"THE MARY TYLER MOORE SHOW" airs its final episode at 8 p.m. Saturday on Ch. 2, and everyone's unhappy after learning that most of them have been fired by the station's new management. From left: Betty White as Sue Ann Nivens, Gavin MacLeod as Murray Slaughter, Ed Asner as Lou Grant, Georgia Engel as Georgette Baxter, Ted Knight as Ted Baxter and Mary Tyler Moore as Mary Richards.

massacre, becomes involved in the lives of a trading post couple whose child is kidnapped by Indians asking rifles as ransom.

"Godzilla vs. Megalon"

9 p.m., Ch. 4 (1976). When Scotopia, an underwater continent is threatened with destruction by man's nuclear testing, the legendary society sends Megalon to destroy the earth but Godzilla, a fire breathing reptile, meets the challenge and defends civilization.

WEDNESDAY

"A Man Called Gannon"
8 p.m., Ch. 9 (1969) Tony Franciosa, Michael Sarrazin, Judi West. A cowboy drifter, fast with a gun and his fists, unwillingly takes a brash Easterner for a sidekick and teaches him the art of a seasoned cowboy.

"The Owl and the Pussycat" 9:30 p.m., Ch.
4. Barbra Streisand and George Segal play two highly incompatible city dwellers — a meek bookworm and an unsuccessful go-go dancer — who learn to get along in spite of their differences.

"The Deadliest Season"
9 p.m., Ch. 2. Stars Michael Moriarty and Kevin Conway, about a professional athlete whose personality and principles are brutalized by his hunger for success at any cost.

Peppard, Giovanna Ralli,
Raf Vallone. An American

Army intelligence captain is given a small group of men to quell the disturbances brought about by Mexican outlaws led by Cordoba and return canons stolen from Pershing's train.

"Marooned" 8:30 p.m.,
Ch. 7 (1969) Gregory Peck,
Richard Grenna, James Franciscus. A U.S. manned space ship misfires during re-entry and its crew becomes marooned in space.

REP. BARBARA JORDAN

Q. How come Jimmy Carter did not pick Congresswoman Barbara Jordan as his attorney general? — M.D., Houston, Tex.

A. Miss Jordan, whose forte is oratory, was not considered to be qualified for that cabinet post. However, she was considered as U.S. Ambassador to the U.N., but apparently was not interested in accepting that position.

Q. How much did actor Peter Falk settle on Alyce, his wife of 16 years, in their divorce? I understand she turned around after the divorce and got married. — P.T., Los Angeles.

A. Under the terms of the divorce decree, Falk gave Alyce $650,000 and two homes, promised to support their two daughters.

Q. When President Sadat of Egypt gave a wedding reception recently for one of his daughters, my understanding is that he limited the food to sandwiches. Is that true? — L. Behar, New York City.

A. It's true, but it was recognized by the groom's family as a political move to placate the Cairo poor. The whole truth is that the groom's mother, Mrs. Osman Ahmed Osman, whose husband is the multimillionaire owner of The Arab Contractors, insisted upon giving another reception at the palatial Osman home. The food for that reception was catered by Maxim's and flown in from Paris.

JEHAN AND ANWAR SADAT AT WEDDING OF DAUGHTER JIHAN AND MAHMOUD OSMAN

Q. How old was President Carter's wife Rosalynn when she gave birth to her daughter Amy? — Louise Brown, Roxbury, Mass.

A. Mrs. Carter was 40.

BEAUTIFUL MODEL: BARBARA BARNARD

Q. There is a rumor that Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the South African heart surgeon, can no longer operate because he has been crippled by arthritis in the right hand. The story is that his beautiful wife Barbara has turned to modeling to support the family. Is that correct? — Doris Stein, Baltimore, Md.

A. Dr. Barnard, 53, suffers from arthritis in his right hand but still operates. Barbara Barnard, 25—mother of sons Frederick, 5, and Christiaan Jr., 3—models as an amateur, usually when she and her husband are vacationing in Europe. She recently modeled in Los Monteros, Spain.

Q. Conrad Hilton, at 89, recently married his longtime girlfriend, Mary Frances Kelly, 61. How many times has Connie Hilton, who comes from my town, been married, and how many children did he have? — J. Lowe, El Paso, Tex.

A. Hotel magnate Hilton has been married three times. His first wife was the late Mary Barron, who gave him three sons; his second wife was actress Zsa Zsa Gabor, who gave birth to a daughter, Francesca, whose origin Hilton is most guarded in discussing; his third wife is the former Mary Frances Kelly of United Airlines.

Q. Rita Hayworth had a daughter, Yasmin, by the late Aly Khan. What happened to her? — Helen Yardley, New York City.

A. Yasmin recently auditioned for a Broadway musical, "Umbrellas of Cherbourg."

Q. Nelson Rockefeller was Henry Kissinger's patron. David Rockefeller is Zbigniew Brzezinski's patron. Where do the Rockefellers pick these guys, and how do they make them head of the National Security Council? — R. McIntyre, Silver Spring, Md.

A. Kissinger comes from Harvard, Brzezinski from Columbia. Both were academicians involved in international affairs. The Rockefellers did not make either of them special assistants for national security affairs. The Rockefellers merely sponsored them for governmental service. Nixon chose Kissinger, and Carter chose Brzezinski.

Q. My sister-in-law told me that the President of the United States and his family do not actually live in the White House, but that there is a tunnel from the White House to another house or hotel where they sleep. She also says there is no room for bathtubs in the White House. I think that she's crazy. Who is right? — T. J. K., Beverly, Mass.

A. You are.

MARK SPITZ AND WIFE SUSAN

Q. Have Mark Spitz, the former Olympic swimming champion, and his attractive wife Susan split? — L. Allen, San Diego, Cal.

A. They have.

Q. What is the real reason the British government is deporting or has deported Philip Agee, the former CIA agent, from Great Britain? — P.F., McLean, Va.

A. Agee not only made a career of blowing the cover of CIA agents overseas, he trafficked with the Soviets and Cubans. This past summer, for example, he was spotted in Moscow, where he reportedly hoped to get published a Russian edition of his book "Inside the Company; CIA Diary." He was also seen visiting the Cuban embassy in London. The British regard him as a potential troublemaker, no longer want him on their soil.

REP. BARBARA JORDAN

Q. How come Jimmy Carter did not pick Congresswoman Barbara Jordan as his attorney general? — M.D., Houston, Tex.

A. Miss Jordan, whose forte is oratory, was not considered to be qualified for that cabinet post. However, she was considered as U.S. Ambassador to the U.N., but apparently was not interested in accepting that position.

Q. How much did actor Peter Falk settle on Alyce, his wife of 16 years, in their divorce? I understand she turned around after the divorce and got married. — P.T., Los Angeles.

A. Under the terms of the divorce decree, Falk gave Alyce $650,000 and two homes, promised to support their two daughters.

Q. When President Sadat of Egypt gave a wedding reception recently for one of his daughters, my understanding is that he limited the food to sandwiches. Is that true? — L. Behar, New York City.

A. It's true, but it was recognized by the groom's family as a political move to placate the Cairo poor. The whole truth is that the groom's mother, Mrs. Osman Ahmed Osman, whose husband is the multimillionaire owner of The Arab Contractors, insisted upon giving another reception at the palatial Osman home. The food for that reception was catered by Maxim's and flown in from Paris.

JIHAN AND ANWAR SADAT AT WEDDING OF DAUGHTER JIHAN AND MAHMOUD OSMAN

Q. How old was President Carter's wife Rosalynn when she gave birth to her daughter Amy? — Louise Brown, Roxbury, Mass.

A. Mrs. Carter was 40.

BEAUTIFUL MODEL: BARBARA BARNARD

Q. There is a rumor that Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the South African heart surgeon, can no longer operate because he has been crippled by arthritis in the right hand. The story is that his beautiful wife Barbara has turned to modeling to support the family. Is that correct? — Doris Stein, Baltimore, Md.

A. Dr. Barnard, 53, suffers from arthritis in his right hand but still operates. Barbara Barnard, 25—mother of sons Frederick, 5, and Christiaan Jr., 3—models as an amateur, usually when she and her husband are vacationing in Europe. She recently modeled in Los Monteros, Spain.

Q. Conrad Hilton, at 89, recently married his longtime girlfriend, Mary Frances Kelly, 61. How many times has Connie Hilton, who comes from my town, been married, and how many children did he have? — J. Lowe, El Paso, Tex.

A. Hotel magnate Hilton has been married three times. His first wife was the late Mary Barron, who gave him three sons; his second wife was actress Zsa Zsa Gabor, who gave birth to a daughter, Francesca, whose origin Hilton is most guarded in discussing; his third wife is the former Mary Frances Kelly of United Airlines.

Q. Rita Hayworth had a daughter, Yasmin, by the late Aly Khan. What happened to her? — Helen Yardley, New York City.

A. Yasmin recently auditioned for a Broadway musical, "Umbrellas of Cherbourg."

Q. Nelson Rockefeller was Henry Kissinger's patron. David Rockefeller is Zbigniew Brzezinski's patron. Where do the Rockefellers pick these guys, and how do they make them head of the National Security Council? — R. McIntyre, Silver Spring, Md.

A. Kissinger comes from Harvard, Brzezinski from Columbia. Both were academicians involved in international affairs. The Rockefellers did not make either of them special assistants for national security affairs. The Rockefellers merely sponsored them for governmental service. Nixon chose Kissinger, and Carter chose Brzezinski.

Q. My sister-in-law told me that the President of the United States and his family do not actually live in the White House, but that there is a tunnel from the White House to another house or hotel where they sleep. She also says there is no room for bathtubs in the White House. I think that she's crazy. Who is right? — T. J. K., Beverly, Mass.

A. You are.

MARK SPITZ AND WIFE SUSAN

Q. Have Mark Spitz, the former Olympic swimming champion, and his attractive wife Susan split? — L. Allen, San Diego, Cal.

A. They have.

Q. What is the real reason the British government is deporting or has deported Philip Agee, the former CIA agent, from Great Britain? — P.F., McLean, Va.

A. Agee not only made a career of blowing the cover of CIA agents overseas, he trafficked with the Soviets and Cubans. This past summer, for example, he was spotted in Moscow, where he reportedly hoped to get published a Russian edition of his book "Inside the Company; CIA Diary." He was also seen visiting the Cuban embassy in London. The British regard him as a potential troublemaker, no longer want him on their soil.

This Year Marks the Golden Anniversary of Charles A. Lindbergh's Flight Across the Atlantic

The Great and Controversial Hero

by Lloyd Shearer

HANA, MAUI.

In the next few months the nation's media will observe the 50th anniversary of Charles Lindbergh's epic flight across the Atlantic.

A spate of books, magazine articles, photo stories and TV shows will recreate the event, the man and his times.

On May 20, 1927, at 7:52 a.m., "Slim" Lindbergh took off from Roosevelt Field, New York, in the Spirit of St. Louis, a single-engine monoplane built for him in 60 days by the Ryan Aeronautical Company of San Diego, Cal.

Without radio or parachute, he winged 3600 miles across the ocean, averaged 107.5 miles per hour, landed 33½ hours later at Le Bourget Field, Paris.

With that memorable and monumental achievement of courage, care and skill—the first successful solo transatlantic flight—he opened the era of modern aviation. Two weeks later pilot Clarence Duncan Chamberlin and one passenger spanned the Atlantic to Germany in his Bellanca, confirming what Lindbergh had proved—the potential of the airplane as a practical means of rapid, long-distance transportation.

Aviation genius

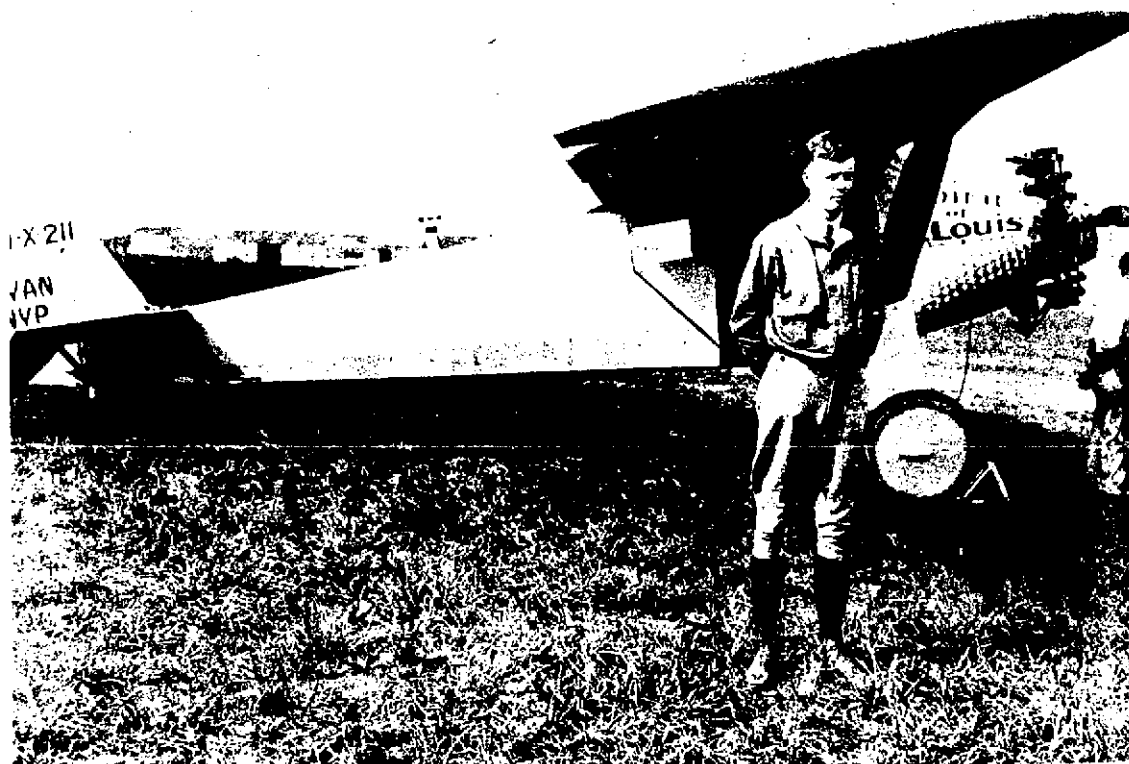

Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr. was undoubtedly an aviation genius. He was also an instant hero whose heroism was tarnished by flaws in his character and the character of the American people.

Over the years he developed into an opinionated celebrity to whom the rich and influential listened as if his knowledge of politics and international affairs equaled his knowledge of aviation.

It did not, of course, and Lindbergh was used shamelessly by the Nazis, whose Hermann Goering conferred on him in 1938 the Service Cross of the Order of the German Eagle. He subsequently joined the isolationist America First Committee, made speeches opposing U.S. aid to Great Britain and earned the undying enmity of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

In the late 1920's waves of adulation and affection lapped over Lindbergh as "The Lone Eagle" and "Lucky Lindy."

Surely, Charles Lindbergh was one of the luckiest young men who ever lived. Not that his luck was undeserved, but certainly other fliers would have won the $25,000 prize sponsored by Raymond Orteig—a Frenchman who ran two New York hotels—if he had not. The prize was for a non-stop flight from France to New York or vice versa.

In 1919 two British fliers, John Alcock and Arthur Whitten Brown, had flown the Atlantic from Newfoundland to Ireland, where they crash-landed in a bog. In September 1926 French flier René Fonck and American co-pilot Lawrence Curtin crashed in a gully at the end of Roosevelt Field in their attempt to cross the Atlantic. On April 26, 1927, Lt. Cmdr. Just enough time

The tragedies of the others afforded Lindbergh just enough time to prepare his $15,000 plane (it cost $2000 of his own money and $13,000 from St. Louis businessmen) for the long flight.

The detailed story of that flight was told by Lindbergh in his books We and The Spirit of St. Louis. And it undoubtedly will be reconstructed for TV.

What will be infinitely more difficult to show or explain, however, is Lindbergh's character.

He was a genuine eccentric, a child of separated parents, a hypersensitive man who was insensitive to others, a practical joker who enjoyed being the perpetrator but not the butt. He was on occasion priggish and pompous, especially after his success.

looked during the golden anniversary of his flight.

A group of aviation enthusiasts, headed by Gen. Jimmy Doolittle and Neil Armstrong, have formed the Lindbergh Memorial Fund. Its goal is to raise $5 million to finance fellowship awards in the fields in which Lindbergh was interested.

The fund hopes to award fellowships each May 21 to young scientists in anthropology, exploration and the aeronautical and physical sciences.

Commemorative dinners

A "Spirit of St. Louis II" commemorative flight is planned to spur the fund-raising campaign. A Pan Am Boeing 747 is scheduled to depart from New York on May 20 and follow Lindbergh's exact route to Paris. The passenger list will consist of men and women who contribute $125,000 or more to the fund. A Paris banquet on May 21 will be given by French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing, and there will be dinners in Washington, New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Los Angeles.

Whether Lindbergh's widow, Anne Morrow Lindbergh, or any of their five children—Jon Morrow, Land Morrow, Scott, Reeve and Anne Spencer—will appear at any of these functions is doubtful.

Lindbergh made a fetish of his privacy, and it has been adopted by his family. Their semi-isolation has its roots, of course, in the 1932 kidnapping and death of Charles Augustus Lindbergh III, for which Bruno Richard Hauptmann was convicted and executed.

Scapegoat, a new book by Anthony Scaduto, a former reporter for the New York Post, raises some chilling questions about whether Hauptmann ever received a fair trial.

Family history

Lindbergh's father was Charles Augustus Lindbergh Sr., the son of Swedish immigrants who had settled in Minnesota. His mother, Evangeline Land, was a beautiful young schoolteacher from Detroit, the daughter of a dentist.

Lindbergh Sr. had been married previously to the former Mary La Fond, who had borne him three daughters and died of a stomach tumor in 1898.

On March 27, 1901, the widower and Evangeline Land—both of whom occupied rooms in the Antlers Hotel in Little Falls, Minn., a lumber and farming community—were married after an engagement of three months. They honeymooned in San Francisco, Yosemite Park and Colorado Springs. Two months after their return to Little Falls, Mrs. Lindbergh discovered she was pregnant.

She insisted on returning to Detroit to have her baby, and it was in the Land

Shortly after they married in 1929: Lindbergh and the former Anne Morrow, daughter of prominent banker Dwight Morrow, then U.S. Ambassador to Mexico.

Long after the acrimony of the war years when the Lindberghs were regarded as anti-British, they came to New York in 1968 to be honored at National Institute of Sciences for "distinguished service to humanity."

home there that Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr. was born on Feb. 4, 1902.

In 1906 Lindbergh Sr. was elected Republican Congressman from Minnesota's 6th District. He and his wife were incompatible, but divorce would have ruined his career in those days; so they decided to live apart but give the appearance of living together.

It was in this environment that Lindbergh was reared. His mother was more cultured than most of her neighbors. She did not mind showing it and was deeply protective of her son. She was supportive of her husband and acted as his hostess in Washington; but when he was defeated in 1916 in the Senatorial primaries, she promptly took off for California with her son and brother Charles in their new Saxon Six car.

When her brother Charles returned to Detroit, Mrs. Lindbergh and her son settled in Redondo Beach, a suburb of Los Angeles. However, they soon returned to Little Falls. Young Charles was enrolled in high school but regularly cut class. He might never have passed his final exams and graduated if a local regulation had not saved him. It held that students who left high school and worked on a farm to increase food production for the war effort would not have to take their finals. Lindbergh promptly quit school and returned only to accept his diploma. In 1918, when the war was over, Lindbergh, then 16, gave up farming.

He thought of enlisting in the Army Air Corps, but his mother insisted he go to college. They chose the University of Wisconsin in Madison, where Mrs. Lindbergh found a job teaching science at Emerson Junior High.

Lindbergh lasted a little more than a year at the University of Wisconsin. He was primarily interested in machinery, motorcycles, guns and automobiles. He had no interest in smoking, drinking, dancing or girls. He never dated a girl during his entire freshman year. He was a loner, basically antisocial, somewhat taciturn, unable to make small talk—a young man without social grace.

Off to flying school

On March 22, 1922, at the age of 20, he said goodbye to his mother—a symbolic cutting of the umbilical cord—and cycled off to a flying school conducted by the Nebraska Aircraft Company in Lincoln, to whose owner he paid $500 for the course.

Slim Lindbergh was a natural as a flier. Everything about planes fascinated him. After seven hours of instruction he signed on with Erol Bahl, one of the pioneer barnstormers, as a mechanic, handyman, pilot and wing-walker. Soon he parachuted with the man-and-wife stunt team of Kathryn and Charlie Harden, learned to hang from a wing by his teeth and barnstormed throughout the Midwest, where he was known as "Daredevil Lindbergh."

In 1924 he enrolled as a flying cadet in the U.S. Army with 103 other hopefuls. A year later only 18 passed the course, with Lindbergh at the head of the class. He was commissioned a second lieutenant and in November 1925 a first lieutenant in the Missouri National Guard.

He subsequently became an airmail service pilot on the Chicago-to-St. Louis run, during which he made four emergency parachute jumps.

Flying was his whole life. One night on the airmail run to St. Louis he thought about a New York-to-Paris flight. A few days later in a Chicago movie house he saw a newsreel featuring a Sikorsky plane in which René Fonck, the famous French pilot, was planning to fly the Atlantic. That helped confirm Lindbergh's decision to try for the Orteig Prize himself.

In 1926, when Lindbergh set out to acquire financial backing for his transatlantic flight, he was known only to a relatively small coterie of barnstormers and aviation enthusiasts.

On May 21, 1927, when he landed his Spirit of St. Louis at Le Bourget Field, Paris, he became the world's idol—tall (6 feet 4), young (25), handsome, modest, moral, the quintessential all-American boy, a symbol of all that was good and wholesome.

He was hailed and lauded every-

In 1926, when Lindbergh set out to acquire financial backing for his transatlantic flight, he was known only to a relatively small coterie of barnstormers and aviation enthusiasts.

On May 21, 1927, when he landed his Spirit of St. Louis at Le Bourget Field, Paris, he became the world's idol—tall (6 feet 4), young (25), handsome, modest, moral, the quintessential all-American boy, a symbol of all that was good and wholesome.

He was hailed and lauded every-

Ten years before you can take advantage of this card,

you can take advantage of this one.

The day you turn 55 you can receive your AARP membership card. It's a card that can be important to you right now. Because once you have it, you're eligible for all the benefits and services of AARP.

What is AARP?

AARP is the American Association of Retired Persons. Non-profit, non-partisan and non-governmental, it's an association of over 9 million vital Americans. And one AARP membership of $3 a year enables both you and your spouse to join them in taking full advantage of all AARP offers.

The New Social Security.

AARP is probably the only national organization in this country that offers people over 55 so many different and important ways to take full advantage of their age.

As a member, you'll be able to purchase drugs and medical supplies at some of the lowest available prices in the country. You'll receive information on health, auto and life insurance specially tailored for people over 55. You'll be able to fill your leisure time learning new skills; meeting new friends and participating in community activities. And you'll receive free both Modern Maturity, an entertaining and informative 4-color magazine featuring articles of special interest to older people, and the AARP News Bulletin which keeps you up-to-date on important issues in the field of aging and all association activities.

When you consider that these and all AARP's other benefits and services are yours to take advantage of, it's easy to see why our members call us the new Social Security.

The Advantages of Your AARP Card.

- Information about eligibility for Group Health Insurance coverage to supplement Medicare or other basic health insurance.
- A Pharmacy Service that lets you buy the drugs and medical supplies you need at prices that average, according to a leading consumer magazine report, "only 2.9% above wholesale" and delivers them to your home, postage paid.
- Free educational materials on retirement planning, nutrition and health maintenance.
- Information on auto* and life insurance specially tailored for people over 55.
- 2600 Local Chapters where you can meet new friends and participate in community activities.
- Special programs on Consumer Information and Tax Aide assistance by IRS volunteers.

• The chance to find interesting part-time or temporary employment in a number of metropolitan areas through "Mature Temps" an AARP recommended service.

• The chance to strengthen AARP's Legislative Program which informs and advises legislators about the special interests of all older people.

• Special group travel tours and special discounts at leading hotels throughout the country.

• Free subscriptions to our two special interest publications—Modern Maturity and the AARP News Bulletin.

Here's How to Take Advantage.

Wouldn't you agree that everything above is worth the membership dues? And there are even more benefits than we have room to tell you about here. The best way to discover them all is to join. It's as simple as mailing in the coupon. And there's just one requirement: you have to be 55 or over. After that, no matter what your interests are, AARP can make a meaningful contribution to your life.

*Only statutory coverage available in North Carolina, Texas and Massachusetts.

where by government officials and members of royalty. "There is one thing I long to know," said King George V of Great Britain on meeting Lindy. "How did you pee?" Lindbergh blushed, then explained about the aluminum container he had dropped over some Paris suburb: "I was not going to be caught with that thing on me at Le Bourget!"

After the French, Belgian and British governments had bestowed on him their highest decorations, Lindbergh returned to America via the U.S. Navy cruiser Memphis. In Washington, D.C., a tumultuous parade down Pennsylvania Avenue honored his return. President Coolidge presented him with the Distinguished Flying Cross and promoted him from captain to colonel in the Army Air Corps Reserve. At a White House dinner, Coolidge introduced Lindbergh to a partner in the banking firm of J.P. Morgan & Co., Dwight Whitney Morrow, U.S. Ambassador to Mexico.

Morrow invited Lindbergh to visit the family home in Englewood, N.J., where he introduced him to his wife and three daughters. The middle one, Anne, was to become Mrs. Charles Lindbergh.

Charles and Anne were married at Next Day Hill, the Morrow estate in Englewood, on May 27, 1929, after a surreptitious courtship.

Adopted by the wealthy, the powerful and the influential, young Lindbergh quickly became a member of the establishment. He supported Herbert Hoover, accepted $25,000 a year as a consultant to the Guggenheim Aeronautical Foundation and later $100,000 a year from Pan Am. Eventually he became a millionaire.

In an effort to protect his privacy, he built a house in Hopewell, N.J., from which his 20-month-old son Charles was kidnapped and murdered in March 1932. After years of sensational, vulgar and painful publicity involving the Hauptmann trial, the Lindberghs fled to England in December 1935, searching for the peace and tranquillity denied them at home.

They rented Long Barn, a house in Kent belonging to Vita Sackville-West and Harold Nicolson, two old friends (Nicolson had penned the biography of Dwight Morrow), and were welcomed by everyone, harassed by none.

Taken in by Nazis

In May 1936 Maj. Truman Smith, a military attaché at the U.S. Embassy in Berlin, wrote to Lindbergh and persuaded him to come to Germany. A political innocent, Lindbergh was taken in by the Nazis, especially Hermann Goering, head of the Luftwaffe.

On Sept. 23, 1938, Lindbergh wrote to Joseph P. Kennedy, then U.S. Ambassador to Britain: "... I am convinced that it is wiser to permit Germany's eastward expansion than to throw England and France, unprepared, into a war at this time."

Lindbergh also made surveys of air power in France, England and the Soviet Union. He argued that England could not possibly win a war in Europe even with American aid and suggested a negotiated peace.

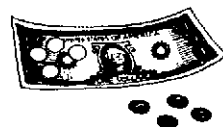

Returning to the U.S. in 1939, he threw himself headlong into the isolationist camp, blaming the Anglophiles, the Jews and the Administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt for "pressing the country toward war."

Lindbergh's mother-in-law and his family lawyer were outraged—as was FDR, who likened him to a "copperhead," a statement Lindbergh equated with an implication of treason. In April 1941 he resigned his commission as a colonel in the Army Air Corps Reserve.

Observations

Exaggerated notions. That's what most Americans have about corporate profits, especially the oil industry's. In 1975, folks woefully overestimated the oil companies' after-tax profit per dollar of sales at an incredible 61 cents. Now, an Opinion Research Corporation survey shows the public "guesstimating," somewhat less fancifully, that oil companies make 43 cents. Mobil's actual profit last year was less than four cents.

We're not alone. Other industries are, also seen as being far more profitable than they really are. Most people, according to the poll, think the average auto company makes 37 cents on the dollar, while the Federal Trade Commission put the 1976 figure at 5.1 cents. For the "average manufacturer," the "guesstimate" was 29 cents, while the average profit was actually 5.4 cents. Which means that most people think industry makes more than five times actual earnings. And this economic misconception is widely held by all kinds of people—men, women, whites, and blacks, from every region of America.

"MY PROFIT MARGIN IS 20% BETTER THAN THE CORPORATE AVERAGE"

What's a fair profit? Even though most Americans think industry earns far more than it really does, poll respondents believe that a quarter on a dollar would be fair—or about five times the nickel the average manufacturer really makes. Clearly, the public's heart is bigger than economic reality. Few companies of any kind come close to that quarter, yet half the public still believes that businesses in general—and oil companies in particular—make excessive profits.

These misconceptions, so wide of the mark, concern us because they are too readily echoed or exploited by a few journalists and politicians (whose job it is to know better). They're busy promoting taxation and government regulation to further reduce business' profit-making ability. What really disturbs us is that the public is often swayed by their arguments, even though that same public believes a fair profit to be five times as much as industry actually makes. Overlooked is the fact that adequate profits are essential to stimulating the investment needed to create new jobs.

We're puzzled about all this, since we know how strenuously business has battled economic ignorance in recent years. And we wonder what it takes to undo years of myths about "obscene" or "exorbitant" profits. Can you help us? We'd be glad to run provocative, informative items on economic matters. Write to us at the address below with doubts, queries, quibbles, and, most of all, with your constructive suggestions. We'll try to address ourselves to what interests our readers—and can further economic understanding. All of us can profit.

A True Solid-State Electronic Digital Watch

Now you can own the newest miracle in semiconductor technology: a digital solid-state electronic timepiece with computer-like accuracy. And for only $9.95 plus shipping and handling! And that even includes the batteries.

It's the Sportswatch® from Commodore, a leader in calculators... with features you'd expect only in watches costing much, much more: □ Five functions at the press of the command button: hour and minute; seconds; month and day □ Super-bright red light-emitting diode (LED) display can be read in a pitch dark room and in sunlight. Another development of Commodore's advanced opto-electronic engineering □ Like having a computer on your wrist: accuracy almost never achieved by any ordinary watch regardless of price. And with an automatic calendar: reset the Sportswatch for the correct date only once every four years (on February 29)!

How can this watch sell for so much less—with so many more features? Simple: Commodore designs and produces its own chips and microprocessors—the brains of calculators and watches and computers—and its own displays here in the United States. And then assembles the finished products in its own factories all over the world. Nobody beats Commodore's production efficiency. And Commodore's policy, for 20 years, is to pass on to you the consumer the savings from these efficient techniques. • Most manufacturers and most retailers really don't want to sell a $9.95 digital watch. At least not yet. Most have inventories of watches that cost more and, in many instances, have fewer features. • And, finally, Advanced Consumer Electronics has made the single largest watch commitment in Commodore's history and we're prepared for volume.

In case you still don't believe this bargain, we're going to prove it to you: order it, look it over for five days. If it's not exactly as we've described, send it back to us. We'll refund your money by return mail or credit your charge card. No questions asked.

Check or money order is acceptable; on two or more watches, you may use your charge card as indicated on the order blank. Please allow up to four weeks for delivery.

A few months later, when Pearl Harbor was bombed, Lindbergh offered himself for active service, but FDR wouldn't have him. Lindy thereupon offered his services in a civilian capacity to United Aircraft, Wright Aeronautical and other aviation companies. But pressure from Washington was too great, and they turned him down.

Finally, one man who loathed FDR, the controversial auto magnate Henry Ford, hired Lindbergh to work as a technical consultant at the Willow Run bomber plant in Detroit at a salary of $666 a month. Lindbergh worked for Ford until fall of 1943.

Gradually the antagonism he had generated in many quarters began to dissipate, and in 1944 Brig. Gen. Louis Woods of the Marines suggested Lindbergh fly to the Pacific as a civilian and show Navy pilots there how best to fly the new Corsair fighter.

Lindbergh leaped at the opportunity. He flew patrols over Guadalcanal, Rabaul and New Ireland and engaged in combat, something forbidden to a civilian. Word of his activities in the South Pacific soon filtered down to General MacArthur and his air commander, Gen. George Kenney. Lindbergh was ordered to Brisbane, Australia, where he was taken to see MacArthur. Lindbergh quickly suggested that he could teach P-38 pilots in New Guinea how to maximize their range.

MacArthur okayed the mission, and Lindy joined the 475th Fighter Group there.

On July 28, 1944, flying a P-38, he shot down a Japanese plane in a dogfight. A few days later he was almost shot down himself. The news spread quickly, and MacArthur ordered him out of the theater. By then Lindbergh had participated in 50 combat missions. He had served his country in war and in a way had redeemed himself.

Having been burned by his involvement with the America First Committee, however, Lindbergh eschewed public political stances during the McCarthy period. He became a trouble-shooter for the Air Force—working without compensation, testing new devices and altitudes, increasing the efficiency of new engines.

Portrayed by Jimmy Stewart

In 1952 he wrote The Spirit of St. Louis, which he sold to Warner Brothers for $1 million. The film starred Jimmy Stewart but flopped at the box office. A little later President Eisenhower restored Lindbergh's commission in the armed forces, and he was sworn in as a brigadier general in the U.S. Air Force Reserve on April 7, 1954.

In his later years he turned to ecology and environmentalism. In 1972 he accompanied an expedition to the Philippines to study the Tasaday tribe, helped organize an exhibition about them for the Smithsonian Institution.

As he asked, Lindbergh is buried next to this little church in a seaside grave. He wrote his own epitaph on the stone below.

In the fall of 1973 he came down with a series of rashes which his doctors diagnosed as shingles. It was more than that. In March 1974 he resigned from the board of Pan Am, on which he had served for years, and flew to the Hawaiian island of Maui to recuperate. But he lost weight and returned home to Darien, Conn. When his fever rose to 104 he was moved to Columbia Presbyterian Hospital in New York City and told the truth. He was suffering from terminal lymphatic cancer.

Lindbergh insisted that he be flown to Maui and buried in a seaside graveyard next to the little church in Kipahulu, 10 miles down the road from Hana.

On Aug. 18, 1974, Lindbergh was placed on a United Airlines DC-8. A special section of the plane was curtained off so that he could view the country he had flown across so many times in his last 50 years.

The last eight days of his life were spent on Maui, where he used his remaining strength to prepare for death. He had already spoken to Anne and Reeve, his two daughters, and seen his sons Jon and Scott. His wife and son Land had accompanied him to Maui and were with him.

He asked that he be buried in a khaki shirt and dark cotton trousers in a coffin of eucalyptus wood built by Hawaiian cowboys from nearby ranches. He also requested that a Hudson Bay blanket and a piece of tapa cloth be placed inside his coffin and that his grave be bordered with native lava rocks.

On the evening of Aug. 25 he lapsed into a coma. At 7:15 a.m. Charles Lindbergh died. He was 72.

He left behind a 1000-page memoir, An Autobiography of Values, not yet published, and a history of heroism and accomplishment, of legend and lore, unequaled in his time. He was the great implementer of modern aviation.

A fence can bring neighbors closer together.

Sometimes it's the small things that cause the biggest problems between neighbors.

In my case the bone of contention was the one Mrs. Parker found buried in her prize begonias. So I built this fence from plans I got at the Help Center. And you know something, good fences make good neighbors.

It works the other way 'round too. I got all the free help I needed from Jim Clark, my Georgia-Pacific Registered Dealer. His Help Center is loaded with remodeling ideas, building projects, and helpful hints for do-it-yourselfers.

Take the free Projects Booklet. It's got simple, step-by-step plans for 20 interesting and useful home projects. And all of them as easy to build as my fence. There's a whole section of the Help Center that's filled with exciting new ideas on remodeling with wall paneling. And another with helpful free booklets that show you how to choose and use building materials like a pro.

The Help Center at your neighborhood Georgia-Pacific Registered Dealer has all the help you need. And it's free. But isn't that what good neighbors are for?

Perched on a cliffside, the Tiger's Den monastery of Bhutan in the Himalayas reminds travelers of the mythical land of Shangri-La.

Dancers wear grotesque masks as they join in rituals which have been performed in the remote mountain country for centuries past.

Bhutan, tucked away in mountains between Tibet and India, is just beginning to admit visitors.

THIMPHU, BHUTAN.

Tourists aren't exactly getting into each other's way in Bhutan, a dizzyingly mountainous country in the Himalayas. Together with Sikkim, it is perched between India and Tibet and sometimes regarded as the Switzerland of Asia. But tourists are now arriving in this once-inaccessible land that has always been suspicious of foreigners.

Under 21-year-old King Jigme Singye Wangchuk, Bhutan has been cautiously letting in its first outside visitors. I was the 110th tourist permitted to enter the remote land since the king mounted the throne in 1972.

Why did I go there? Mainly because I've always wanted to see the place that supposedly was the site of Shangri-La, the mythical high valley of peace and contentment that is the setting of James Hilton's novel Lost Horizon and two subsequent movies of the same title.

You don't have quite as arduous a trip as Hilton's travelers did to enter the land, but certain formalities must be complied with. Bhutan is still highly selective, accepting only small groups of travelers for limited visits of seven to 10 days. It has no intention of becoming a haven for hippies as has nearby Nepal.

I had to wait three months for my visa, plus the necessary transit visa from the Indian authority, which likes to guide Bhutan's foreign contacts. Then I signed up with Lindblad Travel Inc. of New York City, which, with Mountain Travel of Albany, Cal., does all the booking for excursions to Bhutan. At $130 a day, all-inclusive, the trip isn't exactly inexpensive—but it is unusual.

The starting point for the journey into the mountain kingdom is Calcutta, India, where a one-hour flight takes you to Bagdogra Airport near the frontier. An immaculate minibus then transports visitors to the Bhutan border town of Phuntsholing, where an ornate, dragon-festooned entrance arch was erected in honor of the coronation of the young king.

Bhutan doesn't have anything in the way of nightclubs, resort beaches, swimming pools or fancy restaurants. About the only things it offers in the way of standard tourist attractions are spectacular mountain scenery and excellent trout fishing.

But for all that, it's a fascinating place, full of surprises and revelations. The highways—if that is not too strong a word—follow the old caravan routes. Of the 800 miles of roads in the country, only 112 are paved—a stretch from Phuntsholing to Thimphu, the capital.

Walls eight feet thick

Many of the most imposing buildings along this serpentine road are dzongs, ancient monastery-fortresses, many of them strategically sited to command passes and watch over valleys. Their eight-foot-thick walls slant inward to the top, contain enough supplies to withstand a medieval siege, and are pocked with arrow slits. Until recently, the longbow was Bhutan's only military hardware, and archery is still the national sport. In fact, arrow-shooting contests are part of every festival, with archers who hit the bull's-eye leaping around singing songs of self-praise.

Each monastery has lovely frescoes on its interior walls and traditional masks, costumes and musical instruments stored in its vaults. Some of these were brought out for a ritual dance shirt and dark cotton trousers in a coffin of eucalyptus wood built by Hawaiian cowboys from nearby ranches. He also requested that a Hudson Bay blanket and a piece of tapa cloth be placed inside his coffin and that his grave be bordered with native lava rocks.

On the evening of Aug. 25 he lapsed into a coma. At 7:15 a.m. Charles Lindbergh died. He was 72.

He left behind a 1000-page memoir, An Autobiography of Values, not yet published, and a history of heroism and accomplishment, of legend and lore, unequalled in his time. He was the great implementer of modern aviation.

A fence can bring neighbors closer together.

Sometimes it's the small things that cause the biggest problems between neighbors.

In my case the bone of contention was the one Mrs. Parker found buried in her prize begonias. So I built this fence from plans I got at the Help Center. And you know something, good fences make good neighbors.

It works the other way 'round too. I got all the free help I needed from Jim Clark, my Georgia-Pacific Registered Dealer. His Help Center is loaded with remodeling ideas, building projects, and helpful hints for do-it-yourselfers.

Take the free Projects Booklet. It's got simple, step-by-step plans for 20 interesting and useful home projects. And all of them as easy to build as my fence. There's a whole section of the Help Center that's filled with exciting new ideas on remodeling with wall paneling. And another with helpful free booklets that show you how to choose and use building materials like a pro.

The Help Center at your neighborhood Georgia-Pacific Registered Dealer has all the help you need. And it's free. But isn't that what good neighbors are for?

As he asked, Lindbergh is buried next to this little church in a seaside grave. He wrote his own epitaph on the stone below.

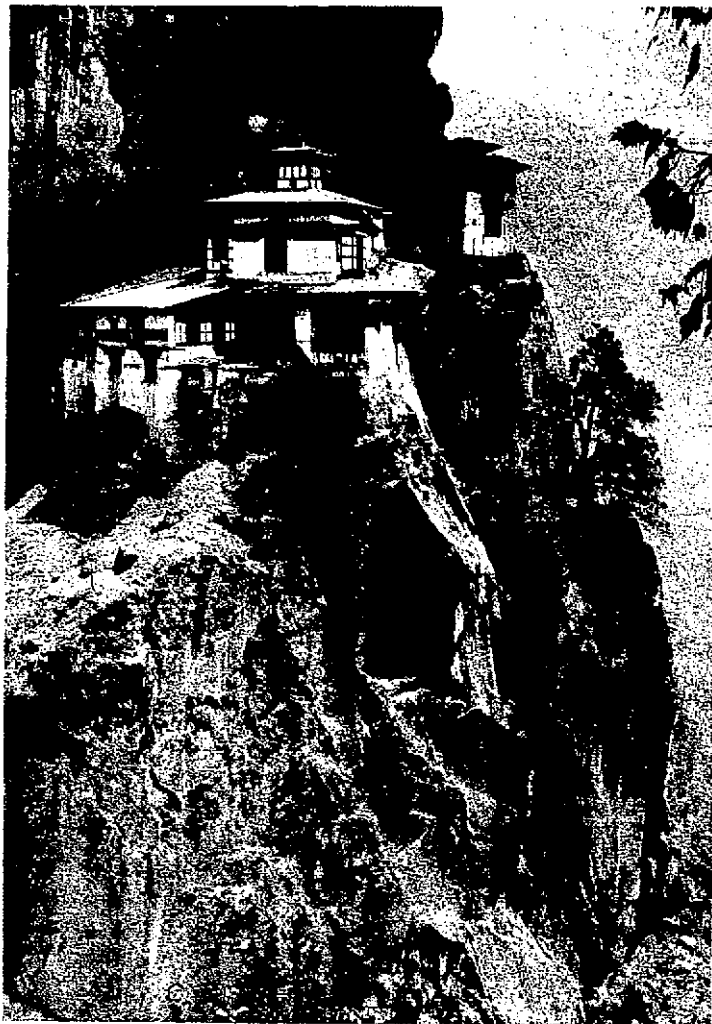

In the fall of 1973 he came down with a series of rashes which his doctors diagnosed as shingles. It was more than that. In March 1974 he resigned from the board of Pan Am, on which he had served for years, and flew to the Hawaiian island of Maui to recuperate. But he lost weight and returned home to Darien, Conn. When his fever rose to 104 he was moved to Columbia Presbyterian Hospital in New York City and told the truth. He was suffering from terminal lymphatic cancer.

Lindbergh insisted that he be flown to Maui and buried in a seaside graveyard next to the little church in Kipahulu, 10 miles down the road from Hana.

On Aug. 18, 1974, Lindbergh was placed on a United Airlines DC-8. A special section of the plane was curtained off so that he could view the country he had flown across so many times in his last 50 years.

The last eight days of his life were spent on Maui, where he used his remaining strength to prepare for death. He had already spoken to Anne and Reeve, his two daughters, and seen his sons Jon and Scott. His wife and son Land had accompanied him to Maui and were with him.

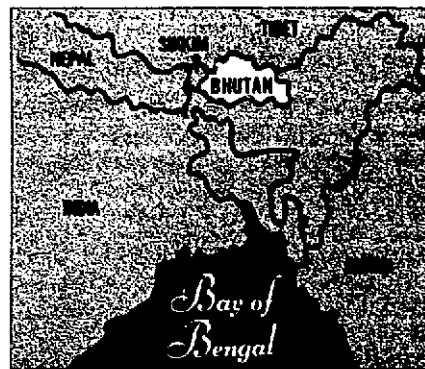

He asked that he be buried in a khaki

Perched on a cliffside, the Tiger's Den monastery of Bhutan in the Himalayas reminds travelers of the mythical land of Shangri-La.

Dancers wear grotesque masks as they join in rituals which have been performed in the remote mountain country for centuries past.

Bhutan, tucked away in mountains between Tibet and India, is just beginning to admit visitors.

Now You Can Visit Shangri-La

by Richard Harrington

THIMPHU, BHUTAN.

Tourists aren't exactly getting into each other's way in Bhutan, a dizzyingly mountainous country in the Himalayas. Together with Sikkim, it is perched between India and Tibet and sometimes regarded as the Switzerland of Asia. But tourists are now arriving in this once-inaccessible land that has always been suspicious of foreigners.

Grass Seed Is For The Birds! Zoysia Saves Time, Work, Money

GRASS SEED WILL NEVER GROW A LAWN LIKE THIS!
SAVE WITH OUR SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER UP TO 200 AMAZOY ZOYSIA GRASS PLUGS FREE!

By Mike Sandin
Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it. Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow . . .

until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it. That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn " . . . is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in . . . Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds — it's just wonderful!"

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn — nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

Cuts Your Work, Saves You Money

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement . . . ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by 2/3.

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick rich, luxuriant Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long. It will NOT winter kill. Goes off its green color after killing frost, regains fresh new beauty every Spring — a true perennial!

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

End erosion of slopes with Amazoy. Perfect answer for hard-to-cover spots, play-worn areas.

Your Own Supply of Plug Transplants

Established Amazoy gives you Zoysia plugs to plant in other areas as desired!

NO SEED, NO SOD!

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass brings with it the problems of seed, like weeds, diseases, burning out, other ills.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass Was Perfected by U.S. Gov't.: Released in Cooperation With U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

Order guaranteed Amazoy now, get your bonus plugs FREE. Your order will be delivered at earliest correct time for planting in your area.

We ship all orders the same day grass is taken from the sod, shipping charge collect, via most economical means.

A typical sight is the yak, the shaggy beast that provides butter for Bhutanese tea and also serves as a pack and saddle animal. We had planned a yak ride to the 15,000-foot Donchula Pass but were cheated of the opportunity by a heavy snowfall. That day Bhutan lived up to its nickname of "Land of the Thunder Dragon." Actually, the only tourist seasons are March-April-May and September-October-November. It's much too cold in the winter, and summer is monsoon time.

Inviting tourists is only one step the young king is taking to bring a little modernity to this buffer state between India and the Chinese in Tibet. SOME NIXON ENEMIES WHO NOW SERVE CARTER

WALTER AND JOAN MONDALE

PATRICIA HARRIS

CLARK CLIFFORD

PAUL WARNKE

CHARLES L. SCHULTZE

YESTERDAY'S ENEMIES

During 1971 and 1972, the Nixon White House staff operated a "Political Enemies Project." To implement that project, John Dean, the President's lawyer, sent a confidential memo to Bob Haldeman, John Ehrlichman, and other members of the Nixon hierarchy on "how we can use the available federal machinery to screw our political enemies."

The staff assigned to the Political Enemies Project thereupon compiled a list of 213 names, which John Dean subsequently turned over to the Internal Revenue Service for purposes of harassment.

The list contained some of the most brilliant, patriotic, and notable people in America. Many of them have been chosen by President Jimmy Carter to serve in his Administration.

Walter Mondale, who appears on Nixon's Enemies List 1 along with his wife Joan, is Carter's Vice President and close associate.

Patricia Harris, also on Enemies List 1, is Carter's Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

Leslie Gelb, another of Nixon's listed enemies, has been assigned to the Policy and Planning Division of the State Department.

Kingman Brewster Jr., president of Yale, will probably join the Carter Administration in some ambassadorial post, if he hasn't already.

Clark Clifford, Washington, D.C., lawyer, is a Carter adviser. Clifford Alexander Jr., on Enemies

List 1, was appointed Secretary of the Army.

Rev. Joe Duffey, on Enemies List 2, is Carter's Assistant Secretary of State for Cultural Affairs.

Pat Cadell, also on Enemies List 2, is Carter's chief pollster.

Paul Warnke, another Nixon enemy, was Carter's choice for director of the Arms Control Agency.

Charles L. Schultze, on Enemies List 2, is chairman of President Carter's Council of Economic Advisers.

As one goes down the list of enemies compiled by the Nixon White House, it reads more and more like a "Who's Who in America," and it boggles the mind to realize that the executive branch of this nation was once peopled by men of seemingly Nazi-like mentality.

PHONE SERVICE

Telephone service in the U.S. may be annoying at times, but it's the best in the world.

Currently there are 657 telephones per 1000 inhabitants in the U.S., compared with 594 in Sweden, 350 in Great Britain, 217 in France and 200 in Greece.

The average installation time after a customer's request is less than a week in the U.S. It takes two years in Norway, 18 months to five years in France and a month in Greece.

The average telephone rate is $10 a month in the U.S. In Greece and Italy, it costs $140 to have a phone installed. In Japan, a $500 bond must be purchased in addition to a $167 installment fee. In France it costs $182 for installation, $8.50 a month and 9¢ a call. In Guatemala a new phone line costs $1000.

DISPOSAL ISSUE FIRST

There are 10 states in West Germany. The most industrialized is North Rhine-Westphalia. A few weeks ago that state announced it would permit no more nuclear plants to be built within its borders until the problem of what to do with atomic waste has been solved.

Of the 13 nuclear power plants in West Germany, four are operating in North Rhine-Westphalia, where a typical nuclear reactor discharges approximately 30 tons of spent fuel consisting of plutonium, uranium, strontium and other radioactive material.

In past years the Germans have sent used material to Great Britain or France, where it has been reprocessed into fuel rods. The material has also been buried in salt mines near the East German border. But government experts believe these methods or sites will not take care of the increasing waste from the reactors.

ALFRED NOBEL

THE RUSSIAN ROCKEFELLERS

Mention the name Nobel and most people associate it with Alfred Nobel (1833-96), the inventor of dynamite in 1866 and founder of the Nobel prizes.

There were other Nobels, however, of the same family who lived in Russia from the mid-19th century until the Communist Revolution in 1917. And it is of them that Robert Tolf, a former U.S. diplomat in Sweden and Switzerland, writes in a fascinating new book, "The Russian Rockefellers: The Saga of the Nobel Family and the Russian Oil Industry."

It was Alfred Nobel's father who designed some of the first steam engines to power Russian ships and introduced central heating in Russian homes.

It was his brother Ludwig, says the book, who "literally created the Russian oil industry, which in turn fueled the tremendous economic expansion of prerevolutionary Russia."

"He designed the world's first oil tanker...He installed Europe's first pipelines and put the first tank cars on its rails. He built the world's first full-scale continuous distillation refinery...He built a network of storage depots and tank farms, freightyards and marketing outlets from one end of the vast Russian empire to the other, and then across the European continent and into the British Isles."

The Nobels employed some 50,000 workers in Russia, abolished child labor, provided decent housing, medical care, and workers' saving banks.

By the turn of the century, Russia supplied more than half the world's oil, and by 1916 Ludwig's son Emanuel owned or controlled a third of all the Russian crude, 40% of all its refined, and two-thirds of the oil consumed by the nation. His company also owned the world's largest tanker fleet.

Came the Revolution, and Emanuel, disguised as a peasant, escaped from Russia and quickly the Nobel empire there deteriorated.

"Emanuel died in 1932 and the company was finally dissolved in 1959, its 80th year. By that time, the Soviets had obliterated all traces of Nobel, and their works were forgotten..."

"There is no room in Soviet texts for Nobel, nor is there credit for industrial innovation before 1917. The standard Soviet work, 'Development and Exploitation of Oil and Gas Fields,' does not mention the name Nobel or any of the Nobel contributions, but dismisses the entire prerevolutionary period as one in which there was little technological advance..."

Grandmother bicycles cross-country with Mentholatum Deep Heating Rub

CHICAGO—Sore muscles weren't going to stop Mrs. Al King from completing a 300 mile hike. She packed Mentholatum Deep Heating Rub to ease her way. Each day after cycling an average of 60 miles, Mrs. King applied it for temporary relief from pains. Its greaseless, stainless formula warmed deep. Each morning she used it to warm away stiffness. Upon arrival here, a tired but happy Mrs. King said, "I'd like to thank those who helped me make it. The Grace of God, aspirin and Mentholatum Deep Heating Rub." Also available in an Extra Strength Lotion! Use as directed.

"Heartburn is a permanent part of my life"

Discover a doctor-tested, clinically-proved tablet that relieves heartburn (acid indigestion) a totally different way.

Doctors know heartburn is not caused by stomach acid alone, but by the eruption of this acid into your esophagus (the tube between your mouth and stomach).

This erupting acid "burns" your esophagus, causing searing pain and a sour, acid-y taste.

Of all leading antacids, only Gaviscon Tablets work directly to neutralize this erupting acid.

"I have taken several leading antacids and relief was slight," writes Miss Rose Donabed, Cambridge, Mass. "Then I was introduced to Gaviscon and relief was almost immediate."

When acid erupts and heartburn strikes, simply chew pleasant-tasting Gaviscon Tablets as directed. Gaviscon immediately becomes creamy and flows into your stomach to form an effective antacid layer right on top of the stomach acid.

This shields the exposed lining of your esophagus from further burning discomfort. Get different, unique relief from heartburn (acid indigestion) that only Gaviscon Tablets can give you.

Microbiologist J. Anthony Morris (r), a longtime critic of flu vaccines, was fired from the Food and Drug Administration for publicly opposing the swine flu program. Lawyer James Turner is helping Morris in his battle for redress.

Scientist J. Anthony Morris— He Fought the Flu Shots And the U. S. Fired Him

by Alexander Cockburn & James Ridgeway

Behind the recent turmoil over the government's swine flu vaccine program lies a heated controversy that has been raging in medical circles since World War II. Top government scientists have argued that mass vaccination against influenza, which kills thousands of Americans during epidemics, is essential if the nation is ever to defeat diseases of the respiratory system, including the common cold. These scientists saw the swine flu vaccine program as a giant leap forward in preventive medicine involving over 200 million people.

But within the federal health agencies isolated voices have long warned against excessive enthusiasm for flu vaccines. Until the apparent fiasco of the swine flu program these critics went unheard. Now, in the Congress and in the highest reaches of the federal health establishment, there is deep concern over the conduct of the war against flu.

Politicians such as Sen. Edward Kennedy (D., Mass.) and Rep. Paul Rogers (D., Fla.), the chief health watchdogs in Congress, and Dr. Albert Sabin, who developed the "live" polio vaccine, have all expressed their disquiet. The government's Center for Disease Control in Atlanta has been reexamining the swine flu campaign it so enthusiastically advocated last year.

On Feb. 9, Joseph A. Califano Jr., Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, lifted part of a ban on flu vaccinations, in effect since Dec. 16. Bivalent vaccine against swine flu and the

A-Victoria strain was recommended for high-risk persons. But monovalent vaccine against swine flu remained banned.

The major impetus behind criticism of flu vaccines can be traced back to the work of J. Anthony Morris.

A microbiologist, now 59, Morris has worked on viral diseases since World War II, when he began his studies at the Army's Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D.C. His medical detective work into the origins of disease took him to Japan, Korea and Micronesia.

In the mid-1950's, after an outbreak of polio, Morris was recalled from Asia to take a major job, in a reorganized laboratory within the National Institutes of Health (NIH). His task was to investigate vaccines and assess the risk factors involved in their use.

'Didn't work'

Morris began to concentrate on flu vaccines and became alarmed at what he found. He discovered, for example, that there was no way to measure the potency of vaccines. No matter what the labels on a batch said, the actual strength of the dose might vary. But far more serious, Morris says, as a result of his experiments, he "was convinced we had scientific evidence that flu vaccines didn't work."

By the mid-1960's Morris was deeply involved in experiments on the long-term effects of flu vaccine and his research was indicating that, far from stopping flu, vaccination might well increase an individual's susceptibility. He studied side effects, including neurological reactions. And it was not until last year that deaths from a form of paralysis called Guillain-Barré syndrome spelled out what these neurological reactions might involve.

Fiercely opposed

The scientist's criticism of flu vaccines ran directly counter to national medical strategy, and he began to run into fierce opposition from his superiors at NIH. "I don't know for certain why," Morris says, "but there is a close tie between government scientists and manufacturing scientists. And I was hurting the market for flu vaccine."

When Morris told NIH in a memorandum that he believed flu vaccines to be of minimum benefit, he was relieved of his formal duties as influenza control officer. Gradually his laboratory staff was whittled down. Publication of his scientific articles was blocked by superiors. Thousands of experimental animals, crucial to his work, were ordered destroyed. Finally he was forced from his laboratory and given a small room with no telephone. His research materials were crated and taken away.

It was at this point that Morris, in desperation, went to the law offices of Edward Bennett Williams to seek help. They said it looked like another Ernie Fitzgerald case and turned him away.

ALFRED NOBEL

THE RUSSIAN ROCKEFELLERS Mention the name Nobel and most people associate it with Alfred Nobel (1833-96), the inventor of dynamite in 1866 and founder of the Nobel prizes.

There were other Nobels, however, of the same family who lived in Russia from the mid-19th century until the Communist Revolution in 1917. And it is of them that Robert Tolf, a former U.S. diplomat in Sweden and Switzerland, writes in a fascinating new book, "The Russian Rockefellers: The Saga of the Nobel Family and the Russian Oil Industry."

It was Alfred Nobel's father who designed some of the first steam engines to power Russian ships and introduced central heating in Russian homes.

It was his brother Ludwig, says the book, who "literally created the Russian oil industry, which in turn fueled the tremendous economic expansion of prerevolutionary Russia."

"He designed the world's first oil tanker...He installed Europe's first pipelines and put the first tank cars on its rails. He built the world's first full-scale continuous distillation refinery...He built a network of storage depots and tank farms, freightyards and marketing outlets from one end of the vast Russian empire to the other, and then across the European continent and into the British Isles."

The Nobels employed some 50,000 workers in Russia, abolished child labor, provided decent housing, medical care, and workers' saving banks.

By the turn of the century, Russia supplied more than half the world's oil, and by 1916 Ludwig's son Emanuel owned or controlled a third of all the Russian crude, 40% of all its refined, and two-thirds of the oil consumed by the nation. His company also owned the world's largest tanker fleet.

Came the Revolution, and Emanuel, disguised as a peasant, escaped from Russia and quickly the Nobel empire there deteriorated.

"Emanuel died in 1932 and the company was finally dissolved in 1959, its 80th year. By that time, the Soviets had obliterated all traces of Nobel, and their works were forgotten..."

"There is no room in Soviet texts for Nobel, nor is there credit for industrial innovation before 1917. The standard Soviet work, 'Development and Exploitation of Oil and Gas Fields,' does not mention the name Nobel or any of the Nobel contributions, but dismisses the entire prerevolutionary period as one in which there was little technological advance..."

Fitzgerald is a civil servant in the Pentagon who was victimized for exposing cost overruns in the Defense Department.

Morris kept fighting. "At no time," he recalls, "did I believe that we would lose this battle. The people we were opposing were so obviously wrong."

Morris' fortunes began to improve when in 1970 John Gardner—the former Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare who then headed the public interest organization Common Cause—telephoned Ralph Nader's office and was put on to James Turner, one of "Nader's Raiders." Health was an area of Turner's concern. He got in touch with Morris, checked out his scientific credentials, and spent six months poring over Morris' work. "I was very impressed," Turner says, "and I thought we had a chance to win."

NIH accused

Together they drew up a detailed memorandum charging irregularities in the NIH's handling of flu vaccines and alleging that the government had long been certifying for public consumption watered-down vaccines. This report became the basis for a grievance proceeding on behalf of Morris within the government, and it sparked an investigation by Sen. Abraham Ribicoff (D., Conn.). Soon the General Accounting Office was called in to investigate.

In the face of the Turner attack, NIH officials could only retort that Morris "was extremely difficult to deal with." Ribicoff's Senate hearings prompted then-Secretary of HEW Elliot Richardson to transfer Morris' laboratory to the Food and Drug Administration, where he resumed his work. Morris had been vindicated, but his lonely watchdog role was by no means over. The government continued its flu vaccination program as if nothing had happened.

Morris then began to investigate the new "live" flu vaccines that the government hoped would be the eventual conqueror of the flu. The vaccine administered to the public has been composed of "dead" viral material. A live vaccine, which can be inhaled or taken in the form of nose drops, contains living virus modified in such a way that it produces a mild case of the disease. It is thought to produce the right kind of antibodies to protect against the disease. This live vaccine was given to humans, including small children, in the early 1970's in a test program. Morris began to test the live vaccine in mice—a precaution which had not been taken. He found that the live vaccine eventual public use. Morris' unpopularity among the health bureaucrats increased markedly.

Then came the final straw: Last year he became a prominent public critic of the swine flu program. A mass swine flu inoculation program was dangerous, he argued, since it was impossible to accurately measure vaccine potency. In-

Commissioner Alexander Schmidt fired Morris for "insubordination."

Morris, working out of Turner's small law firm in downtown Washington or from his suburban Washington home, went on with his campaign. He carried his arguments to the press, ran down case histories of side effects occurring during the mass vaccination program

IF YOU HAVE IRON POOR BLOOD ALL THE VITAMINS IN THE WORLD WON'T HELP

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

What you need is Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, just one tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills—and so important to you.

accelerated the growth of tumors in the test animals.

The alarming finding that live flu vaccine might be carcinogenic was acutely embarrassing to federal health experts, since the vaccine already had been tested on people, had won special Congressional support as a potential cure-all for flu and was indeed earmarked for inoculation might thus result in hypersensitivity and trigger neurologic illnesses ranging from persistent headaches to encephalitis to paralysis to Guillain-Barré and to death. And, he insisted, the swine flu vaccine produces a kind of antibody that doesn't protect. In other words, it doesn't work. This was just too much for the FDA, and

and continued to appear at NIH flu meetings to argue his case.

Morris seems once again to have been vindicated. He has always warned against crash vaccination programs before adequate research had been carried out. The fate of the government's war on swine flu appears to have confirmed his misgivings. He has become the central spokesman against flu vaccines.

But his fight remains a lonely one. Once again he is unemployed, seeking redress through endless Civil Service Commission procedures. Turner wages the legal battle gratis. "Without Jim," Morris says, "they would have wiped me out." Morris, who takes no unemployment insurance, lives off his dwindling savings, refusing to accept lecture fees on the grounds they might be compromising.

After nearly 20 years of struggle within the federal government, Morris fights on. "It's a medical rip-off," he says of the flu vaccine program. "We should recognize that we don't know enough about the dangers associated with flu vaccine. I believe the public should have truthful information on the basis of which they can determine whether or not to take the vaccine." And he adds, "I believe that, given full information, they won't take the vaccine."

Morris insists on the public's right to know. "Given full information," he maintains, "they won't take the vaccine."

and continued to appear at NIH flu meetings to argue his case.

Morris seems once again to have been vindicated. He has always warned against crash vaccination programs before adequate research had been carried out. The fate of the government's war on swine flu appears to have confirmed his misgivings. He has become the central spokesman against flu vaccines.

But his fight remains a lonely one. Once again he is unemployed, seeking redress through endless Civil Service Commission procedures. Turner wages the legal battle gratis. "Without Jim," Morris says, "they would have wiped me out." Morris, who takes no unemployment insurance, lives off his dwindling savings, refusing to accept lecture fees on the grounds they might be compromising.

After nearly 20 years of struggle within the federal government, Morris fights on. "It's a medical rip-off," he says of the flu vaccine program. "We should recognize that we don't know enough about the dangers associated with flu vaccine. I believe the public should have truthful information on the basis of which they can determine whether or not to take the vaccine." And he adds, "I believe that, given full information, they won't take the vaccine."

BRITISH PUNK ROCK GROUP, THE SEX PISTOLS

Punk Rock

A new wave of violent rock music, called "punk rock," is sweeping England and is starting here. It symbolizes the grievances of a new generation of undisciplined, teenaged rebels who've been reared in poverty.

Punk rock's message is simple: "Don't let people step on you—and if they do, fight back."

Punk rock music consists of fast, loud, short, intensely emotional songs. It totally rejects the romantic escapism which typified much music of the 1960's. Peace and love have been replaced by war and hate. Such groups as The Sex Pistols sing anti-love, cynical songs about suburbia.

"If it offends you, stop it," says Johnny Rotten, lead singer of The Sex Pistols. "If you don't protest the present value system and the high cost of nightclubs," he recently told a British rock magazine, "you end up with a mortgage, watching TV with 2.4 kids out in suburbia—and that's just disgusting. All those hippies are becoming like that. The only difference between them and those they were reacting against is that they've got long hair and bowler hats. Everyone is so fed up with the old way."

Punk rock fans and artists wear clothes from the Salvation Army and secondhand stores. Anything old which can be pinned, tied or stapled to their clothes—like labels or bus tickets—is considered proper attire.

The new dance of the punk rock movement is "Pogoing."

If rock 'n' roll history can be of any solace to worried parents, the punk rock movement probably won't last long. It's difficult for a rock star to pose as a rebel while earning $100,000 a year.

THE TALL SHIPS®

The Official Commemorative Print of the Historic 1976 Gathering of Tall Ships

Two years in the painting and meticulously accurate in nautical detail, this high fidelity lithograph will delight all those who admire fine art. Painted by the renowned marine artist, Kipp Soldwedel (Tall Ships Artist of Record), this official commemorative print is reproduced in magnificent color, 21 x 28 inches.

Depicted here in misty nautical splendor are the Blue Nose (Canada), Danmark (Denmark), Segres (Portugal), Christian Radich (Norway) and the Gorch Foch II (Germany), winner of the International Trans Atlantic race.

Good art that is bound to accrue in value, handsome decoration for office or home, nostalgic memorabilia for sea lovers and sailors alike.

"Received your very lovely lithograph and it now has a place of predominance in my office. This is truly a magnificent work and is a conversation piece for all who come into my office."

Gerald E. Bauer, Dallas, Tx.

"I have just received a print of the 'Tall Ships' by Kipp Soldwedel from my niece. It is truly a lovely work of art. It is in my foyer and has added much charm to that area. I am sure that other people will enjoy these beautiful ships in their homes."

Mrs. M. B. Flournoy, New York, N.Y.

"Those who thrilled at the sight of the soaring masts and graceful hulls in July will recapture that thrill when they see the clean lines of Kipp Soldwedel's paintings. His works...carry the fresh, salty tang of ocean air wherever they go."

Feminine Itching

"I had it for days...got relief in minutes."

"I really suffered with feminine itching," says Mrs. N.L. of Lexington, Ky. "It seemed like I tried everything. Then I discovered Vagisil." It worked the minute I used it."

If you suffer from feminine itching, Vagisil™ Creme Medication may be just what you need. It's specifically formulated to bring fast, temporary relief and is available without a prescription.

Doctor-tested Vagisil helps stop external feminine itching almost instantly. Leaves a cooling, protective film to help check bacteria, soothe irritated membranes, speed natural healing.

Vagisil Creme Medication is delicately scented and greaseless. It's sold in all feminine hygiene sections. Vagisil Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due To Inflammation. Relieves Pain & Itch...

Gives prompt temporary relief in many cases from hemorrhoidal pain and burning itch in such tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H®—the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make regularity more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

my FAVORITE jokes

by VICTOR BORGE

EDITOR'S NOTE: Asked how long he ran on Broadway when he set a performance record for one-man shows, Danish-born Victor Borge said: "I didn't run at all. In 1953 you could walk through slowly." Since then his "Comedy in Music" show has continued to delight audiences throughout the world. Borge, however, is still likely to quip to his audience: "Are you giving me a standing ovation or are you just anxious to leave?"

And when the pianist and conductor (he's conducted, among others, the Philadelphia, Detroit, Cincinnati and Cleveland symphonies) is onstage, the comedian is, too. Who else would have a concert program that reads: "Act I—in order of appearance—Piano, Mike, Mr. Borge, Latecomers, Piano, Curtain (if available). Act II—Piano, Mike, Mr. Borge, Entire Cast, Curtain (if available), Scrambling for Exits."?

His book "My Favorite Intermissions," written with Robert Sherman, which humorously recounts true incidents from the lives of the great composers, is in its seventh printing.

Here, then, is Victor Borge:

I just noticed something unusual about my walking: I usually walk in single file.

I recently visited at a home that had a sunken living room, a sunken dining room, sunken bedrooms—in fact, it had everything but the kitchen sunk!

My great-grandfather was a brilliant man. In fact, it was he who invented the burglar alarm. Unfortunately, it was stolen from him.

In my youth I wanted to be a great pantomimist—but I found I had nothing to say.

At school I majored in music and chemistry. Now, at parties where there is no piano, I do chemistry for the people.

When I came to the U.S. in 1941 I didn't know a word of English, but after three Berlitz lessons, my teacher spoke perfect Danish.

If there is a life after death, what I'd most like to see again are my old dogs—to find out if they are housebroken yet.

When the piano was invented, there was just one key. It was rather monotonous, but it made the recital a lot easier to learn. A few people made do by having 88 pianos—44 with a white key and 44 with a black.

I remember when people used to step outside a moment for a breath of fresh air. Now sometimes you have to step outside for days to get it.

My concerts are all "Y" rated. Everyone asks, "Why doesn't he play the song all the way through?"

People keep asking me what my father did. The answer is simple: He died.

I have a good way of keeping in shape. I sit down a lot.

Modern music hasn't been around too long—and hopefully won't be.

I can finally reveal what Scotsmen wear under their kilts: shoes.

I graduated from the Juilliard School of Music—in cooking.

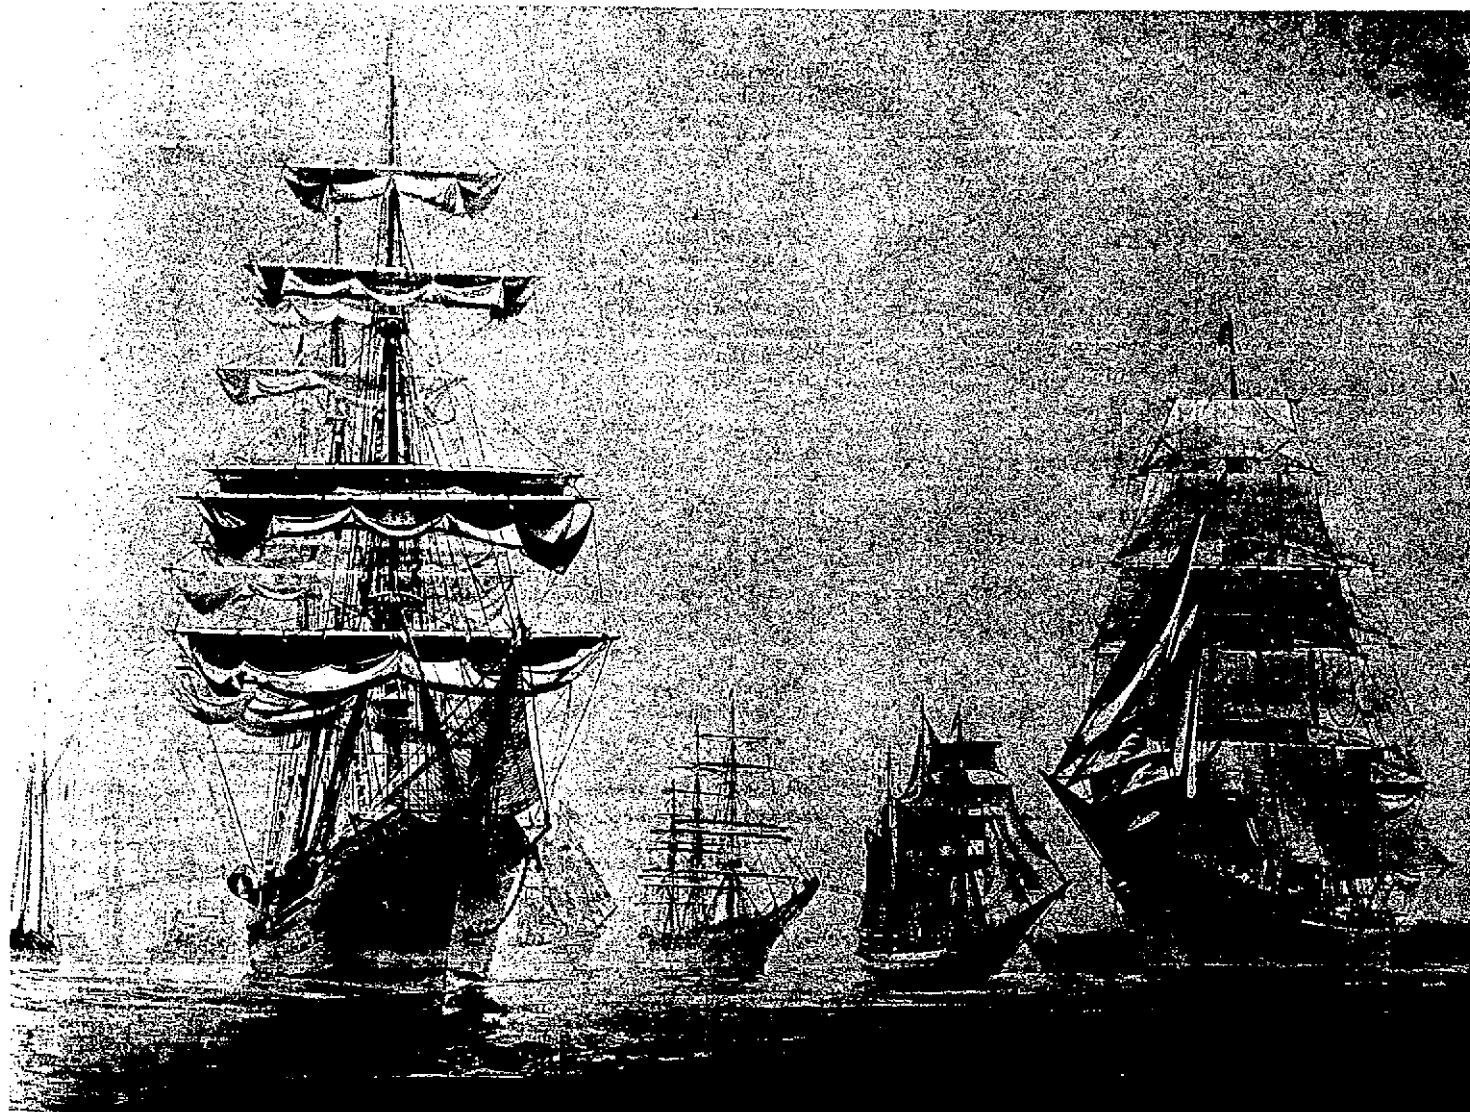

I can't understand it. I've been using the pedals on pianos for years, and not one of those pianos has ever moved an inch.

I have two-and-a-half brothers. Three half brothers and one regular brother.

8-TRACK TAPES or RECORDS or CASSETTES

Enjoy Today's Top Hits and Stars at Top Savings!

Start Saving Now! Take any six 8-Track Tapes or Records or Cassettes for 5¢ with trial membership. (Sorry, no mixing.) Indicate your choices on the coupon, enclose one nickel and mail it today.

Colorful Magazine! Free Choice! Every four weeks illustrated MIDLEY brings news of over 400 selections and features a "Selection of the Month" in your favorite music category. And, five times a year, you receive a sale issue featuring a "Bonus Selection" and a selection of great savings. In all, you will have 18 purchase opportunities in the course of a year. No need to buy a selection every time. You merely agree to buy 4 more hits in the next three years at regular prices—usually $6.98 for records, $7.98 for tapes. Choose from top labels like RCA, Capitol, Warner Bros., Reprise, A&M, Atlantic, ABC, Mercury, Elektra, Arista, Asylum, Dot, London, Bearsville, Sun, Capricorn, Impulse, Midland International... over 80 more!

Automatic Shipment! To get the regular "Selection of the Month" or the special sale "Bonus Selection," do nothing. It will be sent automatically. If you want other selections, or none, advise us on the card always provided and return it by the date specified. You always have at least 10 days to decide. But if you ever have less than 10 days to make your decision, you may return your automatic selection at our expense for full credit.

Cancel whenever you wish after completing your membership agreement by notifying us in writing. If you receive a message, choose 1 selection FREE for every 2 you buy at regular Music Service prices! (There is a postage and handling charge added to each shipment.)

Free 10-Day Trial! If not satisfied you may return your 6 hits after 10 days for a prompt refund. Mail the coupon today!

I WANT YOU TO COMPARE!

*An Invitation From Harry T. Dozor,
Chairman of the Board
Union Fidelity Life Insurance Company.*

When you buy insurance you want the greatest amount of protection for the lowest possible price. That's why this Union Fidelity message emphasizes the plain facts about our plans, inviting you to compare.

Others may use paid show-business personalities to attract your attention and interest you in what they offer. I choose to let our insurance professionals and real UFL policyholders do the talking for us. After 35 years in the insurance business, I know insurance value when I see it. That's why I urge you to compare the actual UFL Hospital Plan . . . and price against any other plan. To help you compare, we spell out the facts on the following pages. Be hard in your comparisons . . . we love it. Then, and only then, decide if UFL is best for you.

FROM THE VERY FIRST DAY YOUR UNION FIDELITY HOSPITAL PLAN WORKS FOR YOU!

*An Important Message from Harry T. Dozor, Chairman of the Board
Union Fidelity Life Insurance Co.*

When you're hospitalized for sickness or accident you are not a statistic . . . you are a person with problems. One problem is often money. The coverage you have may not pay all your bills. And with the President's Council reporting a 20% jump in hospital costs in the first 3 months of 1976 alone, your problems are getting worse mighty fast.

What can you do about it? The best answer is STAY WELL. The next best thing is have a good supplemental hospital plan should you or your family be hospitalized. That's what the Union Fidelity Hospital Plan is! It offers important benefits not found in other plans. Compare it with any other offer and see for yourself. And remember, your UFL benefits are paid regardless of any coverage you may have, even Medicare. Payments are made direct to you or anyone you choose to use as you see necessary.

When comparing plans, start with the important things first. Take first day coverage for example. Your Union Fidelity Hospital Plan starts paying the first day you are hospitalized, not the 4th or 5th day when you may have run through hundreds of dollars already. Folks over 65 receive full benefits, not a portion of what younger people get. See what the other plans do and say.

The reasons why I'm proud of our plan go on and on. We spell them out in this brochure. We ask you to decide how important they are to you, then urge you to carefully read any other plan and see if they match us. Can there possibly be a better way to decide wisely?

Sometimes small-looking rates can be confusing if you don't carefully examine what you get for what you pay. That's where a UFL Insurance Professional or a UFL Policyholder can be more helpful than a paid spokesman who is not an insurance specialist like we are. But the best judge still is you. You will be the one getting the bills. Check what our plan delivers and let your good judgement do the rest.

As an additional special feature, if you apply before March 28, 1977, we will give you a $5000.00 Accidental Dismemberment Benefit for one penny a month.

YOU ARE PROTECTED BY THESE BENEFITS

- Guaranteed acceptance.
- $50.00 a day, $1,500.00 a month from the first day of hospitalization.
- Pays you full benefits from the first day of hospitalization for both covered sickness and accident.
- Direct payments to you, or anyone you choose.
- Full benefits for folks over 65 — no reductions ever.
- Payments made regardless of any other plan, even Medicare.
- $200.00 a day, $6,000.00 a month, double benefits when you and insured spouse are confined at the same time because of a covered accident.
- Coverage for pregnancy . . . at no additional cost.
- Coverage for mental illness, work related injuries, Veterans Hospital.
- Easy to understand rates that have never been raised.
- A choice of four plans.
- Toll-free number to a trained insurance specialist.
- The confidence of being protected by an A.M. Best's rated company, managed by insurance experts.

Here's what Philip S. Kouri, Wichita Falls, Texas says . . .

"As a Personal Injury Attorney, I am aware of the fact that your company enjoys a splendid reputation throughout the entire nation, and I am proud to have been a policyholder with your company for many years."

UNION FIDELITY LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY HOSPITAL CONFINEMENT INDEMNITY COVERAGE OUTLINE OF COVERAGE

BENEFITS OF THIS POLICY

Hospital Benefits: Pays $50.00 a day from the first day of a covered hospital stay including V.A. and Government hospitals. No reduction because of age.

Double Benefits: Pays $200.00 a day from the first day when you and an insured spouse are hospitalized for a covered injury at the same time.

Increase in Maximum Benefits: Every month your policy is in-force, the company will add an amount equal to the monthly premium to your maximum policy benefits at no additional cost to you.

Mental Illness and Work Related Injury Benefits: Pays you $25.00 a day up to $700.00.

Maternity Benefits: Pays you $50.00 a day from the first day of confinement for childbirth when All-Family or Husband-Wife Plan is in force for the entire period of pregnancy.

Optional Plans: All plans pay you starting on the first day of hospitalization. $40.00 a day Plan benefits 80% of above; $30.00 a day Plan benefits 60% of above.

EXCEPTIONS, REDUCTIONS & LIMITATIONS OF THIS POLICY

This policy does not cover hospital confinement due to use of narcotics or alcohol unless advised by physician; pre-existing conditions (those medically advised or treated within 1 year before your policy effective date) are not covered during the first year; sickness beginning during first 30 policy days is not covered for one year; confinement in a rest, nursing or convalescent home, or extended care facility. Benefits are not provided for physicians' or surgeons' fees, or miscellaneous hospital services.

Maximum Benefits under the $50.00 a day plan are: Individual - $17,500.00; Husband-Wife - $26,250.00; Single Parent - $26,250.00; All-Family - $35,000.00. $40.00 a day and $30.00 a day plans reduce proportionately.

Renewability of this Policy: No Policy can be cancelled unless all policies (1-2490-CA) are cancelled in California or the maximum benefit paid.

Premiums for this Policy: Monthly renewal premiums are listed on page 5. Premiums can not change individually, only on a state-wide basis or when you reach 65.
